New Preparation Prolongs Tire Life

It's an ill wind, so they say, that blows nobody good. While the Eastern seaboard has been so drastically rationed in its gas allowance that it hurts, there is a ray of sunshine for the tire-worried motorists. On sale today, throughout the Maritime Provinces, is a new, scientifically prepared product that guarantees to prolong the life of tires and to prevent deterioration. Its name is RUBBER-LIFE, a liquid for application to the tread of tires to make them more resistant to abrasion. RUBBER-LIFE is produced without the use of essential or restricted war materials and on test by the United States Testing Company, Inc., has demonstrated that it not only increases the life of tires but does not in any way effect their elasticity or resiliency. According to Mr. Louis A. Sendel, head of the chief distributing organization for Canada and Newfoundland, RUBBER-LIFE was invented by a European chemist and has, since 1928, been used extensively by European motorists, fleet operators and bus companies. The preparation was brought to the United States by its inventor who was forced to flee his country after the outbreak of war and was first introduced to the American public on America's entry into the fight.

Generally, RUBBER-LIFE should be applied to a tire after each five hundred miles of wear and allowed to dry for at least an hour. Mr. Sendel states that independent laboratory tests have shown that samples treated with RUBBER-LIFE were from 21 to 24 per cent. more resistant to abrasive action than untreated samples. Its principle quality, it has been demonstrated, is that the liquid penetrates the pores of the rubber and forms a new solid mass of the millions of rubber particles on the surface of used tires without affecting the other natural qualities of the rubber.

HEALTH

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

A warning against too much sun bathing is given by Dr. Norman Wrong, in an article in HEALTH MAGAZINE, organ of the Health League of Canada. Dr. Wrong, demonstrator in dermatology, University of Toronto, discusses facts and fallacies about the skin.

The chief function of the skin is to protect and cover, but "Equally important, however, are its functions of heat regulation, of elimination of sweat and of acquainting us with our surroundings through its sensory nerves," he declares.

"The skin is admirably suited to resist harmful physical agents, such as heat, cold, drying, wetting abrasives and minor violence." Dr. Wrong points out, "If this were not so, humans could not live in the tropics, the arctic, on the desert and in the water. Fats and oils can be applied to the skin and will lubricate and soften, but are not absorbed. The skin can not be nourished or "fed" by rubbing in a cream any more than a piece of leather can be "fed" by oiling it. Vitamins added to skin creams are practically useless in their effect."

Our skin resists chemicals extremely well, according to Dr. Wrong, with the exception of such rare chemicals as mustard gas. It also resists remarkably well the invasion of most bacteria encountered. Pimples and boils are purely local skin infections, he declares.

It is dangerous to have too much sun, although "our skin offers fair protection against the ultraviolet rays of the sun.

Tanning is an effort on the part of our skin to protect us further, and, of course, the negro has the most protection of all against the sun's rays. Sun bathing, in moderation, is very healthful and undoubtedly increases our resistance to infection, and is a sure prevention of rickets. However, the vogue for sun-bathing is undoubtedly as harmful as moderate sun-bathing is healthful. Severe sunburn can make a person as ill as a heat burn, and sunstroke is not uncommon here."

"In Australia," Dr. Wrong states, "where sun bathing is almost a religion, the amount of skin cancer is greater than anywhere else in the world." He concludes: "Fair people must use discretion and moderation in their sun-bathing."

A HOME ON THE RANGE

By Bentley Ridge

The sun shone, the broom still flourished by the roadside, the day was bright with a kind of cruel mockery.

At every turn of the road she hoped to see someone coming. But in all the vast country there was not a sign of life, except for a few sheep grazing on the rugged hillsides.

At the river she looked over at a like loneliness on the other side. The waters flowed past the wrecked bridge "Petersdown" was hidden by the fold of the hills at the back. She looked away towards distant "Black Hill," where the plantation in which the house stood was visible on the cliff top. She fancied she saw a drift of smoke over it.

Was someone at "Black Hill?"

She thought of Tellforth instantly. But if he were alive he would have gone looking for Evelyn at "Petersdown." He would have found the note she had left.

