Some reasons why you should ride a cushioned frame bicycle.

It is simple and effective.
It is unobtrusive in appearance.
It lengthens the life of the wheel,
Its price places it within the reach of all.
It saves the nerves and vitality of the rider
It increases the rider's comfort without decreasing his speed.
It obliterates every objection to cycling on the part of delicate persons.
It is so simple and compact in construction that it can't get out of order
It is to the rigid frame what the pneumatic tire was to the solid tire.
You do not have to stand on the pedals to relieve the jar, as the cushion absorbs it
It enables the rider to exert power equally unmindful of the roughness of road surfaces
It accomplishes perfect resilience without dependence on the tire and thus allows the use of harder tires.
It a positive cushion, absorbing the shock caused by obstructions on uneven road surfaces, instead of requiring the rider to do so.
One can coast down a rough hill and sit comfortably and safely on the saddle, as there is no throw or rebound on a cushion frame bicycle
The distance between the saddle and the pedals ever remains the same, so that the rider's position is not constantly changing as with a spring frame or a spring seat-post.
It represents speed with comfort and a fair trial will convince the most skeptical that it is the greatest improvement in cycling since the introduction of the pneumatic tire.
Cleveland and Welland Vales have this feature.

THE TUBERCULOSIS CONGRESS.

Great interest is taken throughout the bounds of civilization in the coming Congress on tuberculosis to open in London on July 22nd under the patronage of King Edward. It will include physicians of all schools and all countries, met together in the hope of providing a check upon the most terrible disease scourge that has yet appeared upon the earth. Cholera, plague, and small-pox have each in turn been checked and restrained, but the "white plague" of tuberculosis in the form of consumption and other maladies is yet doing its deadly work in city, town, village and rural district, and science has not yet set any bar to its progress. By day and night, from year to year the deadly work goes on and the yearly victims of this one scourge number more than those of war and pestilence combined.

The English committee which issued the invitations to the London Congress say the deaths from consumption in the United Kingdom are 60,000 yearly, while at least 130,000 are constantly suffering from the same disease. In the United States the yearly death-roll from consumption is over 100,000, about 10,000 of which are in New York State alone. Great as is the mortality from this disease in England it is vastly greater on the Continent of Europe. In the German Empire the mortality is 63 per cent greater than in England; in France more than twice as great; in Austria two and a half times and in Russia very nearly three times as great as in England. In all Europe consumption carries to the grave not fewer than a million persons yearly. And yet it is claimed not to be hereditary, but to be wholly due to infection under conditions that are mainly preventable.

So far science has demonstrated that there are three principal means by which the infection is spread. One of these is contact with a consumptive patient, or breathing the dust formed from the dried expectoration of such patient. Another fruitful cause is the use of milk from tuberculous cows. A third and less frequent cause is the use of the meat of tuberculous cattle as food, and the meat being eaten in a rare or but partially cooked condition. The danger from milk is the greater because, except when used in tea, or when submitted to some protective process, the germs of tuberculosis will be taken directly into the system, if the milk comes from an infected herd. It has been found in England, Germany and France that tuberculous disease in cattle is vastly more prevalent near large cities than in the more distant rural districts. It is also to be noted that in countries where all meats exposed for sale are subjected to rigid inspection, the percentage found to be diseased is much greater than would be generally supposed. In London between 20 and 25 per cent of the beeves offered for sale were found to be tuberculous.

It is most earnestly to be desired and there is some reason to hope that the London Congress may evolve some means for the better prevention as well as for the cure of tuberculosis. In any case it seems likely to arouse scientific men and through them to awaken the general public, to the vital necessity of using such preventive and precautionary measures as are now known to be effectual in preventing the spread of tuberculosis.

FLED FROM THE COUNTRY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 16.—In consequence of the recent postal seizures by the Ottoman authorities several Musulomans, including a priest of the Faith Mosque, have been arrested. It is rumored that Reshad Pasha, formerly minister of finance, has fled from the country.

The amateur detective is as humorous a character as any of Shakespeare's clowns, or even old Dogberry himself. He finds the most astonishing clues, and generally follows them until he brings up about as far away from the solution of the mystery as mortal well may be. But the specialist in the detection of crime, Sherlock Holmes, is a man who reads clues, as the Indian reads a trail. Every step he takes is a step to success.

It's much the same way in the detection of disease. While the amateur is blundering along over misleading symptoms, the specialist goes right to the real cause and puts an arresting hand upon the disease. It is in such a way that Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., succeeds in hunting out and arresting diseases, where the less experienced practitioners fail. More than thirty years of special study and experience have enabled Dr. Pierce to read symptoms as easily and as truly as the Indian reads a trail which is without a hint for a less acute vision than his. Any sick person can consult Dr. Pierce by letter absolutely without charge. Each letter is read in private and answered in private. Its contents are held as sacredly confidential. It is answered with fatherly feeling as well as medical skill and the reply is sent sealed in a perfectly plain envelope, that there may be no third party to the correspondence. Thousands have taken the first step to health by writing to Dr. Pierce. No writer ever regretted writing. Ninety-eight in every hundred treated have been positively cured. If you are afflicted with any old obstinate ailment write to-day, you will be one day nearer health. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.
