VALUE OF LIBRARIES STRESSED

Address By Mr. J. P. Gordon At Rotary Luncheon.

"What are we going to do when the Carnegie Library Demonstration grant is withdrawn?"

That was the question that Mr. J. P. Gordon proceeded to answer in addressing the Rotary luncheon Monday. In the course of his address he said:

"That question is one in which all of us, have I think, a common interest. I know this club has such interest deeply at heart from the splendid part taken by your members in making possible that part of the demonstration which has placed at the disposal of the people of Charlottetown nearly five thousand well selected timely books that would have been simply beyond the reach of our library with its so limited income. I do feel further that the members of the Rotary Club will not face with equanimity the idea of losing an improvement that has meant so much to so many, young and old among our people.

This addition to our facilities for study and enjoyment has, you are aware, promoted a tremendous increase in the use of our library. We have seen for example on many Saturday nights 150 books exchanged in 120 minutes.

On one day recently 400 books were exchanged. Throughout the Province the demonstration has been in the broadest way an outstanding success. In Prince Edward Island there are at this time over 20,000 registered readers, 5000 of them being in connection with the Charlottetown branch.

If we include the service to schools and through Women's Institutes the number of readers reaches well upon thirty thousand fully a third of our population.

Classes Of Readers

These readers include those who read for information—for the purpose of supplementing an education which has perhaps not been adequate—boys who want to make things and need direction—young folk who through the inspiration of the art exhibits held in our building from time to time have come to desire more knowledge along this line, study clubs seeking material along the lines of their interest, professional and practical men whose own libraries do not contain the particular work they may need at the moment.

They also include the great number who read for pleasure a class to my mind in no way inferior to the others—whatever the interest, whatever the need this demonstration library stands gladly willing and ready to serve.

After pointing out that anyone within reason can secure any book from the library, and telling his own experience in regard thereto, Mr. Gordon said:

Possible For All To Have Books

"A day or two after the new books were placed on the shelves that you helped to establish, I saw a group of little boys and girls at the foot of the steps.

"They were all looking over new books they had just received—they just could not wait to get home. Now through this demonstration it has been made possible for every child in the Province, who can read, to have in hand a book; To this end rural school teachers are encouraged to secure for their schools for a period of two months books to the extent of one for each pupil. Consider a school of say thirty pupils. that would mean that thirty books would be read, by many more than the school children. I need not I think labor the point of the educational and cultural value of a service like this."

The speaker then quoted from Sir Andrew Macphail's statement regarding fallacies in education, and commenting on this added: We are I think a little inclined to regard education as a matter of acquaintance with a relatively small group of text books, under the direction of a teacher. It is all that and much more. Of course every child should know how to read understandingly, to write clearly and to use figures competently—but that is not enough. Every child from the time he or she is able to read should be encouraged to learn some of the wonder of thought and fact—to cultivate the imagination, to broaden the interests in life, through a generous acquaintance with wisely selected books. To this need the Carnegie Demonstration has richly ministered.

Informal Adult Education

A good many of us—perhaps most of us, for one reason or another have not been able to avail ourselves of university training—and we just made up our minds that we would have to get along as well as we could without it.

It has come to be well understood that no one—or any rate very few are too old to learn—If we are—we are dead from the ears up anyway. As a vehicle for informal Adult Education the Carnegie Demonstration Library near by is little less than a mine of gold .Discussing some years ago with a friend the value of university training he said, "university training offers to every man the golden key to a wider world where he who will may enter."

When one thinks of the widening of personal, social, human, national interests so obtained one asks "is it possible that for any reason so great a good may be lost."

It has been seen that in the opening of new branches the demand for books is likely to be for those which deal with the interest nearest to the minds of the people there located. For example—in one rural branch the readers have pored over to the point of wearing out books on the sea. Could you after all, have a better start—begin where you are—the desire for wider knowledge, once wakened, does not easily slumber.

Organized Adult Education

Of course the working tool of such a project is the book or the collection of books, in many cases a wide variety that would not be generally available except through such service as a competent library. Two examples, rather widely different in aim, though similar in method occur to me. One is the Kinross Gaelic Study Group another is the rather remarkable group taking up the study of Economics in our own City.

Both these have competent leadership, both depend to a degree on the library as a source for the tools of service. I believe that on a recent Sunday night a group of over 200 men were present at a panel discussion of one phase of Economics, in the Holy Redeemer Hall. I was not present, but a friend who was, informs me that it was the most competent and interesting occasion of the sort in that person's wide experience. You will agree I think that the possibilities along this line are almost beyond calculation.

