West Novas To Hold Reunion At Aldershot

The first Battalion West Nova Scotia Regt. which sailed for England in December 1939 as members of the famous First Canadian Division and fought from the shores of Sicily to the northwestern European theatre, is planning its first re-union, Sept. 17-18 at Camp Aldershot, one mile from Kentville, Nova Scotia.

This fine Regiment had members from every Province in Canada and many Islanders were included in the 5000 men who served in it during World War II. It is expected that many of the Island boys will be attending the re-union and full particulars of the program, expenses, etc. may be obtained by phoning or writing to the Island Zone Representative, Lieut.-Col. A. W. Rogers, Charlottetown.

Arrangements have been made for the necessary accommodation and food during the re-union at a very nominal cost.

The veteran infantrymen will be registering on Saturday afternoon in Aldershot Camp and that evening a get together in the Camp Messes will be held. On Sunday morning a Memorial Service will be held to honour the memories of those of the Regiment who have fallen. At 1230 a luncheon will be held and following this a general assembly to appoint committees and appoint officers to head an all-ranks Regimental Association. At this first re-union it is planned to organize an annual get together to perpetuate the memories of the Regiment.

Many distinguished guests have been invited, including ex-commanding officers of the Regiment. Among the latter is the Minister of Veterans Affairs, Brigadier, the Honourable Milton Gregg and Lieut.-Col. L. T. Lowther of Charlottetown, both of whom commanded the Regiment in England in 1940.

Among the Island members who have signified their intention of attending the re-union next week are two former company commanders of the Regiment in Italy, Lieut. Col. A. W. Rogers and Major Allan Nicholson of Charlottetown, also Lieut. Art Proude of the same city. Lieuts. Bill Arnett and Tanton McNeil of Summerside, Sgt. Jim Evans, Irishtown, Sgt. Clarence Cameron, St. Eleanors, Cpl. "Plum" MacDonald, Charlottetown, Ptes. J. D. Shepherd and Pius Smith of Ch'town, Ptes. Leith Ellis and Orrin McDonald of O'Leary, Pte. Octave Gallant of Urbainville and Pte. Frank Savidant of Summerside.

There are vacancies in several of the cars leaving on the 17th. and ex-members of the Regiment desiring to attend are asked to contact the zone representative at once so that transportation may be arranged.

Growers Warned Re Careless Harvesting Of Potato Crop

Every year Island potato growers are warned to use care in handling their potato crop. This warning is sometimes heeded, and more frequently not, states Mr. S.G. Peppin, officer in charge Dominion Seed Potato Certification.

"If our growers could only see the condition in which some of their potatoes reach the consumer, they certainly would become 'bruise-conscious' and make a more determined effort to not only use extreme care actually harvesting their potato crop, but would also follow this up by demanding that all truckers and warehousemen use the same precautions," Mr. Peppin said.

"The potato, at time of harvesting, is frequently green and soft. Then, no matter what type of digger is used, bruising is bound to occur, unless the machine is run slowly and with sufficient soil being run over the moving parts to protect the tubers against injury.

Some of these moving parts of the digger can be covered with rubber tubing or burlap, and this should be done wherever possible.

"Careless handling of machinery and, during the trucking to storage, can and does account for considerable bruising and subsequent losses in storage. The bruised potato either turns black or rot will set in. This makes it quite worthless for any purpose, to say nothing of the injury to the good reputation our potatoes now have in the world's markets. This applies more particularly to seed potatoes than it does to tablestock, for the very simple reason that much of our seed stock must remain in storage for several months before it is actually used for planting.

"Some fields have already made a good yield or will have a good crop in prospect by September 15. In such cases, it might be wise to kill off the vines, and so prevent oversize tubers. In any event, every field in Prince Edward Island, regardless of locality or the size of the tubers, as of October 1 should be killed.

"Allow a period of ten days to two weeks to elapse before actual digging operations commence. This gives the tubers some time to harden and this will help lessen the injuries which are bound to occur when potatoes are harvested in a more or less green condition.

"Many hundreds of bushels of potatoes are lost annually due to rough handling. Instruct every worker in the fields, on the trucks and in warehouses to handle potatoes as a perishable product and not as stones."

FREDERICTON, Sept. 8 —(CP) —Fredericton Capitals became finalists for the New Brunswick senior baseball championship tonight when they defeated St. Stephen 4-2, taking the semi-finals in three straight without a loss.

The powerful Caps, defeated few times this season, will play a best-of-seven series with Moncton Legionaires for the provincial crown. The first game is scheduled for Fredericton tomorrow, with the second at Moncton Saturday.

HOLD OPENING MEETING — The first fall meeting of the Evening Auxiliary of the W. M. S., Trinity United Church, was held on Tuesday of this week, with the President, Mrs. Stanley Thompson, presiding. The meeting opened with the Hymn "Go Labor On, Spend and be Spent." The devotional period was taken by Rev. G. H. Alexander, formerly of Stanhope in this Province, now of Michigan, a former missionary of the Presbyterian Church in the Indian mission field. Mr. Alexander in his message stressed that God is calling for workers and that definite prayer should be made for definite missionaries. Reports were given of visits made to the Sanatorium during the summer season, and a committee appointed for September. After a short business period Mrs. Leigh Warren gave a solo. A very interesting and helpful discussion on "Temperance and Christian Stewardship" was led by Mrs. Arthur Coffin and Mrs. Paterson. The meeting closed with the Hymn, "Saviour Like a Shepherd Lead Us", and Benediction by Rev. Mr. Alexander.

