HON PREMIER ARSENAULT'S SPEECH ON ADDRESS

The Premier Deals Effectively and Convincingly with the Charge Made by the Leader of the Opposition that the Island's Claims had not been Presented.

Resuming Hon. Premier Arsenault said:— After that my friend went on about a certain interview that appeared in The Guardian on the occasion of my last visit to Ottawa, and he said I gave out the impression that we should go on our knees to the Dominion Government, and offer up thanks and blessings. Well, my friend can interpret that interview as he wishes; of course, he can read into it anything that his vivid imagination can so easily conceive, but it was not the sentiment expressed. If there has been anybody in the history of this province who has fought for provincial right, it is the Conservative Govern- ment. Since 1911, not only have they fought for provincial right, but they have succeeded, to a great extent, in having those rights conceded.

We used to hear annually in this House, repeated session after session, the idea of our claims against the Dominion. We used to have them dangled forth at every election, as a bait. We heard of them till we got sick and tired of them, and at last in the session of 1911 we were told very candidly by a man who also was sick of dangling those claims, the then leader of the Govern- ment, he told us on the floor of this House, in the very position where I now stand, that it was no use to look to Ottawa. There was no hope there, and we might just as well abandon these claims. And he was right, as far as the then Federal Government was concerned. Why? Because we know after the re-adjustment of 1907, when the then leader of the Federal Government was questioned in the House as to the readjustment that had been made with the different provinces, he said, "the settlement was final and un- alterable." And when he was asked further "What will you do if the pro- vince come back and ask for more?" he said "If they come back, the door is closed." And as far as that Govern- ment was concerned, the door was closed, and the leader of the Government in 1911 was perfectly right in saying there was no hope of looking to Ottawa.

One of those claims was the claim which my friend mentioned on the floor of this House, that is continuous communication between the Island and the mainland, which had been promised us by the terms of confederation. I am not inclined to take from any individual, or from the people of this province, the right of criticism; that is a right enjoyed by every free in- dividual, to express his mind freely on any and every subject. But if we criticize, have we not a right first to criticize the late Liberal Government. Have we not a right to criticize that man who, at an election sent down a message that if he was returned to power he would take up the question of communication between the Island and the mainland, and who, after elec- tion, never did anything to imple- ment that promise? It is said that of the dead you must speak nothing but good, and I do not wish to criticize the dead, but I desire to criticize the Government which that man re- presented at the time, criticize the Government of which he was then the mouthpiece, and which for so many years left so many things un- done.

In 1911 Sir Robert Borden came to Prince Edward Island and said: "Gentlemen, if I am returned to power I will take the earliest opportunity to solve this difficulty, and I will give it attention, and if there are any means of solving it, it will be solved." And that Government elected in 1911, of which Sir Robert Borden was the leader, did solve the difficulty. I said that if we did less criticizing and gave a little more of apprecia- tion, perhaps we would get along better. I said that Ministers and Governments are after all only human and is this not the truth. I don't think a man would obtain much more from my friend, the leader of the Opposition, if after receiving partial justice at his hands turns around and criticizes. Unless I think per- haps we would get along a little bet- ter if we placed our case reasonably before a Government, or before a Railway Commissioner, or before any- body else who has anything to do with the affairs of this Province. Yes, we have a right to push for our Provincial rights; Provincial rights were too much neglected in the past. I don't think there is oc- casion to say they have been ne- glected within the last few years, and within the term of the present Government.

Let me recite some of the things that the Province obtained in the way of Provincial rights since 1911. By the terms of Confederation we were guaranteed continuous communi- cation between the Island and the Mainland and only by means of the car ferry has this difficulty, which ex- isted for the last forty years, been solved. That is a matter of Provin- cial rights, which has been obtained since both Conservative Governments have been in power, here and in Ot- tawa. We have had recognized those claims which my friend speaks about and we have received on account, an additional subsidy of $100,000.00 a year. They put an end to the dim- inishing representation in the House of Commons which had been going on from year to year, so that now our representation there cannot fall be- low the present number of four.

They placed a four core cable be- tween New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, and a single core cable between the Island and Nova Scotia, thus giving us telegraphic communication all over Canada, and every part of America. That cable between this province and Nova Scotia enables us to communicate by phone with Nova Scotia. The cable between Port Borden and New Brun- swick enables us to communicate with New Brunswick and other provinces both by telephone and telegraph.