When People Can They Will Read

This is a statement that needs no proof. Shall we then in the face of this fact, allow our young people to drink in their knowledge from poisoned wells? Shall the reading of the younger generation be confined to the inferior type of magazines with their cheap and flashy standards of life's values, without at least sustaining the effort so nobly established to supply them with the good.

The Demonstration Ends in June 1936

The Carnegie foundation does not as a rule take the initiative in seeking that the work so established shall be taken over and sustained by those provinces and districts in which the demonstrations have been held. This is a responsibility that should proceed from the proper authorities, encouraged and supported in such aim, by the people themselves.

In England since the war, Demonstration Libraries were established in every county—at the close of such demonstrations I am informed that every county library has been sustained, for the greatness of the public value had been recognized.

All demonstrations have started in the same way all have been sustained.

Looking toward the continuation of such a scheme, it would seem to me that it should continue, as it now is to be centrally managed, independently free from all sectional and political influence. That is why I am absolutely opposed to the specious suggestion that it might be carried on through a series of individual contributions.

And so, gentlemen I have tried to put before you some idea of what the Demonstration has done in its three years with us—the tremendous possibilities offered to every part of our Province in our continued sustaining of the scheme —and the infinite loss involved in failing to carry it on and on.

WINNIPEG, March 3—Mayor John Queen's suggestion Winnipeg City Council operate filling stations to regulate the price of gasoline has created widespread interest. Inquiries have been received from Halifax and Western Canada.

Hockey

A very interesting game of hockey was witnessed by a large attendance of fans on Saturday night. The C.C.C. Sisters defeating the one armed North River Lindy's by a score of 1-0.

In the first period no goals were scored but expert checking and fast skating was dispayed by both teams. Many times the Lindy's broke through the C. C. C.'s defence line but owing to their good goalie the rubber did not touch the twine behind Miss Newson.

The second period proved a hard one for the Lind's as shooting was shown by the C.C.C.'s, but only once did the puck find its home in the Lindy's net, when "Billie" Bain broke through the Lindy's defence and shot from their blue line.

The last period, and perhaps the most exciting, was the best. Fast skating was necessary to keep off the foe.

The Lindy's received two penalties during the game.

Lineups:

C. C. C. Sisters: Goal, R. Newson; Wings, J. Frizzell, E. Shaw, L. Newson; Defence, M. Walker, R. Bain, N. Walker; Centre "Billie" Bain.

Lindy's: Goal, H. Scott; Wings, D. Jewell, C. Stevenson, F. Jewell; Defence, S. Drake, K. Dunsford; Centre, "Chal" Newson.

Refree Elmer Frizzell.

We the C. C. C. Sisters invite the Married Men of this vicinity to a friendly game of hockey to be played in Cornwall rink.

Signed, Capt. Erma A. Bain.

Belfast

For some years the first Friday in Lent has been set apart as a special day of prayer for the women of the church, both on this continent and in the British Isles.

On Friday evening, the observance of this rule once again, under the auspices of the Belfast Presbyterian Church W.M.S., brought together a large number, the various branches of the congregation being well represented. There was also a sprinkling of the men folk.

Mrs. Wilfred MacLean, who is President of the joint branches for the year, presided over the meeting, which as the program indicated, was mainly one for prayer and intercession, for the coming of the Kingdom of Christ throughout the world.

The hymns also, as on the printed program, were adhered to and sung heartily, with Mrs. Mabel MacEachern at the organ.

Nothing had been left to chance in the preliminary arrangements, and a spirit of deep reverence prevailed throughout the whole of the proceedings.

Those who took individual part, in different ways, included Miss Katie MacEachern, Miss Matilda MacDonald, Miss Jean MacKenzie, Mrs. Lena MacEachern, Mrs. Allene MacLeod and Mrs. Mabel MacEachern.

The pastor, Rev. D. L. Griffiths delivered a characteristic address towards the close, emphasizing most especially that notwithstanding all the schemes and plans of leaders among the nations, that the "Christ Way" still remains, as the only hope of mankind in these times of national and international ferment. The pastsor expressed his unbounded appreciation of the splendid work carried on year by year by the branches of the W.M.S. of the congregation, and also expressed in sympathetic terms, the regrets of all present that sickness prevented some of the most faithful members from being present that evening, to take part in one of the most effective meetings of this nature, that he had ever attended.

The only miscellaneous item was a rendering by Mr. Dave Griffiths of the beautiful sacred solo "Open the Gates of the Temple."

The spirit of "Education Week" was maintained at the Eldon School on Friday afternoon, when at the invitation of the teacher, Mr. E'mer MacPherson, the Rev. D. L. Griffiths, B.A., addressed the scholars taking as the basis of his subject the appropriate question "Why do we attend school?" The Rev. gentleman's remarks were breezy as they were informal and instructive and should be productive of some benefit.

