

When the Son judges the Father!

THERE comes a time when nearly every son sits in mental judgment upon his father. Sometimes, alas! that time does not come until the father is dead. The son, perhaps, may be a mere lad, faced with the knowledge that his is the task of helping to look after mother and, perhaps, younger brothers and sisters. Then it is that he judges his father. Then it is that he remembers his kindnesses, condones his weaknesses, and then it is that he wonders sorrowfully, why his father did not make better financial provision for his mother.

If you have known of an instance where a son has thus sat in judgment upon his father, remember that the time may come when your own son (or your daughter)—if you have children—will sit in judgment upon you. What will their verdict be insofar as it applies to your provision for their, or for their mother's and your wife's maintenance?

If you haven't provided sufficiently for their maintenance until they are able to look after themselves (and their mother)—isn't this the time to do it—by means of Confederation Life Insurance?

Write for the pamphlet "No Matter What Happens". You will find it very interesting—to say the least. Address your request now to—

FATHER OF THE MATTRESS

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—Herr Heinrich Westphal, the "father" of the spring mattress, has just celebrated his eightieth birthday in his little apartment in one of the great tenement buildings in the north of this city. The man who made it possible for the world to sleep comfortably himself in poverty and squalid discomfort, dependent for his food on the charity of friends.

Herr Westphal relates how the idea of the spring mattress came to him while he was lying wounded during the Franco-Prussian war on a hard hospital bed. He secured his patent in 1871 and his first mattress was presented to Prince Bismarck, the Iron Chancellor, who sent him in return a letter which the unfortunate inventor still treasures.

The German inflation swept him off his feet and left him destitute; but Herr Westphal has not given up hope. The inventor of the world's first spring mattress is now hard at work in his garret striving to perfect the world's "last" mattress, which he says will be so soft that it will never again be necessary to invent another design.

A gear shift mechanism operated by turning a handle has been invented for electric washing machines to provide different speeds for light and heavy fabrics.

The Saxby Gale

Without miracle. The earth it is true will not be in perihelion by some 16 or 17 of semi-diameter.

With your permission I will during September next (1889) for the safety of mariners briefly remind your readers of this warning. In the meantime there will be time for the repair of unsafe sea walls and for the circulation of this notice throughout the world."

Similar Predictions

It appears evident that Saxby had at least on one other occasion made a somewhat similar prediction as he further adds—

"At the period referred to in 1863, a moon happened to be in extreme south declination, and accordingly the greater devastations occurred in the southern hemisphere."

Not to be outdone by Saxby Mr. Frederick Allison of Halifax, N. S. gave the following prediction to a Halifax newspaper—

"I believe that a heavy gale will be encountered here on Tuesday next 5th October beginning perhaps on Monday night; or possibly deferred as late as Tuesday night, but between these two periods it seems inevitable. At its greatest force the direction of the wind should be southwest, having commenced at or near south."

"Should Monday 4th be a warm day for the season an additional guarantee of the coming storm will be given. Roughly speaking the warmer it may be on the 4th, the more violent will be the succeeding storm. Apart from the theory of the Moon's attraction, as applied to Meteorology—which is disbelieved by many, the experience of any careful observer teaches him to look for a storm at next new moon, and the state of the atmosphere, and consequent weather lately appears to be leading directly not only to this blow next week, but to a succession of gales during next month."

Referring to the above predictions the Halifax Citizen published the following—

"Great preparations were made about the wharves yesterday, to meet the storm which had been announced to take place to-day. Nearly all the small craft, and several vessels, including the Rosenoath, ran out in stream and anchored, while those who remained had fasts out in all directions, making it almost impossible to get down on the wharf after dark, without danger of breaking one's neck. In consequence of the expected high tide, many of the owners of warehouses and stores near the water, had the lower floors cleared of goods, and everything possible to prevent damage, was done. After all the preparations, many were disappointed at the result. The performance did not come up to the programme, and was not at all what was expected. Yesterday was fine in the morning, but in the afternoon the sky began to cloud over, and signs of a storm were numerous. About six o'clock p. m. the tide had risen within two or three feet of the tops of the wharves, but was then full and began to recede. Prognostications were freely made, however, by the weather wise, that this morning 'we would see,' and 'we did see'—nothing very remarkable, being only a repetition of last evening's tide. A pretty stiff breeze commenced about five o'clock last evening, and gradually increased until about twelve, when it blew a moderate gale. It continued blowing more or less strong until about four o'clock, when it attained a very respectable force, but not sufficient to do any damage. About five it began to die away, and at eight there was hardly a breath of wind to be felt, and beyond two or three old fences in the North end and a few shingles off some houses in Water street, we have heard of no damage. Torrents of rain fell during most of the night. Altogether though Capt. Saxby and Mr. F. Allison deserve all credit for warning the public of the approaching storm, the general feeling of one of disappointment."

English Comment

Commenting on the Saxby prediction the London, England, Standard said—

"Saxby claims to have been successful in some predictions, and he may prove either lucky or clever on the present occasion. As the astronomical effect will operate over the entire globe, it is exceedingly likely there will be a gale of wind and a flood somewhere."

The chances of a hit in Saxby's case were greatly in his favor. He had the whole world to range over, for he expressly stated the two hemispheres would be affected alike. If then in any locality, on the surface of the earth a violent storm occurred very dainty lunch was served by the hostess. Next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Allan MacKinnon.

red on the day named Saxby could from torrential rainfall, and in some claim a fulfilment of his prediction. In these latitudes during the month of October we are fairly certain to have gales, and that one of these should occur about the time indicated is nothing very remarkable. The prediction of the weather prophets was published in Newfoundland and the fifth said to have been a day of quaking terror, but both Monday and Tuesday were perfectly fine, not a trace of the storm being recorded there.

The S. S. Acadia of the Anchor Line from Glasgow arrived at St. John on the ninth, but did not experience heavy gales on the passage out.

So far as I have been able to trace the storm it was in the vicinity of the Southern States on the second. Washington, D. C. had an excessive rainfall on the third and fourth. The Tiber overflowed and some small buildings were carried away. Storm subsided about 3 a. m. of the fourth followed by sunshine in forenoon. Maryland had an excessive rainfall. At Fort Washington 5.68 inches fell between third and fourth. Baltimore had heavy rain on third but no gale was reported. Pennsylvania was flooded in many parts of the State and at Philadelphia the river was full of floating wrecks, in his as well as New York State traffic was held up in all directions by the flood. In Connecticut, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Maine, great freshets and storms were everywhere reported, Providence without ample warning and rivers were swollen by the run off display of storm signals.