SOCIAL WORK

nity, and not a complete subservience of man to the State.

Dr. MacMillan's Address

In his address Dr. J. A. MacMillan, Charlottetown, traced the development of the democratic state to show that the individual predated society — now understood as the State. Therefore the individual has certain inalienable rights that pre-date the rights of the State. Man has inherent rights which he neither surrenders to the State, nor can surrender because they are part of those things which go to make up the sacred dignity of man.

"A true democracy," said the speaker, "is a way of life in which human individuals live in accord with one another according to the dictates of conscience and Divine Law. They band themselves together in whatever form of government that may happen to be their choice. This government has its origin and its power from the same Supreme Being who gives life to the individual members of the State. No state, no government, no ruling authority of any sort whatsoever, has any right to be called a democracy or to be labelled as democratic which does not follow these basic principles."

The only ture road to unity in any form of human endeavour is strict adherence, both in policy and in doing, to these very basic principles, Dr. McMillan said. Social workers and Government should recognize and operate with an awareness of the inherent dignity of man; man has a right and an obligation to do certain things for himself—viz., care for his family. Neither the State nor the profession of social work, through its welfare agencies, can assume that obligation as long as the individual himself is capable of assuming it. Any right implies an obligation on the part of the individual to assume the responsibility of acting within his rights, and on the part of the others not to infringe on that right. This is a principle social workers, both in private and public agencies, must cooperate on and develop basic principles for workers in the profession.

The speaker emphasized that it was basic in a public relations program that the people themselves believe in what they are trying to sell others. Public relations requires salesman techniques. He pointed out that the people do not know what social work is, what it is all about, what social workers are like, what they are trying to do. The people need to be told these things, and the social workers themselves are the only ones who can tell them, because they, chiefly, are the only ones who know.

The speaker pointed out the need for standardizing and the registering of social welfare institutions, such as homes for the aged, boarding and adoptive homes for children and orphanages. There should be certain specified minimum requirements these institutions should conform to before they would be recognized and recommended as an institution for social welfare work.

Professional standards as they relate to personnel in the field should be maintained, he continued. Recognizing unqualified workers as professionals, merely because they are in the field, will do much to retard the profession.

Unity in methods of survey, registering statistical data, certain standard statistical forms for the use of welfare agencies doing similar work, and of standardized education for social work, was also stressed by the speaker.

Afternoon Session

Miss G. V. Shand, Executive Director of the Halifax Council of Social Agencies, led the afternoon discussion.

She dwelt on the philocophy that led to the organization of Community Welfare councils around the turn of century. Each social welfare agency was working without any knowledge of what others were doing, causing great confusion and duplication of effort. To achieve coordination in social work the Council of Social Agencies was developed.

The history of the development of councils of social agencies and composition of councils was traced. These included all private and public agencies interested in furthering social welfare work through cooperation with other agencies in the field. The awareness of the need for public support in social work made it necessary to bring in other community organizations and service clubs, such as church groups, local women's organizations, Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce and similar associations. The inclusion of such organizations made it necessary to change the name of the agency from Council of Social Agencies to Community Welfare Council.

Today Community Welfare Councils are accepted as essential in social work. They are valued not only for cooperative planning and coordination of service, but also as a means of mobilizing all forces in the community for the preservation and promotion of human values.

The characteristics of a community welfare council are voluntary membership by welfare agencies and by interested citizens, continuous purpose of helping the community to meet the needs of its people for the good health, economic security, and leisure time activities and a program of coordination of social work and planning for social action.

The mechanics of organizing a local Community Welfare Council was discussed including the composition of a Board of Trustees and types of organization for a Council in the locality.

The professional social worker should act primarily in an advisory capacity, where non-professional social workers and interested citizens participated. The factors that led to the development of a Council might be probable factors in any one community. Possible programs of a Community Welfare Council are housing, slum clearance, developing playgrounds for children, promoting the development of community centers, interpreting social work to the people through publicity campaigns, showing the public what the various social welfare agencies in the community are doing for the community.

"Community Welfare Councils exist to promote the orderly development of these varied community services so that, collectively, they will attain the highest possible efficiency in serving the needs of the people," the speaker quoted from Mr. Merrill Krughoff, Director of the Community Chest and Councils Inc., New York.

A general discussion by the 80 delegates brought out the need for a great amount of cooperation between social welfare agencies and social workers at the administrative level and at the case work level of their work.

The need for promoting the interest of the lay people of the community in social welfare work, and in continuing that interest through a progressive program on the part of the Community Welfare Council.

The role of national agencies such as Red Cross, T. B. Assn. in a local organization such as the community welfare council was considered.