Dear Mrs. Burt:— We your friends and neighbours feel that, on this your birthday, we would all like to be together and express to your our good fellowship and appreciation of your many good qualities and to heartily wish you many returns of the day. Therefore as a token of our esteem for you, we ask you to accept this small gift not for its value, but as a token of our good wishes for you on your birthday.

Master Roy Burt made the presentation of a purse of money. Mrs. Burt sincerely thanked all for their thoughtfulness and good wishes. After singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow" refreshments were served by the ladies and remainder of the evening was spent in dancing to music furnished by Messrs. James Beairsto and Edwin Matthews.—N

OTTAWA, March 3—Legislation to provide for equalizing payments to farmers on 1930 pool wheat will be introduced in parliament within a fortnight, Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House of Commons today.

He was answering a question from Conservative leader Bennett who said he had received many inquiries and understood the farmers were badly in need of the money and had made commitments in the expectation of receiving it at an early date.

Substitution of a lethal chamber for the gallows, for persons executed for a capital offence, will be urged by Dr. J. K. Blair (Lib. Wellington North), and to this end he has given notice of a bill to amend the Criminal Code.

Citing a number of cases in which hanging had been bungled, Dr. Blair said today this form of execution was a "relic of barbarism."

His proposed measure is not a new one in parliamentary annals.

Construction of the Three Rivers elevator will continue and rates will be so arranged that Montreal will be placed at no disadvantage, Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Marine, told a delegation from the Montreal Board of Trade today. The delegation was headed by Stanley Cook, secretary of that body.

Their concern was lest in the matter of rates the Three Rivers structure might obtain advantages to the detriment of Montreal, but the Minister assured them such a condition was not contemplated.

Mr. Howe also heard spokesmen for the Quebec Pilots Association, headed by M. Lachance, ask for certain revisions in the legislation governing their operations. Consideration of their representations was promised.

Total number of officers and men taken on the force of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police during the calendar years 1932 to 1935 was 1,754, according to a return tabled in the House of Commons today. Of this number 23 were officers and 1,731 men.

In the return it was stated the total of 1,754 included officers and men absorbed by the R. C. M. P. from provincial police forces and from the preventive services on land and sea. The entire quota of officers came in this way, while 743 men were thus absorbed.

EGLINGTON AND HOWE BAY INSTITUTE

The regualr monthly meeting of the Eglington and Howe Bay Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Leo MacKenzie on Feb. 5. Meeting opened with the singing of the Institute Ode after which the Creed was repeated in unison. Reports of school committees were heard. New school committees appointed were Mrs. Chester Burke and Mrs. Leo MacKenzie for Eglington, Mrs. James Lutz and Mrs. Chas. Lutz for Howe Bay School. All members spoke feelingly of the recent death of one of its members, Mrs. Lucetta MacDonald, and it was decided to donate enough money ($4.00) for two Mass cards for the repose of her soul, and also to send a letter of sympathy to her family.

Roll-call was answered by ten members and four visitors were present. Roll-call to be answered next month by paying ten cents. A discussion was carried on concerning a means of making money for the Institute funds. It was suggested that the members make a quilt and sell it, but nothing definite was decided. Mrs. Fred MacKenzie kindly invited the members to her home for the March meeting. The meeting was closed by singing God Save the King, and a dainty lunch was served by the Hostess.

HIKED 50 MILES TO POLL VOTE— THEN, LOST IT!

GLACE BAY, N. S., March 2—"Ah me, them were the good old days when a man took his politics seriously and elections were real ones," sighed Dan McVicar, aged retired coal-miner recalling his 50-mile mid-winter hike to poll his vote in the federal election of 1887.

McVicar, nearing his 90th birthday, looked back over these 49 years to the day when, with a substantial lunch in his pocket, he left home, in zero weather, tramped to Ball's Bridge, marked his ballot, ate his lunch, and started homeward on the second leg of his 50 mile journey.

"The only door I passed on the trip was the door of the polling booth," he said.

White Paper

white paper did not indicate the government planned so extensive a scheme for organization of industry. The scheme will enable industry to change from commercial to war production with comparative ease, should necessity arise. Government armament factories will be extended and a measure of control will be held against any firms that might wish to reap "war profits."

The field of production for the air force will be extended by placing orders with firms which have not thus far done aviation work.

The method will be to select commercial industries, not now manufacturing war implements, but possessing trained staffs of skilled engineers. They will be given extra plant machinery and sufficient orders for war material to make their participation profitable.

