By Order of the Kaiser.

Guelph Herald.
—It was by Kaiser Wilhelm's personal command, issued Jan. 9, 1917, that the U-boat campaign of ruthlessness which brought the United States into the war was launched. The order bearing his signature was published for the first time in the New York World of Sunday last, together with a long memorandum prepared by Admiral von Holtzendorff, Chief of the German Admiralty Staff, in support of this desperate policy. The copy which was secured from the files of the German Foreign office reads: (Strictly Secret.)

General Headquarters,
Jan. 9, 1917.
I order the unrestricted submarine war to be started with full energy on Feb. 1. You must make all necessary preparations immediately in such a way that this purpose is not prematurely recognized by the enemy and the neutrals. The essential plans of operations are to be submitted to me. A copy of this is to be handed to the Imperial Chancellor.

Tale of King Pataud.

It was just thirteen years ago, namely, in the March of 1907 King Pataud made his first attempt. In his own estimation, and in that of his friends, he succeeded triumphantly. Six months later he tried again, and failed. But, first of all, who was King Pataud, and what did he do? King Pataud, before his coronation, was plain Emile Pataud, a citizen of Paris, by vocation an electrician, by avocation an author, and by persuasion a syndicalist. At that time, syndicalism was something of a novelty, even in France, for although the Confederation Generale du Travail, in its inception entirely a syndicalist body, had been founded several years, the "lightning strike" was still more or less an untried weapon. Now Emile Pataud was an enthusiast in his avocation, a whirlwind orator, a great man for a meeting, and a tremendous believer in Emile Pataud, than whom no Great Louis was ever more autocratic. The will of the electricians was to be supreme, but the will of the electricians was the will of Emile Pataud. And so one day in March, 1907, Pataud took a great decision. Once and for all, the Parisian should learn the power of the electrician, and incidentally of Emile Pataud. There would be a strike, the like of which for comparison had never been seen before. On the 8th of March, therefore, at 8 o'clock, just the hour when all Paris had settled down for the evening, every light in the city went out, and every electric motor came to a standstill. Theatres, cafes, hotels, houses, streets, all alike were plunged into darkness; whilst every electric tram or train and every electric lift stopped where it stood.

Paris rose to the occasion, of course, joyfully, indeed, rose to it. After the first few moments of utter perplexity, all manner of lights began to make their appearance. Such gas lamps as there were were quickly lighted. Long-disarded oil lamps were hastily requisitioned; whilst every grocer's shop did an entirely unprecedented trade in candles. Then, anything was good enough for a candlestick. There was no false pride in such a matter. Even the cafes of the "Rue Royale" favored the requisitioning of bottles, cruet, vases anything, in fact, that would support a candle when the supply of candlesticks had been exhausted, for twenty-four hours, Paris was without electric power of any kind, and at the end of that time, all the employers capitulated to Emile Pataud's terms. Pataud, in fact, had gained an unequivocal victory, and was promptly crowned, by his loyal followers, King Pataud.

It was a name, somehow, that seemed just to fit the man and the occasion. All Paris looked about it. Cartoonsists loved to portray King Pataud as a "thundering Jove," holding in one hand a glowing candle, snuffer, ready at a moment's notice to plunge not only Paris, but all the world, in darkness. King Pataud, however, took it all very seriously. He had been victorious again. Paris had only, as yet, seen the beginning of things. The electricians, having acquired their niches, would proceed to take their oil, and if anyone felt disposed to stop them, let him remember the 8th of March. So matters labored on until the following August, and then, things not going as he felt they ought to go, King Pataud determined to teach Paris another lesson. Profoundly August evening, the electric current was cut off, and Paris was, once more, in darkness. But the rest of the story was very different from what it had been six months earlier. Paris was prepared. Bourgeois were to be had to an unlimited extent; whilst all the other substitutes were much more readily at hand than before. Paris, moreover, was prepared in another and much more decisive fashion. Hardly had the lights gone out when from various barracks within the fortis of the city there began to emerge corps of military electricians. Within two hours, the electric plants in Paris were manned; the lights went up, and King Pataud's second attempt had failed.—Christian Science Monitor.

Japan Reduces Naval Programme

(Dom. Press Special.)
TOKYO, May 25.—The cabinet today voted to reduce the Japanese Naval budget from $33,000,000 to $22,000,000. It was officially reported. The original program, after extension, will not be interfered with authorities said.

Poles Claim Great Sues

(Dom. Press Special.)
LONDON, May 25.—A Polish authoritative source today denied the report that the Bolsheviks have entered Kieff. An official statement issued in Warsaw Sunday said:—"In Ukraine sector, our operations have been very satisfactory. Our troops are advancing. The Bolsheviks continue to launch violent attacks against our lines in Berezina and Dwina sectors. In one sector alone there are ten divisions attacking our forces. Our counter attacks are developing with great success, and all Bolshevik attacks so far have been repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy." The division in Russian "Red" army consists of about 6,000 men. This would mean that the Bolsheviks have concentrated a force of 60,000 on the Dwina sector.

500 CARLOADS OF FOOD RECEIVED

(Dom. Press Special.)
NEW YORK, May 25.—Record breaking receipts of fruits and vegetables in New York broke whole sale prices today, and in some places, the retail prices immediately dropped. The influx of foods at this time is largely due to easing of freight congestion, many carloads being released that have been on the way for sometime. There has been great wastage because of perishables that could not be saved in transit. Eighty carloads of cucumbers, fifty carloads of onions, thirty nine carloads of cabbage, 125 carloads potatoes, 16 carloads string beans, eleven carloads peas, eleven carloads ripe tomatoes, ninety eight carloads oranges, twenty nine of grape fruit, 13 of strawberries, and altogether more than 500 carloads of vegetables and fruits came in from the south and from California yesterday.

Here Comes Daddy.

"HERE comes Daddy! Do you 'member?—He promised to bring Maple Buds!"

A stampee of little feet—an uproar of "Daddy, Daddy" in shrill, childish voices, as they leap down the steps to meet him; a clutching of his coat tails by eager little hands, and at last—Daddy, tired, but very happy, is in his big chair, with the youngsters climbing over him.

Children must have candy. Nature demands it. Then safeguard their health by getting the best and purest—Cowan's Maple Buds.

But remember—there is only one kind of Maple Buds, and that is Cowan's. Unless the name "Cowan's" is stamped on the back, they are not Maple Buds.
