

One does not buy a bedstead. For buying means to incur expense; and a bedstead is an investment—a lifelong one.

Look for that trademark. You may need to pay a trifle more to have it on the bed you buy. But it is worth that little more when it is "Ideal" quality.

Miss Rendle-head milliner for the firm of Prowse Bros. Ltd., arrived home on Saturday, from a visit to the millinery openings in New York and Boston. She has also been buying spring millinery for the firm—and is most enthusiastic over the beautiful millinery spring is showing elsewhere. She says one of the leading fancies for the season is black and white. It is seen in costumes, coats, neckwear, waists and in the hats is most prominent. Also, coral beads and coral shades are very much worn, as well as Helen Pink, so called after Helen Taft, in success to Alice Blue. Shapes are both large and small—extreme in both cases. The large ones leave the ones of former seasons in the shade as far as size goes—while the close fitting turbans are exceptionally dainty and comfortable looking. One favorite large shape is the Coronation which will be much worn—and hats flaring from the face, as well as others close fitting and drooping are correct. Prowse Bros. millinery opening will be an event to look forward to, as it will embody the leading styles worn in the fashionable world—and the handsomest and most correct millinery in the city.

The funeral of the late James H. Murray, formerly of Bedford, who was killed recently in Lynn, Mass., took place on Saturday in Bedford under the direction of Undertaker Wright of Charlottetown. There was a very large attendance of friends of the deceased at the performance of the last rites and the services at the house and grave, which were conducted by Rev. E. S. Weeks, were particularly impressive. There were very many floral offerings among them being one piece of especial beauty from the Carpenter's Union and another from his fellow workmen. Interment was made in the Marshfield Cemetery. The deceased was a son of Archibald Murray, Bedford, and for the past number of years had been residing in Lynn. On Feb'y 28th last he was walking on a double tracked railroad and moved off one track to avoid being run down by an express. As he stepped on the other track he was hit by a shunting engine from behind and was picked up in an unconscious condition. He was removed to a hospital and was there identified as he had been there for treatment for an injured hand some days previous. He died on March 2nd without regaining consciousness. The body was brought to Bedford on the special from Georgetown Saturday having crossed on the Earl Grey that day. The remains were accompanied by a brother of the deceased. A good joke which is claimed to be of recent origin, emanates from one of the P. E. I. R. stations. Ticket agents are continually bothered by travellers who crowd up to the wicket a minute or two before the train is to move out and ask for a ticket without stating full particulars as to one way or return, class or destination. Some who do this act thoughtlessly; others are in a temporary state of excitement owing to their fear of missing a train. The party on whom this joke reflects must have been somewhat excited when he requested his ticket. It came about in this manner. A lady stepped up to the wicket, and said: "First class, Barbara Wait, single." The joke merchant, who was standing near the lady, glanced at her sideways, and then took his turn, saying: "Second class, Patrick McGarrigle, married!"