Labor Question Considered

The government also has plans, the white paper revealed, so that a shortage of skilled labor will not hold up the work. The industries concerned will be made responsible to assure consistency of labor supply in the face of any emergency.

So as to prevent excessive profits from munitions contracts the government will have all books inspected and adequate technical audits conducted into costs. Arrangement is made for special arbitration in the event of disputes.

Preceding the proposals of the white paper was a review of the international situation with special reference to the steady rearmament noted by other nations. Said the paper: "We have really no alternative in the present state of the world to review our defences and provide necessary means both of safeguarding ourselves against aggression and playing our part in the enforcement by common action of the international obligations."

Sought To Prevent War

It declares the government spared no effort to prevent the war between Ethiopia and Italy, both through the League of Nations and by more direct means, but in the meantime it found it necessary to "take precautionary action in the Mediterranean and Red Sea" on account of the rift between the League and Italy, and on account of the violent anti-British campaign conducted in Italy.

But while the government was able to move its navy to suit the Mediterranean requirements it found this only possible "by denuding other areas to an extent which might have involved great risks." It was therefore necessary to go ahead with the plans for increased defence forces as revealed in the white paper.

The white paper will be discussed in parliament next week.

NEW ZEPPELIN READY FOR TEST

"Flying Hotel" Was Four Years in Making.

(A.P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, March 1—"The luxury yacht of the air," the giant new zeppelin LZ 129 will soar over the Lake Constance region on its maiden flight tomorrow if weather permits.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, veteran designer, technical expert and pilot of the zeppelin company, said today he believed the huge ship capable of weathering the most adverse weather.

The ship was four years in construction and cost $3,200,000.

The colossal craft, at present identified prosaically as simply LZ 129, but which will soon be named the "Von Hindenburg," is roughly about twice the size of the Graf Zeppelin.

Comforts like running water in cabins, a smoking salon and shower baths have gained for it such sobriquets as "flying hotel" and "luxury yacht of the air."

That zeppelin can accommodate 200 day excursionists, 50 overnight passengers, and electric cookers can provide meals for 100. The ship's crew number 40.

LATER

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, March 1—The first flight of Germany's new zeppelin LZ-129 was postponed tonight until Tuesday or Wednesday when it appeared that the gas-filling could not be completed in time for tomorrow's scheduled trial.

DUNNING

time to time, in successive budgets, such modifications up or down as the case may be, as we may feel we can justify as being in the best interests of the people of Canada."

Made Inquiries

The Conservative leader, Mr. Dunning said, had referred to men who already had lost jobs because of the treaty. "Well," he continued, "I have made some inquiries. Some of the very few branch factories from which men are being released are branches of United States concerns which have been in existence in Canada in recent years with extremely high protection achieved by means of arbitrary valuations; which had no economic justification for existence."

The Reconstruction leader, the only member of his party in Parliament, also praised the treaty as a step in the right direction. He had a word of advice for the government, to go slow in changing tariff rates under the intermediate category and to change them only after consultation with Washington.

Intermediate rates, Mr. Stevens said, should be changed "with tact, courtesy and consideration for the other party to the treaty." The Prime Minister was seen to nod his head in agreement. Tariff changes should be made in a spirit of co-operation with Washington because "we cannot give with one hand and withdraw with the other," Mr. Stevens said.

Conservative members feared the effect of the treaty on the economic life of Canada. Earl Rowe (Cons. Dufferin-Simcoe), gave his opinion the agreement would be rejected if submitted to the people for an opinion.

"I shudder to think," said Mr. Rowe, "what effect it will have on our great railway systems by switching trade from east to west to north and south and encouraging short hauls on American roads." He said Canadian trade had been developed east and west over the years and to switch it north and south would have a disastrous effect.

Joseph Harris (Cons. Toronto-Danforth) said the treaty "will make Americans of us a great deal more than the United Kingdom treaties made us British." He wondered if the government wanted Canada to be "another state of the union or a little more imperial," but the Liberals only laughed at him.

The Toronto Conservative said the treaty would slow up industrial development in Canada and drive manufacturers to close their doors. It would result, he predicted, in increased exports of Canadian raw products and increased imports of processed goods, all to the detriment of Canadian labor.

Wanderer's Return

The old stranger shuffled into the country inn.

"Sixty-two years ago," he said, "I left this place, a penniless boy with no prospects. All I had was five shillings lent me by my school-fellow, Burrows—I suppose Burrows is dead."

"That he isn't!" cried an aged man. "I'm Jack Burrows, and let me be the first to welcome you back, rich and famous, to your old home."

All the villagers cheered.

"I'm wondering," said the returned native, "if you could lend me another five bob?"