The need for a local community organization to act in an advisory capacity to the provincial Child Welfare Branches of the Departments of Health and Welfare in those areas where there is no Children's Aid Society was also discussed. It was thought that its role would be to act as a sounding board for public opinion in regard to governmental action in the social welfare field, such as in the area of administration of Family Allowance and Mothers' Aid programs.

EVENING SESSION

Comparing the development of social welfare as a public service to the initial conflict before public education was introduced in England, Miss Touzel pointed out that "we have come a long way since then. Private educational institutions could never have provided educational opportunities for all if they had been limited solely to private support."

But they did lead the way and demonstrated the necessity to establish a public programme, she continued. This job of pioneering and demonstrating has been the traditional function of private agencies.

Miss Touzel went on to enumerate five common objections to the development of welfare services under public administration, and to answer these objections.

To the complaint that such services "create unworthiness by providing security," the speaker pointed out that "no 'comfort' standard is provided—many living at an almost 'want' standard, especially those receiving the old age pension."

"Perhaps we all suffer from the malady of thinking public services are fair game," was the speaker's answer to the charge that public services are abused. "This is common in all walks of life and administrators are aware of the possibilities," she added.

The plaint that "we can't afford extended services is surely a carry-over from depression days," she continued. "The question is 'can we afford not to help mothers and children?' It has been shown that such a practice is most uneconomical."

To those who advocate leaving the social welfare programmes to private agencies with grants from the government, Miss Touzel stated it was a bad administrative practice to vote large sums to agencies not directly responsible to the body providing the grant.

The speaker scored as a myth the belief that public service loses the personal touch and cannot produce a warm approach. She stated that "we may have been less careful to guarantee the best personnel in public services than in private agencies."

Indicating the point at which the work of private agencies should become public services, Miss Touzel said, "if a large-scale public support is necessary, the role of the private agency is no longer required."

But she continued, "However, there are many frontiers yet to be pioneered, especially in demonstrating the refinement of skills in keeping people out of trouble and in the field of the aged—which is becoming one of Canada's major problems. We must find the ways older people can be used in employment. And there is a tremendous field for research in such important matters as recreation and housing for the aged."

The speaker stressed the necessity for flexibility between public and private personnel and stated that there is a "tendency to adopt attitudes of superiority on both sides."

Concluding Miss Touzel suggested five principles for the smooth running of social welfare programmes:

1. Private agencies to continue to pioneer and demonstrate in areas not yet suitable for public services;
2. Public services to operate for the benefit of the majority of the people;
3. Public funds should, as a rule, be spent by public services and private funds by private agencies;
4. Private agencies should constantly check public opinion regarding its projects, to make sure they have not moved into what is rightly the public domain;
5. That neither private agency nor public service should be satisfied that the status quo is the final end, but that both should look out for opportunities to grow in every direction.

Following the address the company was entertained to a film show in the hall.

Today's Programme

This morning will be given over to the subjects "Unity in Adoption Procedure in the Maritimes" and "Responsibility of Agencies in interpretation, and citizen participation in Social Welfare."

An address on "Professional Standards in Social Work" will be given at the luncheon meeting by Dr. C. L. Gass, Sackville, N. B., followed by discussions on the Maritime School of Social Work and personnel needs.

Hon. H. L. Pottle, Minister of Public Welfare, Newfoundland, will speak on social welfare services in that Province at the dinner meeting.

Executive Meeting W. I.

Numerous business matters were attended to at a meeting of the Provincial Womens Institute Executive in the rest room at the Institute's Office which began at 11 a.m. yesterday morning. The president Mrs. Malcolm MacLeod presided.

Dealing with the business arising out of the minutes it was decided that the secretary employed for the handicraft exhibition would be paid a salary. Reporting on the Federated W.I., Mrs. Herring reported that a request had been received from the Alberta W.I. for a 15 minute radio broadcast by the Island President. A request was also received from the Dutch W.I. for information about local activities. Mrs. Fred Gates, West Royalty, was appointed to compile and forward a scrap book.

The Exhibition report, given by Miss Robin, showed there were 2,186 entries in the handicraft exhibits. Report on the cook book sales stated there were 500 books sold and that requests were being received for more.

Designs for Provincial Life Membership pins were submitted by Mrs. Foley, Bloomfield, and one was chosen by the executive. It was agreed that life membership would be open to any woman in the Province who has been an active member for 20 years or more.

The resolutions passed at the Provincial convention were all accepted except those dealing with courtry rallies and secretarial help which were tabled.

The committee on the revision of the constitution made their report and were re-appointed.

A policy committee was appointed to interview the government regarding the possibility of an office and rest room space. This space to be preferably on the ground floor.

In discussing the western shows now being sponsored by the W. I., the executive regretted that most of the proceeds from these shows leaves the Province, as only 25 per cent of the proceeds are retained by the W.I. sponsoring the performance, and the shows themselves are not of the highest standard. It was suggested that a concert party, made up of artists from the musical festival, be asked to tour country districts and share the profits with the sponsoring W.I. on a 50-50 basis.