When she looked again the drift of smoke seemed to be gone. She stared. She could not see it.

She almost cried in loneliness and despair.

She wanted to cross the river and find out what had happened. But supposing she were drowned in trying to swim across? The only hope for Mrs. Henty and the baby lay in her looking after them. She dared not risk it. Myrle set her teeth, and turned back.

She talked to Mrs. Henty when she got back about her relatives in Waihi.

"Did they know you'd be up here alone?" asked Myrle.

"No. There's only my mother and sister there, anyway. Mother's got a bad heart; this'll have upset her pretty bad. Jack would have gone straight through Waihi yesterday without stopping—he was in a hurry to get back. Oh, dear, I wish I knew what's happened."

"So there was no one except myself and Jack who knew you were alone up here?"

"Not that I know of," said Mrs. Henty.

"What a good thing it was you sent us that fruit. If you hadn't I wouldn't have known it, either," said Myrle.

The conversation reassured her a little. Jack Henty might have been killed or injured in the town. In the chaos of everything after the quake, it might be that no one locally would think of going out to see how the Hentys were.

An idea occurred to her, and she set off for the river again an hour later, carrying a bright red jersey belonging to Mrs. Henty. She tied it on to a stout stick and planted it like a flag on a high point of the cliff above the bridge. Someone on the other side might see it, perhaps, and come over to investigate.

She got back when the sun was sinking. Another night of loneliness and sinister tremors was to be endured. Her anxiety had become an appalling conviction of total disaster, which she could not shake off.

"Isn't anyone ever coming?" said Evelyn, tremulously.

"Soon!—soon! Don't be impatient! Let's have some nice hot cocoa for tea," said Myrle encouragingly. "I found a tin on the floor in the kitchen."

They put the cocoa over the fire to boil, but they never drank it. A sudden trembling came, and the ground rose under them with a lurch and a roar. Myrle started up to run to Mrs. Henty in the tent, took two steps, and went flat on the grass. She lifted her face to see trees and bushes rocking wildly, and the wooden house threshing like a willow in a gale.

Evelyn was screaming hysterically.

At length the quake subsided. Myrle rested a moment, getting her breath, and then she scrambled up.

"It's all right, Evelyn! Don't get upset! It's all over. You aren't hurt and I'm not hurt."

She took Evelyn's hand and hurried to see how Mrs. Henty was. Mrs Henty was very white, and half-crying, but still lying on her mattress holding the baby. The tent stood firm.

"That was nearly as bad as the first one we had," gasped Mrs. Henty.

"Yes, I didn't think there would be another like it." Myrle forced a cheerful smile. "Well, anyhow, the worst that has happened is that we've lost our cocoa."

The fire had to be re-lighted; more water fetched. Myrle felt too sick and shaken to eat, but she talked as much and as cheerfully as she could.

Night descended, lonely, inexorable.

Myrle lay on her face on her blanket. She had walked sixteen miles, she had worked incessantly, she had struggled to keep Mrs. Henty and Evelyn going. She felt weak, filthily dirty, and ill. Was it all an hallucination? Had life run off its usual track into some peculiar nightmare. She felt as though she was losing her reason.

A stupor of weariness overcame her.

When she wakened it was morning.

She rose up with one determination. She would cross the river immediately and try to get help. Mrs. Henty seemed well enough, except for a misery of worry about her husband. At the very worst she could fend for herself, now. The baby had increased its hold on life to the extent of crying for nourishment.

Myrle got food for Mrs. Henty and Evelyn, and then explained to them what she intended to do.

"I'd rather you went," Mrs Henty said, looking rather white. "I was afraid of you leaving yesterday, but today I'd rather you went. I just can't stay still here any longer, not knowing about my man."

"Very well," said Myrle. "But you must promise on no account to get up while I'm away. Evelyn will look after you—won't you Evelyn?"

Evelyn nodded, looking scared but determined to be brave.

Myrle showed her where the food was in the safe, impressed on her the necessity for saving matches when she lit the fire.

"I expect to be back quite soon, but if I shouldn't come Evelyn just go on looking after Mrs. Henty as long as possible. Don't be frightened, in a day or two it won't be so bad for Mrs. Henty to get about again."

