The Night of the Wedding

By C. N. and A.M. WILLIAMSON

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor" and other fascinating romances of mystery and love

Copyright 1924, by Public Ledger Company

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

EVELYN HASTE, beautiful and rich girl, who sits down at the piano on her wedding night—and mysteriously disappears.

KENNEDY HASTE, her husband who suspects complicity on the part of his old war comrade.

SIR RAWDON WELLS, an amateur scientist, who has insisted on lending the couple Hidden Hall Court, his gloomy and mystery-ridden estate, for their honeymoon, and who is found after the disappearance in a secret chamber.

PANDORA, a gipsy-like girl, adopted sister of Kennedy and secretly in love with Wells.

MISS GILLETT, an ex-war nurse, who fell in love with Haste in a hospital, and who is an intense person.

DAGON, youthful Scotland Yard detective, who has done glorified "spy work" in the war. He is of vivid Latin temperament, though Canadian in training.

"Paolo Magnani—my cousin—my friend!" broke out Wells, staring at the man who lay bound upon the floor. This Italian had ceased to struggle. He was in hideous pain.

"Et tu, Brute, and all the rest of it!" said Dagon, giving back glare for glare to the black eyes cursing him from the floor. "Listen, Sir Rawdon, did you ever promise to leave money or anything to your dear cousin?"

"He knew I meant to leave him everything I have, if I should die unmarried," Wells answered bitterly. "Even this house, which I could do, as I'm the last of the line. H——in a way I felt I owed it to him. You see, his mother and mine were sisters. His was a singer. My father met her in Naples and fell in love—or thought so. They were going to be married. Her twin sister, Francesca, came home from a tour in the provinces —she was an actress—for the wedding. It was a lightning stroke for my father and her. They felt they'd been born for each other. They went off together. If Francesca hadn't come then, everything would have been different. All that I have would have been Paolo's. As it was, his mother married a baritone in her own company. Her husband drank. They were always poor. Paolo had to get on as best he could. But he was a genius. If he hadn't lost his voice—or injured it—he'd have been a great singer. As it is, he's been great in his line. I thought he cared for me as much as I cared for him I trusted him completely. I——"

"Yes, and you kept silence for him when by speaking you might have saved yourself from the vilest suspicion—suspicion he plotted to throw on you!" cut in Dagon. "The whole thing was a plot from beginning to end; his asking you to come here the night of the wedding—and the rest."

"How do you know about that? What do you know?" Wells questioned sharply.

"I've put two and two together, and found they made four—that's all," said the detective. "I don't know anything much, if it comes to that. But wait till I show you something, and perhaps when you've seen it you won't refuse any longer to tell why you came that night, and what you really burned in that leather bag. You should tell to clear yourself with Captain Haste, if for nobody else —now."

"What will you show me?" Rawdon wanted to know, for Dagon was on his knees by the prostrate man, unfastening at the neck the smart pajama jacket Magnani wore under his common brown dressing-gown.

"Well, those blood stains that told so badly against you—or would have, if it hadn't been for Miss Haste—always puzzled me. There was so little blood, you see. It had been so beautifully stage-managed, so to speak; a neat mark to fit your foot, Sir Rawdon—a boot from the pair that was burned; and nice little patterns for fingers and thumb. It wouldn't have been worth while if the fingerprints hadn't been made from yours. Of course they were. Things like that are easy to get, with a bit of work. You can see how it's done in many detective novels, some of which I dare say my gentleman has read. Miss Haste spoiled the game, so far as the fingerprints were concerned. But why was there so little blood? I asked myself. The answer seemed to be that there wasn't much to spare. I know if I could find a member of the household that night who had a small wound, probably on the left arm, I should have the guilty man—or woman. But finding wasn't easy then. Now—look there!" His voice rose as he tore the silk jacket down and bared Magnani's left arm just below the shoulder. "That's what I wanted. It isn't much. But it's enough. Oh, he was clever—deadly clever. Look at the way he prepared his alibi. Got Davis—mercenary old wretch—in his pay; took on this job as butler, to be on the spot, while he gave out to every one that he was at Skye. At Skye, taking a picture! And his company was there—is there ill in a house outside Portree. Just how he managed a lot of other things he did manage, I don't see clearly yet, except that he had accomplices. I suspect them to be Mrs. Gillett and her daughter, and my notion is, there was some secret of the past that gave him the upper hand over the old lady. As for the girl, she'd be ready to work for him because she could further her own ends at the same time. But if you'd out with the truth about your visit here the night of the wedding, Sir Rawdon, I'd have things pretty clear.

