THE MORNING GUARDIAN.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 29 1899.

THE MONOPOLY MUST GO.

The interview with Mr. Horace Hazard, a report of which appeared in yesterday morning's GUARDIAN, gives that gentleman's views in regard to the telegraph monopoly under which this Province has long suffered. Mr. Hazard, while actively engaged in business, has given more time and energetic and intelligent labor to the promotion of public improvements than almost any other citizen of Charlottetown. In connection with the Board of Trade, of which he is the honored President, he has from time to time done effective service in promoting improved winter communication with the Mainland, and direct steamship service to and from the Mother Country. It is therefore quite in line with his many other useful public activities when he takes up the matter of an improved telegraph service.

A year ago or more we were led to believe that the Anglo-American Company were disposed to yield to reason and the expressed wish of the Government and people by giving us an improved service at reduced rates. The hope has proved utterly delusive, and the telegraph business of Charlottetown and Prince Edward Island is still subjected to conditions that are simply intolerable. Countries that were practically unknown and cities that had no existence when his monopoly was created are now enjoying constant telegraph communication by day and night at half the rates our people are paying for a half-day service.

We have a strong appreciation of what Sir Louis Davies has done and is doing to secure for the people of his native Province equal privileges with those of other sections of Canada. He has labored energetically and faithfully in the matter of our winter steam service and the steamer to England, and his labors have borne fruit. But the telegraph service remains unimproved and apparently will remain so as long as the Government continues to pay the annual stipend to the Company. Sir Louis has stated in Parliament that "he is satisfied the Company has no monopoly in the Straits." Why then does not the Government exercise its undoubted prerogative, and discharge its plain duty to give us a modern, up-to-date service?

It is, as we have been saying for years past, impossible that existing conditions can go on very long. Every branch of business suffers. Important public news is delayed; tourist travel is hindered; worry, disappointment and loss are daily endured, and must continue to be endured so long as the Government continues its full payment for a half day service. Why go on in this way until public patience is utterly worn out? Is the twentieth century to dawn without change or improvement in this regard? We say the monopoly must go, and go it must, but it will linger until the Government takes decisive action. It is the clear duty of the Government to find a remedy for conditions which have become intolerable, and which, if longer continued must reflect discredit upon the government.

THE EDITOR'S MAIL.

Ingersoll and Faith.

Sir.—In your criticism on opinions regarding the late Col. Ingersoll you quote Scripture: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," etc. Now this is not Scripture at all. The passage is Mark 16:16, which is not to be found in any of the great M.S.S., and was added by Aristion, whose opinion is of no authority. You add, "Without faith it is impossible to please Him." Without faith in what? Is it without faith in additions and perversions of the sacred text? Col. Ingersoll did not believe in these and was he not right? Col. Ingersoll was one of the few great men America has produced and his name will be quoted when those of his critics are forgotten. Yours, etc.

Played the Same Old Game.

Prescott, Ont., Aug. 26.—Two gentlemanly-looking men, who arrived last Monday afternoon and registered at Daniel's Hotel as B. F. Morton, London, and B. C. Robins, Montreal, subsequently proved to be sharpers. They selected James Connell a wealthy farmer of August, as their victim, and he is the loser by $5,000. It was the old, old story of wanting to buy a farm and meeting a friend on the way with a three-card monte outfit. They let Connell, win $500, and then had him draw $5,000 which he had in the bank, put the whole in a tin box, and give it to Connell to keep. The farmer went home with the proverbial brick wrapped in paper. The police authorities are after the men with little chance of capturing them.