"But won't you be coming back?" said Evelyn, her lip trembling. "Are you going to swim the river?"

"Yes, and of course I shall come back; I hope I shall be back here again before the evening. It's only just in case you mustn't be frightened by my telling you what to do."

"I'll do my best," said Evelyn bravely.

"TELLFORTH!"

Moved by the effort the poor child was making not to look utterly dismayed, Myrle put her arms about her and hugged her tightly. Evelyn clung to her and cried for a moment, asking:

"Do you think Daddy will ever come?"

"I'm going away now to find him for you," said Myrle, resolutely.

She wrapped up some bread and butter and some cold meat in a parcel, washed her face, and combed her dishevelled hair. Having done all she could to brace Evelyn and Mrs. Henty to face their fears without her, she set off to look for a world that seemed to have been completely lost overnight. A fancy haunted her that she would look down on the plains of Canterbury and find them become but a part of the sea. As she walked stiffly along in the morning sunshine she wondered what she would do. Her mind was too dulled to imagine that life would be like if everything worth living for was lost. But there were vegetables in the Hentys' garden, and the cow, and plenty of sheep about. They could live. Her fantastic thoughts even took her to the point of considering that if Mrs. Henty's boy grew up he could marry Evelyn and they could continue the race.

North American Life Increases Business 31 per cent.

Figures released by the Sales Department of North American Life Assurance Company indicate a 31 per cent. gain in new insurance sales for the first half of 1942. Sales for the past month were over $4,000,000., representing the best total for June in the Company's history.

Reflecting the improved economic circumstances of the people, there is reported a continued improvement in conservation of the Company's business, the number of lapses being at a low level. The insurance in force with the Company has increased since December 31st by approximately $9,000,000, the total now standing at $270,000,000. This gain in insurance is almost double the amount for the same period of 1941.

Sea View and Vicinity

Mr. Ray Burt, and Mr. Ralph Rose, left recently for Valleyfield, Quebec, where they have both attained employment.

A large number attended the meetings of the Annual District Convention, which met here recently. All greatly enjoyed the address given by Hon. Dr. MacMillan, on the work of the Red Cross.

Mrs. Thurza Price, Montreal, is spending a pleasant holiday, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Coulson.

Pte. William Brander, War Veteran, is spending a few days with his wife and family. Pte. Brander has been serving on Home Defence somewhere in Canada, for some time past.

Mr James R. Murphy, has accepted the position of principal of Malpeque Fanning school for the next term of teaching.

A number from Sea View, attended the Anniversary Memorial Service at the Geddie Memorial Church on Sunday afternoon. Rev. John Sterling gave the address which was both eloquent and practical and greatly appreciated by the large number, from far and near. He was assisted by Rev. Mr. Buntain, and Rev. Mr. Norrman. The service was held round the monument, where several beautiful wreaths had been placed in memory of the fallen heroes from the last Great War. The service throughout was most impressive.

Miss Edyth Donald, is spending a pleasant holiday with friends in Sea View.

The haying season is now well under way and although the hay crop is not as heavy, owing to the extremely dry weather in early spring, yet the farmers are reporting a fair average crop.

Master Clifford Donald, is spending a pleasant holiday in Graham's Road, the guest of his aunt, Miss Evelyn Brown.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Sudsbury, and little son, Ralph, who have been spending the winter in Valleyfield, Quebec, are now visiting friends in Sea View, and Baltic.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Cousins, are receiving congratulations from many friends on the arrival of a baby boy to their home on July 9th.

Mrs. Earle McKay and little daughter, Joyce, have returned to their home from Charlottetown, after Miss Joyce being a patient in P.E.I. Hospital for a tonsil operation. Many friends are pleased to learn that Joyce has made a complete recovery.

Miss Gertie Adams, is spending some time in French River with friends.

Mrs. Jacob Burt, is spending a pleasant visit with friends in Summerside and Miscouche.

Rev. Hartwell Watts and Mrs. Watts, N. B., were recent visitors to Darnley, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank McKay. —V.

