Mother Nurses Dead Child It was stated at the inquest at Ascot, Berkshire, on a child named Robert Bulpin, who died of pneumonia that the mother had nursed the child for two hours and put it to bed, not knowing it was dead.

Fund for the Helping Horse Kitty, the trace-horse which Our Dumb Friends' League placed on Putney Hill in order to assist heavily-laden horses up the steep incline has the benefit of a fund made up of street collections by a number of Wandsworth ladies.

Roman Relic Discovered A fine bronze Roman hanging lamp has been found near Thetford, Norfolk. It is in the form of a dolphin with wide open mouth, from which projected the wick. The British Museum authorities describe the find as one of the greatest rarities.

Footballer's Tragic Death James Blair, aged twenty-eight, a professional footballer of the Stockport County team, was found dead in his bathroom at his home with his throat cut. He had been depressed because he was unable to take part in football matches with his team.

Beach Palmists Taboo No palmists will be allowed on the beach at Mablethorpe, Lincolnshire. In previous years palmists have done good business among visitors.

Death of Aged Rector The Rev. Henry Spurrer, rector of Roughton-with-Haltham, Lincolnshire, died at the age of eighty-three. He was taken ill while he was celebrating Holy Communion.

Trawler's $6,000 Catch The Grimby steam trawler Caulonia, after having been on the fishing grounds for a period of about forty-eight hours, landed about sixty-five tons of fish, which realized nearly $6,000.

Motor Cyclist Falls Dead An engine-driver on the Great Northern Railway named William Fox, left his home at Colwick, Notts, for a ride on a motor-cycle. Five minutes afterwards, when he was riding up a hill at Carlton, he suddenly collapsed and fell from his machine. When picked up he was dead.

Damage to a Boat Train Before the Dover magistrates a Parisian named Dildace Thibault was alleged to have wrecked a compartment on the boat express from Charing Cross. With great difficulty he was arrested. In the police cell he tore up his mattress and clothing.

Smoking in Church The Vicar of Lancaster, at the annual vestry meeting, called attention to scenes of desecration in the church. Being a place of historic interest, the church must be kept open, but many trippers did not know how to behave in church, and the vergers again found people eating luncheon in church. They must protect the church from such desecration as eating in it, men wearing their hats, and even smoking in it.

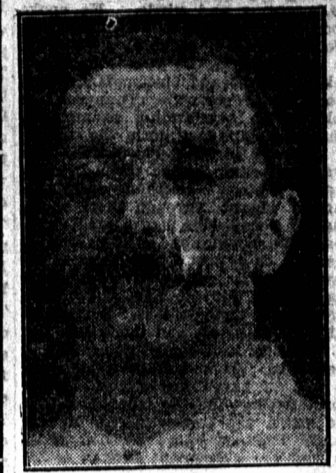

Boys Pelt Revolver Champion Mr. Walter Winans, the famous revolver shot, owing to his being pelted with stones by the boys at Ashford, Kent, when he rides to and from his residence at Surrenden Park in his Russian trotting-car, has intimated to the schoolmistress that in future no prizes will be allowed for boys. Instead he will give extra awards for girls and infants.

Rules for Repentant Wife Mr. Spencer Hogg, the Salford stipendiary, drew up a set of rules for a wife whose husband said he was willing to take her back if she would give up drink. The rules were: To abstain during the next twelve months from alcoholic drinks; to leave her present rooms and to go to live with her husband; to have nothing whatever to do with those of her companions with whom she had been in the habit of drinking; to report monthly to the court missionary.

YOUNG GIRL ORGANIST

But Eleven Years Old, Yet She Has Won Distinction Miss Eva Chapman, an eleven-year-old girl living at South Side, Bishop Auckland, Durham, has been appointed organist at St. Saviour's Church in that town. Miss Chapman's abilities as an organist are remarkable for one so young, and she has in addition won many musical distinctions. She betrayed her great musical gift at a very tender age, and developed a passion for the art.

CURIOSITIES IN HOSPITALS

Interesting Relics in Some of the London Institutions

Pretty well every old-established hospital has some curious and interesting relics in its possession. The "Hospital" mentions that the celebrated couch upon which John Hunter died when he was attacked with angina pectoris during a board meeting, is still preserved in the board room of St. George's Hospital, London. Many hospitals, too, possess valuable paintings of their early benefactors and medical staff by English masters of the eighteenth century; and practically all have museums from which curios, not pathological or gruesome, could be sent to an exhibition. The half-sovereign which was extracted from the windpipe of Brunel, the railway pioneer, was stolen a few years ago from one such museum.

HOW OLD IS MAN?

He Has Probably Existed on the Earth For 24,000,000 Years

The question of the first appearance of living things is of perennial interest, although tantalisingly uncertain. Professor G. Frederick Wright, says "Science Sitings," has now estimated that life has probably existed on the earth for 24,000,000 years, but that it cannot possibly have begun as long ago as 50,000,000 years. Man's antiquity cannot, he says, be less than 10,000 years, while it need not be more than 15,000. The evidence that man appeared in Tertiary time is regarded by our authority as very doubtful, and the Post-Tertiary age has been a relatively short period, while the known facts of human development can be amply accounted for by 3,000 years of time before the historic record began.