"I owe Magnani no loyalty now," Rawdon said, "and I'll tell you why I came. He'd stayed here sometimes. He liked the place, and when I was away I often lent it to him.

He came to me in a state of desperation—so I thought—because he was in danger of compromising a married woman. He confessed—I believe it was a confession that she—I won't mention her name—had been here with him. There were letters of hers, and a frock, and a pair of slippers, in a monogrammed leather bag he'd forgotten to take away. The dress and slippers she'd given him as a souvenir at the dance when they'd first met. The husband—Paolo said—had gone into the affair—guessed she'd been here, and was sending a detective to look for evidence. If those things were found, the woman was lost. But Paolo couldn't come. He was bound to start with the company for Skye or there'd be suspicion. He'd had warning too late. Would I motor down to the Court, he asked, burn all the things in the furnace and go on later to Liverpool? I suggested taking the bag with me, instead of burning it, and throwing the things overboard some night at sea. But Paolo wouldn't hear of that. I might be followed. In the end I agreed to do as he asked. And it went without saying that when I was questioned, I wouldn't try to save myself by betraying him and a woman."

LETTER OF SYMPATHY

Mr. Ira M. Brown, F. S., Boyne L. O. L. No.614, Charlottetown, P. E. I.

Dear Brother:—At a regular meeting of Boyne L. O. L. No. 614 on the 19th instant, we were instructed to convey to you the sincere sympathy of the brothren in the death of your dear mother.

Any form of expression on our part must necessarily fall short of the real consolation which cometh only from Him who said: "My grace is sufficient for you."

Perhaps no word in our language sounds quite as sweet as that of Mother, and when she who wears it is taken from us, we keenly realize that God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform: That nothing can take her place but the rich memory of the love and devotion which she showered upon us, and which was always so unselfishly given. These blessed memories remain with you to comfort and console, and, with work completed, cares ended your faith tells you that she whom you delighted to call Mother has obeyed the summons—Come ye blessed of the Lord.

Fraternally and sincerely,

R. McKINNON, W. M.
G. A. WATKINS, Rec. Sec.

Pains Stopped for millions in this way

Remember this when you feel a pain. Millions have learned how to stop it at once. For 65 years they have done so by rubbing with St. Jacobs Oil. All the pains allied with rheumatism, with soreness, backache or lameness. And chest colds are checked at the start. Just rub the sore spot with St. Jacobs Oil. It causes counter irritation. Or it relieves the congestion by bringing the blood to the surface. Then the pain is ended, and you can wait in comfort while Nature cures.

Now there are several ways offer to do this. But remember that St. Jacobs Oil has for 65 years stood the test. It has proved itself to millions. Nobody has ever found anything better, and nobody ever will.

Don't wait until the pain starts. Keep St. Jacobs Oil on hand. It may save nights of suffering. Rub the sore spot as soon as a pain appears, or a chest cold. Get relief at once. Think what protection this means to you, and the cost is only 35 cents.

Little Snow-White

A STRANGE COTTAGE

This is one day's chapter of the famous story of "Snow-White." Today you will read about her adventure in the forest. Children who follow this story every day will have a whole set of "Snow-White" paper dolls.

* * *

Snow-White looked about the little house into which she had run for shelter from the dark forest. Everything seemed very small, but quite neat and dainty. In the middle stood a little table with a white cover over it, and seven little plates and seven little mugs upon it. Against the wall were seven little beds ranged in a row.

Suddenly she heard steps outside and through the window she caught a glimpse of some one coming. At once she trembled with fright, and ran to hide behind a closet door.

(Here's the strange looking dwarf Snow-White glimpsed through the window. Color his suit and cap brown and his little jacket bright green, with a red and green scarf and black beard. What will become of little Snow-White? You'll find out tomorrow).

Healthy Children

WHAT a joy there is in the laughter of children. How quickly that laughter dies when constipation—that great enemy of healthy bodies—coats the tongue and dulls the appetite of your boy or girl.

Mothers often fail to recognize in the bad breath, the coated tongue and fretfulness, the danger of disease that lurks like a shadow ready to throw its black mantle over the loved one.

DR. CALDWELL'S LAXATIVE SYRUP PEPSIN relieves the cause—constipation—and should be in every home. You will be astonished how quickly this great family remedy will put laughter back in the eyes of your child.