In Memoriam

JAMES E. DAWSON

The death of James E. Dawson occurred at his home in North Tryon on May 16th, 1942.

The late Mr. Dawson was born in North Tryon seventy eight years ago and lived out his life as a successful farmer on part of the farm which his father had farmed before him.

He leaves to mourn his widow and one son T. Arthur.

The funeral service was held from his late home, on Monday the 18th. and the large concourse of friends from all parts of the Island, paid a real tribute of respect, to their departed friend.

His Pastor, Rev. Harvey Bishop of the Church of Scotland, conducted the service, assisted by Rev. Ward MacLean, United Church, and Rev. Mr. Wright, Baptist Church Tryon, who all visited him during his last illness.

Rev. MacLean sang the beautiful solo, "Oh Love that will not let me go" at the home, and the choir of the United Church, Tryon, rendered "Good Night," at the grave side, it being the special request of their departed friend.

Interment was made in Church of Scotland cemetery Cape Traverse.

District Convention At Sea View

The fourteenth Annual Convention of Darnley, Baltic, Sea View, Malpeque, Spring Valley and Hamilton was held in Sea View Hall on Thursday afternoon, July 9th. The weather was ideal and a large number of people from the different communities were present. The hall was prettily decorated in patriotic colors and with a profusion of cut flowers made a charming appearance. Miss Hazard, Charlottetown, and Miss Elliott of Ottawa, occupied seats on the platform, with the president, Mrs. James Hickey and Secretary, Mrs. Preston Green. When the hour for opening arrived the President asked the audience to stand for two minutes silence in memory of Lucy Maud Montgomery, who wrote that Hymn we all love so well, The Island Hymn, after which all joined in singing this hymn as the opening number, this was followed by the Creed in unison.

A cordial address of welcome was given by Mrs. Colin Donald and acknowledged in a fitting manner, by Mrs. James Ramsay, Hamilton. Minutes of last annual meeting were read by the secretary and approved. An interesting paper on The Great War was read by Mrs. Frank McKay. The reports from the several Institutes were then given, those all told of much successful work being accomplished particularly in the line of Red Cross work. Mrs. James E. Murphy then read a paper on Planning For Some Restful Moments, which contained many valuable suggestions. Roll Call of the different Institutes showed a large representation from each. The different committees were then appointed, Mrs. George Lockhart then gave a most helpful talk on Rubber its growth, development and manufacture, this was helpful and enjoyed by all.

Value of Nutrition

Miss Elliott of Ottawa the guest speaker of the afternoon session then gave a table on the value of nutrition and the problems of Food For Home Defence, stressed the necessity of all getting the right amount of vitamins in the food we eat in order to keep our bodies healthy. Miss Elliott has visited the Institutes all across Canada, and spoke of the wonderful work that is being carried on at this time. The offering was now taken, followed by instrumental music. Miss Hayard then gave a few practical suggestions on Institute Work complimented the different Institutes for their splendid response to the Layette's for Britain. The Layette from Malpeque, was splendid and deserves special mention for its artistic arrangement and the many articles donated. Nominating Committee with Mrs. Keith Donald, Convenor reported that the present officers be re-elected for another year of service, as they had filled their offices so capably during the year just closed.

Meeting adjourned with the King, for the tea hour which was served by the ladies of Malpeque and Spring Valley and greatly enjoyed by all, this was followed by social intercourse and an exchange of views and the meeting of friends in pleasant fellowship.

