Mr Horne's Attitude.

Sir,—I was sorry to read in Saturday's Patriot the letter signed "Anti-Hypocrite" imputing motives to Councillor Horne that I am sure are unjust. I appeal to his record as a temperance man by the votes he has ever given in the interest of temperance in the City Council.

There are some good temperance workers besides Mr. Horne who believe that we will never succeed while the Marshall and his assistants are under the control of the present Police Committee, and that we must have constables appointed by the Government.

To me the duty of every temperance man is plain. The Premier and Atty. General have chosen their own means of enforcing the Prohibitory Law, and if the police had refused to do their duty they would have found some way of compelling them. We should loyally support them in the noble stand they have taken in this matter. I am sorry Mr. Horne did not take this view of it. But having differed with us do not for that condemn a man who has stood more continuously for our cause than any other man in Charlottetown.

LIFE ON A RANCH

A Former Islander Describes the

DUTIES OF A RANCHER

Prince Edward Island is Superior to the West.

Many of our readers will we believe read the subjoined letter with much pleasure. It will be remembered how, in November last, the writer, M. D. Ready, Irishtown, familiarly known as "Dug," was threatened with lung trouble, the result of several relapses of "la grippe," and how in company with his wife and baby Milliecent, he went to Wyoming, U. S. A., to seek recuperation in the bracing air among the mountains. He improved rapidly when, winter setting in somewhat severe, he was again attacked with "la grippe," which threatened to complete in a distant land what he had so well begun here. But he rallied and was again doing well, when he was stricken with rheumatism which seemed destined to finish what grip had not accomplished. However, he survived two very severe shocks, and after about two months regained his former status. He is now situated on a ranch 40 miles north of Rawlins, Wyoming, and has every confidence of being fully restored to health. He was one of our most industrious, prosperous and up-to-date farmers, and his many friends will be glad to see him return in his former good health.

(Letter)
MAHONEY'S RANCH
North of Rawlins, Wyo.,
June 4, 1901.

J. A. READY,
Kensington.

DEAR BROTHER,—I promised you that, as soon as my arm would be sufficiently recovered from rheumatism, I would write you at length on our trip out to the ranch, what ranch life is like here, and how my health has improved since leaving Rawlins.

The ranch on which we are now located is situated 40 miles north of Rawlins, at the foot of Ferris Mt., the highest mountain I have seen in Wyoming. This mountain is thickly covered with a heavy growth of pine, and it is a beautiful sight in the evening to see the sun shining on the snow-covered peaks forming a beautiful contrast with the shadows of the pines as they stand out in bold relief against the clear blue sky. The trip out was made by wagon over a road that was not the smoothest. We saw some large bands of sheep, some containing from 2,500 to 3,000. One man and three dogs are sufficient to look after this number. Each herder has a large wagon with a canvas top, about 6ft wide and ten feet long. It is comfortably and conveniently fitted up, with a bed, stove, cooking utensils. They live on the best, and are as snug at night as if they were in a house. The herders have constantly to be on their guard against wolves and coyotes, which give lots of trouble. They are very bold and will steal on a flock and carry off a lamb before an effort can be made to save it. A herder on one of the ranches took sick last winter and in three days the wolves and coyotes destroyed 100 sheep. Herding is very healthy work, but very lonesome. You may be for weeks without seeing anyone and hear nothing but the everlasting bleat of the sheep. They tell me there is a larger percentage of insanity among sheep herders than among any other class.

Mr. Mahoney, the owner of this ranch, has 10,000 sheep, 1,000 cattle, and 120 horses. He has some very fine Percheron horses weighing over 1800 lbs. None of his stock was housed last winter and they are all in excellent condition. They say it has been the finest winter for stock in the history of Wyoming. They grow considerable alfalfa here for winter feed. It is stacked out, and once a day some is hauled and spread on the ground for the stock. Farming begins about April 15. Ploughing is very hard work. The sage brush which grows on all the land, interferes much with the plough. Four horses are used, and often they get stuck solid, making it hard for man and plough.

Mr. Mahoney has a sheep boss whose duty is to ride back and forth among the different bands of sheep, to see that everything is all right, to select grazing places for the sheep, and to move, when necessary, the herder's "camp."

My health has improved considerably of late, and I am now able to do a few chores. My cough is much better and I eat and sleep well. So long as I shall continue to improve I shall remain here, until all danger of the disease returning has passed.

Of all places I have seen since leaving home, none has, or ever can, alternate my affectionate for Prince Edward Island. It is a pity that those who are dissatisfied with the life of ease and security which

The address was signed by about 40 of our prominent citizens.

ANOTHER pall of gloom has fallen over Tignish in the death of James Joseph Wickham, Esq., late Supt. of Education at St. John's, Newfoundland, which took place yesterday morning. Two years ago Mr. Wickham's failing health necessitated his spending the winter in the Adirondacks. He has resided in Tignish where he had the constant and devoted attention of his brother Dr. Wickham. The deceased was educated at St. Dunstan's and Prince of Wales Colleges here, and at the Propaganda, Rome. He was a brilliant scholar and a man of more than ordinary ability which was recognised in commercial circles as well as in his profession. Mr. Wickham has left behind him the fragrance of a virtuous, manly and kindly life. His bereaved widow and two young sons and his other relatives have our heartfelt sympathy.
