Girl Guides

On Saturday afternoon the Girl Guides and Brownies held a very successful Pantry Sale in St. Mary's Hall. There was also a sale of Christmas wreaths and smal potted trees, cards, knitted and fancy work and Harcinus bulbs in bowl. All those things were made by the Guides and Brownies and they took quite a pride in their various handicrafts During the afternoon tea was served and Mrs. Arthur Allan, President of the local Association presided at the tea table. Fortunes could be told on the stage which was arranged to look like a gipsy camp ground. "Real" gipsies sat at the door of their tent and before a bright camp fire read fortunes in cups and cards. A Santa Claus rug was raffled off and Mrs. Pond had the lucky number. At intervals in the afternoon the Guides and Brownies sang their hiking and camp songs and this gave a decidedly "Guide" atmosphere to the whole affair. In spite of the fact that it rained heavily all Saturday afternoon we made about $37. Most of this is to be used towards camping expenses next summer, but with some of it we intend to help the Community Chest by giving bags of candy for the Christmas baskets. It has really been quite a busy time for the Guides but they have not forgotten their badge work and at the last meeting a second class badge was presented to Betty Todd and Needlewoman's Badges to Marjorie Lefurgey P. L., Marjorie Mellish, P. L., Betty Harper, P. L., Jennie Turpel, co-leader, Evelyn Walker and Betty Todd.

Lecturer Gives High Lights Of Hugo's Novel

"Do we do badly by our criminals?" Dr. Frank Parker Day questioned in the course of a lecture on "Les Miserables", outstanding novel by the great French writer Victor Hugo. Discussing Jean Valjean, one of the leading characters in the book who had spent 18 years in the galleys as a result of theft of a loaf of bread for his sister's starving family, the speaker wondered if it were possible present day society was responsible for those doing evil. If environment had been different would those criminals have committed their crimes. If "we had given them work, play and a place to be happy in would they have been different?" Dr. Day asked.

It was such problems Victor Hugo asked his readers to face in his great book Les Miserables. The volume should be read many times to get the message, the speaker believed.

Dr. Day was formerly president of Union College, Schenectady, New York, now resides in Yarmouth, Nova Scotia and Sackville, New Brunswick. He is an eminent author, soldier and scholar.

Written when Hugo was 60 years old Les Miserables was classed among the 100 best books in the world Dr. Day believed. It was a book containing not a story merely but was full of ideas. Outstanding was the question, "can good men conquer evil?" That thought was introduced in the very opening passages of the book when the convict Jean Valjean, a simple peasant hedge trimmer, turned into a brute by 18 years in the galleys came in contact with the Good Bishop. Although he committed crimes twice after meeting with this Godly man Jean Valjean's life thereafter was profoundly influenced.

The book was one of great dramatic struggles, Dr. Day pointed out. Always characters were being called upon to make decisions which profoundly altered the course of events. Containing some 360,000 words five times the length of the ordinary novel, Les Miserables was "a magnificent structure." With 50 important characters and many lesser ones there every "loose end" was tucked away and the whole production rounded out so there was not one character unaccounted for. There was just one little oversight apparently, where the reader could not find what had happened the speaker said, but added he was not going to tell the audience, if they had not discovered it for themselves.

To properly understand Les Miserables it was necessary to understand conditions in France in the 19th century. The whole period had been a struggle, which still continues, to find a government suitable to the French temperament. Born in 1802 Hugo lived through a good part of this troubled period, dieing in 1885. He was a son of one of Napoleon's generals but influenced by his mother was an intense Royalist in his youth. Then however by 1830 he had swung over to be an admirer of Napoleon and an ardent Bonapartist.

Remarking that Les Miserables was written when Hugo was 60 years of age Dr. Day declared, "there never was a really great novel written by a young man."

Last night's lecture, in the social hall of Trinity United Church was under the auspices of Mt. Allison University Alumni Society here. Miss Vera M. Malcolm Campbell president of the society presided. The Society had just completed a study of Les Miserables, it was said.

Following the lecture a hearty vote of thanks was moved the speaker by Lieut. Col. T. L. Lowther, principal of Prince Street School. He recalled 1915 when Dr. Day was in command of the 185th. Battalion with the rank of Colonel. The speaker mentioned his admiration for Col. Day in those days, when he himself was with the Battalion as a Lance Corporal.

The vote of thanks was seconded by Mr. C. H. Black.

Dr. Day, who has been a guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Cooper, leaves today on return to the mainland.

King-Hepburn Feud Aired By Cabinet

place the Mackenzie King Administration with one over which the two Provincial Administrations could exercise control.

No comment has so far come from Mr. Duplessis but in his statement tonight Mr. Gardiner said that the Quebec Premier was not involved in his discussions with Mr. Hepburn.

Earlier today Mr. Rogers issued a brief statement in reply to reported demands of Mr. Hepburn that the Port Arthur charges be substantiated.

"As to a conspiracy against the Prime Minister he (Hepburn) has already convicted himself out of his own mouth," Mr. Rogers declared Of a reported declaration by Mr. Hepburn that he would vote for Conservative Leader Manion in preference to Mr. Mackenzie King, Mr. Rogers said "that is the crowning confirmation of his whole attitude."

Mr. Gardiner's first call at Mr. Hepburn's office Nov. 17 was prompted by the latter's request, during the Royal Winter Fair, to talk about Mr. Hepburn's exhibit of prize winning horses. Discussion of the political situation developed.

A former Premier of Saskatchewan and an able debate in the House of Commons, Mr. Gardiner has often been rumored as a possible Federal Leader of the Liberal Party if Mr. Mackenzie King retired. Mr. Hepburn's offer to support him as leader caused no surprise among observers here.

The Prime Minister had a full attendance of available Cabinet Ministers at Council today and it was the first meeting of the Government since the long-standing quarrel with the Ontario Premier erupted Saturday.

Mr. Mackenzie King left Cabinet Council early in order to meet former Premier Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium who is a guest of the Government here. The Prime Minister made no statement other than that there were no appointments but the statement issued by Mr. Gardiner was known to have been considered by Cabinet Council before its release.

Quebec Archbishop Mentioned Possible Papal Candidate

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 13—Rodrigue Cardinal Villeneuve, Archbishop of Quebec, was mentioned with others tonight in guarded speculation over the possible designation of a foreign prelate as Pope after the death of 82-year-old Pope Pius XI.

While it was believed only a remote possibility at best, competent Church quarters have intimated continued Italian adherence to the religious and racial theories as developed in Nazi Germany might conceivably decide the Sacred College to elevate a Cardinal not of Italian birth.

Pope Pius' heroic fight for health has quieted, but has not ended, the speculation provoked during his recent illness.

In addition to Cardinal Villeneuve, among other foreign prelates regarded as potential candidates—should the Sacred College decide upon such a drastic course—are George Cardinal Mundelein, Archbishop of Chicago, Auguste Cardinal Hlond, Primate of Poland, and Jacques Loius Copello, Archbishop of Buenos Aires, who is of Italian parentage.

Most qualified Church quarters were not inclined to regard the present situation as sufficiently grave to warrant the designation of a non-Italian to the Papal throne. Such action was considered the more improbable since there are 35 Italian Cardinals in the present college, compared with 29 of other nationalities. The Sacred College might easily break with tradition, however, it was pointed out, should Italy follow the Church policy traced for it by Germany.