The evening session opened at 8:15 with the president in charge. Dr. MacMillan, Charlottetown, guest speaker, for the evening also occupied a seat on the platform. The hall was filled to its utmost capacity, some not being able to get in. The meeting opened by singing O Canada. Instrumental Music Baltic orchestra. Duet Velda Duggan, with guiter accompaniment. Reading, Mrs. Hiram Harrington. Dr. MacMillan then gave an eloquent and forceful address on Red Cross Work. He paid a fine tribute to the work done by the members of the Institutes the fine quality of which cannot be surpassed by any other Province. He also spoke in fitting terms of the generous response of the people of this Province in giving men for military duty as well as money to carry on the work, exceeding that of any Province in the Dominion. He then gave facts and figures needed to carry on the work of helping the people of Britain and those of our people who are prisoners. At present there are 200 thousand in the hands of the enemy and those could not live without the boxes sent from the Red Cross. He also spoke of the benefit derived from the Red Cross to the crippled children here in Canada, paid a high tribute to Dr. Acker's work along the line of helping poor deformed children. He closed this wonderful address, with an urgent appeal to all to do all in their power to carry on this worth while work both in time and means, till victory will be ours. The President in behalf of all thanked Dr. MacMillan for his helpful and inspiring message, which will surely make all feel encouraged to do all they can in every way they can. Little Imis Murphy then delighted the audience with tap dancing. Trio, Mary Bearisto, Anna and Edythe Donald. Reading, Mrs. Harry Crozier. Offering, Instrumental Music. Duet and Solo, Mrs. McGregor and Mrs. Chester Simpson. Duet, Velma and Irene Brennan.

Resolutions

The resolution committee then gave their report, Mrs. Clarence Hickey Convenor.

Be it resolved that the thanks of this convention be extended to the officers for their faithful services during the past year to Miss Elliott and Miss Mayard, for their helpful talk on Institute Work, to all others who helped in the afternoon session.

Resolved that the thanks of all be extended to Dr. MacMillan, the guest speaker and all others who contributed on the program.

Resolved that thanks be extended to Sea View people for their hall and equipment, to our hostesses of Malpeque, and Spring Valley, for hospitality at the tea hour and to all who helped to make 1942 Convention a success.

Resolved that owing to the terrible existing conditions of the world today that owing to the call that has come from our Government that we respond to those calls and make any sacrifice that we can to purchase War Savings Stamps.

Be it resolved that we one and all, put a greater effort and zeal into our Red Cross and war work.

Be it resolved that this Institute Convention voice their disapproval to the Government of the making of beer and all liquor and of selling of same to young men, especially those in uniform, and that we further, disapprove of cocktail parties, when sugar, tea and coffee are rationed.

Mrs. Chester Simpson, presided at the organ during both sessions and furnished splendid music, which all greatly appreciated.

Spanish Secret Service Seen Spreading Most Vicious Anti-American Propaganda

FOSTERS RELIGIOUS INTOLERANCE IN LATIN AMERICA

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

One of the great weaknesses of the Spanish Falange in Latin America is a lack of cohesion. The movement is divided in Spain and has no great number of followers to begin with. As a pro-Spanish movement, there are plenty of Spaniards who are willing to go along.

As a pro-Nazi movement, there are others who are not so willing to carry the ball or even run interference. And in Latin America there are supposed to be many Falangistas who, while supporting the cause of Franco before his victory in the revolution, now wish they were out of the whole movement since they, too, are not pro-Nazi.

A Masonic parade like that above, familiar sight in every U. S. community, is seized upon by the S.I.M., twisted into vicious anti-American propaganda appealing to the religiously prejudiced among Latin Americans.

FALANGE IS STRONGER IN AMERICAS THAN IN SPAIN

Under certain political circumstances therefore, the whole Falangist might fall apart. The interesting point to the United States is that the Falange is stronger and better organized in Latin America than it is in Spain and that face permits one interesting bit of speculation.

Could it be that Franco, interested primarily in unifying Spain and making it strong again after four years of civil war, has given the German-controlled Ibero-American Institute a free hand with the Falange in Latin America, in return for an agreement that the Nazis will stay out of Spain?

There are several factors which contribute to this belief. In recent weeks, there has been increasing evidence that the Nazi propaganda machine in South America has been working through the Spanish Falange.

The Spanish Embassies are already acting as the neutral diplomatic representatives of the Germans and the Japs in United Nations countries. That is official.

S. I. M. CARRIES TORCH FOR HITLER

Undercover official work of the Nazis might well be carried on through active elements of the Falange in Latin America.

Perhaps the Germans recognize the weaknesses of the Falange, or, perhaps, it is just that the Nazis don't overlook any bets. Anyway, there is another organization in Latin America which carries the German torch though it masquerades as a Spanish organization. This is the famed and fabled Servicios Intelligencias Militareos or S.I.M., the Spanish secret service.