Escape From Molten Ore

Thomas Chappel, the driver of a locomotive near Newport had a remarkable escape from being buried in molten slag. He was taking a wagon of hot slag to the tipping-ground, and was unable to shut off steam. The ladle and locomotive consequently ran over the end of the tip, and, after turning, fell a distance of about 60 feet. In falling the wagon broke away from the locomotive, and the driver was saved from being covered with hot slag. When the engine was near the bottom the driver was thrown out, but his only injuries were slight bruises on the head and body and some broken ribs. Two who were on the engine jumped clear.

Modern Sentimentality Love of notoriety and the amount of public sympathy displayed for offenders are declared by Mr. W. J. Fringle, Chief Constable of Blackpool, in his annual report, to be factors that increase crime. A man, he says, has only to be put on his trial on a grave charge to bring forth a display of public sentiment almost amounting to open opposition to the execution of the law.

At Haddington Police Court, George Spence, laborer, pleaded guilty to stealing a suit of clothes by getting them from one broker on loan and selling them to another. The fiscal said Spence got the clothes to attend his aunt's funeral. He cleared out, but by accident was seen in Edinburgh by a Haddington police officer. The accused was fined.

CAT'S PEREGRINATIONS

Remarkable Return of a Feline to its Former Home

A story of the remarkable return of a cat to its old home comes from Kirkcaldy. A miner visiting near Dunfermline was presented with a cat. With his gift in a basket he walked four miles to Halbeath Station and travelled by train to Kirkcaldy, a distance of about sixteen miles. On the evening following its advent in Kirkcaldy the cat could not be found. Nothing was heard of it for some time, when a letter was received from the previous owners saying the cat had returned, and that they would not now part with it on any consideration. The cat, which had been missing for over twelve weeks, was quite plump when it returned.

RECTOR AND HIS SERVANT

She Denied Saying He Had a Face Like a Hearse

There was some amusement at Newry Sessions on the hearing of a case brought by Charlotte Vance, domestic servant, against the Rev. H. McKnight, Rector of Kilkree, to recover $16, one month's wages. The defendant, it was alleged, reproved her for buying oil. She stated that after some words he told her to leave the house, or he would kick her out. He said she should be in gaol and she was a miserable-looking creature. She denied having said he had a face like a hearse or that it was like a funeral. The defendant said the girl was ill-tempered and quarrelled with his butcher. She called him names. He had no experience of suffragettes, but this lady looked very like one. His Honor dismissed the case.

Playing With Live Cartridges

Reuben Rawlins, a boy living at Heath End, near Farnham, was seriously wounded by the explosion of a live cartridge. He and another lad were playing on Caesar's Camp, the training ground for Aldershot, when they found two live cartridges. Taking them home, they lighted a fire in a bucket and laid the cartridges on the top. As the fire did not burn very well one of the lads stooped down to blow it. Suddenly the cartridges exploded. Rawlins was so seriously injured about the head and face that he was taken to Trimmer's Cottage Hospital at Farnham in a precarious condition. The second lad escaped with slight injuries.

Not According to Fact

In his annual report to the Newport Education Committee Dr. H. R. Burpitt says that false information was attempted in many cases, notably as the child approached the leaving age, and was useful for household duties. Close co-ordination between the medical and attendance departments, however, invariably detected such cases. Still, there was often an apparent desire that speedy recovery should not take place in the cases of such children. "An illness such as ringworm is a stroke of fortune to their parents, because there is so much more time for work." One lad suffering in this way was too busy to attend the clinic for treatment, because he was delivering bread to the public. A couple of brothers, having contagious skin diseases, were purveying pastries.

Mason in the Pulpit

How a man passed as a curate and preached from the pulpit was described at Cardiganshire, when William Emlyn Jonts, aged about thirty, from Carmarthenshire, a mason, was charged with having obtained lodging from Thomas Thomas, and with stealing various articles of clothing from John Davies. In each case he represented himself to be a curate at Ammanford, and gave the name of Harries. On a Sunday afternoon he conducted the service at Dihewyd Church. The sermon was based on the text, "The wages of sin." He was committed for trial.

Russian Proverbs

Characteristic Russian proverbs quoted in the "Petite Republique" are reproduced in the "Mail" as follows: Choose a woman with your ears, not your eyes. Heaven sends us walnuts, but does not crack them. The man capable of making a fortune in a year deserves to be hung twelve months earlier. You should not sow seeds if you are afraid of sparrows.

Charge of Tricking Lawyers

Four solicitors at Ammanford were stated to have been duped by George Sullivan, otherwise Murphy Finnegan, a laborer on tramp, who was committed for trial on charges of obtaining money by false pretences. It was alleged that he represented that he had been knocked down by a motor car, and asked each of the solicitors to act for him in a compensation claim, and they all gave him money when he told them he was penniless.