It is a safe, mild laxative especially suitable for children, pleasant to take, with no cramping after effects. It contains no narcotics or mercurials.

AN INSTITUTE RESOLUTION

But try—the trying shall suffice; the aim if reached or not, makes great the life.

REPORT OF THE PROVINCIAL CONVENOR OF NATIONAL EVENTS

As a brief explanation I would say that this work has to do with such events as the observance of our National Holidays,—preserving of places of historical interest, history of the Flag, singing of Patriotic Songs, etc., and especially the teaching of these things in the schools.

Women's Institutes throughout our Province are doing much to promote such teaching in the following ways:

Cardigan W. I. presented the school with a new Canadian Ensign, and erected a flag-pole.

Stanchel erected a flag-pole for the school, bought a flag and were asking the teacher to instruct the pupils concerning the flag, its origin, the correct way to fly it, etc. This Institute also sings patriotic songs at the regular meetings.

The I. O. D. E. of Summerside presented the Sherbrooke Institute with two beautiful patriotic pictures which they had framed in oak for their school. This Institue had already presented their school with framed pictures of the Prince of Wales and the Canadian Coat of Arms besides erecting a flag-pole and buying a flag.

South Bedeque has had a picture of the Prince of Wales framed for Fernwood School. This school already had a flag so some of the men of the district erected a pole, the W. I. paying for paint, cords, etc.

Traveller's Rest is planting poppies in the plot surrounding the Community Memorial. The plot is cared for by the Women's Institute.

Victoria Institue had a Memorial Tablet placed on the Hall.

Fredericton Institute has bought a flag and flag pole for the school, and a flag to place over the Memorial Tablet.

St. Peter's South, Freeland, Lot 11 and Central Bedeque have also purchased flags and flag-poles for their schools.

Murray Harbour has held Patriotic Sing-songs at some of their meetings.

War Maps have been supplied by the Institutes to many of the schools.

Many teachers, we find, are already giving patriotic instruction and teaching the singing of patriotic songs.

Our objective is to have every teacher in thhe Province engaged in such work.

MRS. J. H. MacFARLANE,
South Bedeque
Provincial Convenor of National Events.

The above report is to be submitted to Mrs. J. L. LeBaron, Dominion Convenor, by March 31st. If any Institutes carrying on similar work have not been reported, they should send any information to Mrs. MacFarlane before that date.

Our hearts where we rock our cradles
Our love where we spend our toil
And our faith and our hope and our honor
We plede to our native soil.

Kipling—

FEDERATION

The Annual Meeting of the Board of the F.W.I.C. was held in Toronto, Aug. 26th-28th, ult., on the occasion of the Provinces meeting for exhibition purposes at the Canadian National Exhibition.

A large amount of business was transacted most satisfactorily and plans were made for the next biennial Convention which is to be held in British Columbia in Sept., 1925.

Institute members will be interested to learn that the Institute work is growing steadily throughout the world.

Recently the Australian Government has sent a representative to Canada to gather full information about the Institute work with a view to starting the Institute there. They have asked for a Canadian representative to be sent to Australia to assist in organizing this work.

More and more it is being realized that the W. I. with its direct contact with the home, must inevitably have a great responsibility in national life.

ANNUAL MEETINGS

Throughout the coming month we will be holding our Annual meetings, when we review the work of the Institute year and elect officers for the next twelve months.

As each Institute reviews the work undertaken in the past year it should be able to show something accomplished for the betterment of "Home and Country." The aims and objects of each club should be of the highest—every member should realize that "He who aims only at the lowest is sure never to attain to the highest, but is not unlikely to miss even the lowest." For the new Institute year let each of us resolve to make further progress than in the past—to overcome the failures, to make greater the successes.

The members should not feel that the officers, especially the President, should carry the whole responsibilities, for no Club can be a success unless each member is willing to bear her share. Only through co-operation can an Institute attain its highest ideals.

RECIPE FOR SUCCESS

(Selected)

First find out what you really want to do. Liking your work is half the secret of success. Make up your mind to do it well.

Concentrate on your work.

Treat those with whom you come in contact as you would b etreated.

Behonest and square in your dealings with everyone.

Believe in yourself.

Add to these qualifications a fair amount of intelligence and an average education, and I believe a woman can accomplish anything she sets out to do.

NOTICE

Applications will be received by the undersigned for the position of City Marshal of Charlottetown, to March 31st., 1925.

Applicants to give age and qualifications.