In the last days of the Spanish Republic, S.I.M. died out for a couple of years, then it was revived, came to be largely Communist-controlled. At the end of the Civil War S.I.M. flipped over so that today it is Nazi-dominated and with definite links to the German Gestapo.

S.I.M. is organized in every country in the Western hemisphere. It works by more secretive and undercover methods than the Falange. Its propaganda is spread not by open meetings and printed matter, but by word of mouth. It could be used for sabotage and terrorism in countries that have declared war on Germany. It is used for espionage and goon work.

The propaganda that S. I. M. spreads is of a much more vicious nature than that of the Falange, and it so twists its arguments that it is really dangerously effective. Broadly, S.I.M. is anti-British and anti-American. It is also anti-Communist, anti-Jewish, anti-Protestant, anti-Masonic and anti-Liberal.

PAINTS U. S. AS ANTI-CATHOLIC

In spreading these doctrines the S. I. M. passes out the line that the United States is anti- Catholic. The Catholic church in the United States has done much to blast this lie.

To build up the case that the United States is anti-Catholic, S. I. M. develops many amazing arguements. To the European mind, the term "liberal" does not mean "toleration" as it does in the United States. In Italy and Spain, a "liberal" is one who is anti-Catholic. Consquently, when it is argued that the United States has a liberal government, it is interpreted by the S I M. whisperings as meaning a government that is anti-Catholic

The fact that Masonry flourishes in the United States is also curiously warped. In Italy, France Central Europe and Spain, a Mason is identified only as belonging to the Grand Orient Lodge which is traditionally and actively anti-very political organization, is church. Grand Orient Masonry, a practically non-existent in the United States, but the fact that all Masons in this country belong to either the Scottish Rite or York Rite lodges, which are entirely distinct from the Orient lodges, is conveniently overlooked. All Masons look alike in the eyes of the propagandist spreading his dirt among the credulous of Latin America.

This twisting of religious prejudice to gain the ends of propaganda makes easy the build-up of enmity against Soviet Russia and Communism with their anti-church background. The fact that the Soviet is an ally of the United States is always emphasized as a point against the United Nations cause.

PAN AMERICAN GROUP COUNTER-ATTACKS

To overcome this welter of lies, the United States and the Latin American countries themselves have organized effective countermeasures. Through the Pan American Conferences, through trade treaties and other official agreements, the governments have formed anti-Nazi alliance that gives the propagandists their best refutation. And a constantly swelling flood of counter-propaganda, the propaganda of truth about the Nazis and what they stand for, goes out to overcome whatever effects the work of the Falange and S.I.M. may have on the good neighbors to the south.

MacLEAN —MacEWEN WEDDING

A wedding of much interest to a large circle of friends and relatives took place on Wednesday evening July first at 5.30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Roderick MacRae, Cance Cove, P. E. I. When Rev. T. W. Goodwill, B. A. united in marriage Miss Ethel Jean, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry MacLean Meadow Bank and Mr. Charles Gordon eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie MacEwen, York Pt.

The bride was very becomingly attired in a street length dress of Queens Blue lace, over crepe with matching hat and biege accessories, she carried a bouquet of talisman roses. The bride was attended by her only sister, Miss Hazel, who was attired in rose sheer dress, with white accessories. The groom was ably supported by his only brother, Mr. Reggie MacEwen, York Pt.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a white pocketbook and to the best man a gold tie set. After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home at which fifty invited guests sat down to a sumptuous supper. The dining and sitting rooms were tastefully decorated in pink and white streamers and white bell. The table was decorated with bouquets of pink and white flowers centering the lovely wedding cakes.

Later in the evening a large crowd of friends from far and near, gathered to express hearty congratulations and best wishes to the newly-weds. Three cheers for the bride and groom were then given and they were very generously treated and entertained to out door entertainment for the remainder of the evening. The gifts received were many and beautiful including money, silver, linen, furniture etc. The following morning the bride and groom left on a short honeymoon trip to Moncton, N. B., on their return they will reside at York Pt. where the groom is a prosperous farmer. We wish the newly wedded couple many years of happy wedded life.