As for telephone communications, we stand in the same way as if Prince Edward Island were adjoining the Mainland, because there is no tele- graph or telephone fee for the use of the cable. They have also re-built, at a large expense, all the land tele- graphic lines. It has been the means of reducing telegraphic rates, of giving us the night letter service, and other advantages which we did not have up to 1912.

And finally, they are now engaged in the work of widening the gauge of the Prince Edward Island Railway, for as His Honor well says in his ad- dress, the full benefit accruing from the Car Ferry cannot be received un- til that gauge has been standardized from one end of the Province to the other, and that will not till then will Prince Edward Island come into its own.

I now come to the matter of the claims of the Province. I think if I were in the leader of the Opposition's place, I would be inclined to relegate to the background the question of claims, because the record behind him, and his party in so far as such claims are concerned, is one of utter failure as well as of negligence. We had all those claims during the time his party was in power, during the time he himself, some years ago, sat in this House, during the time dele- gates were going up and down to Ottawa.

of that claim; and so it is kept alive. The leader of the Opposition wants to know why we don't press for the balance. There is no balance as far as that is concerned—no ascertained balance. The amount $100,000.00 would not represent the value of those claims, nor would $200,000.00 rep- resent the value of those claims. But I think my friend admitted that since 1911, the time has not been oppor- tune to go up to Ottawa pressing claims. I think if we had gone there pressing claims, we would have only prejudiced our case, because, when the fate of the Empire, when the fate of the world hung in the balance, it was no time to importune the Gov- ernment. Those claims are just as good to-day as they were in 1912, and those as well as these claims which I will hereafter refer to will, in the near future have to be pressed.

Then, he comes to the Manitoba precedent, and there he says is a good claim that was not pressed at that time; and that is very true. The Manitoba precedent was not cited at that time for the very reason that it had not happened, and you cannot take advantage of a precedent un- til a precedent has been established. We were negotiating in the beginning of February and the precedent was not set until the end of February, but if we did not cite the precedent of 1912 we did cite what had already in pre- vious years been done for Manitoba and did urge consideration on the grounds that like Manitoba we had no public lands.

My Honorable friend wants to know why, since that time, since the Pre- cedent was created in the case of

(Fredericton Gleaner.)

Rev. William Harrison, D.D. Marys- ville, York county, has in his posses- sion an antique collection of old English and American newspapers which date back as far as A.D. 1280 (?). They are printed in old English type, and some are in writing; some of them are weeklies and contain the news of the week from Monday to Monday. Most of them are very small about 12x9 inches, and deal exclusiv- ly with one subject. The English pa- pers were all published in London "by authority." It is a very unique collection and shows the great pro- gress which has been made in the news- paper business. The Boston News Letter was the first paper to be printed in America in the year 1704, and today on the American continent up- wards of 15,000 papers are printed, of which over 1,000 are daily issues. One of the collections is a fac simile of the Magna Charta or Great Charter, the declaration of English independence, signed by King John, a copy of which is now on exhibition in the British Museum, London; another is a copy of the English Mercurie, which was printed in 1388 and is devoted to an account of the Spanish Armada an- other is the London Weekly News of December, 1805, which contains an ac- count of the arraignment of eight per- sons implicated in the famous gun- powder plot and their conviction and execution, including Guy Fawkes; an- other, the Intelligencer, of January 29, 1648, tells of the trial and execution of Charles I. A copy of the News of July 6th, 1665, gives an account of the great London plague; the London Gazette, September 2nd September 9th, tells of the death of Oliver Cromwell; the Gazette of September 3rd, 1666, gives a vivid description of the great London fire; another is a fac simile of the warrant (written) signed by 70 peers of the realm for the execution of Charles I, also a fac simile of the warrant for the execution of Mary Queen of Scots, signed by Queen Eliza- beth in 1587. Copies of the London Times, 1798, 1805 and 1860, contain ing an account of Admiral Nelson's victory, death and burial, also an ac- count of the battle of Waterloo on June 22nd, 1815; another copy of the London Times, 1793, tells of the ex- ecution of Louis XVI. of France. The first American newspaper, The Boston News Letter, was published on Mon- day, April 17th, and dated Monday, April 17th, to Monday, 24th of April. This paper contained nothing, but let- ters received from the old country during the preceding year. There is but four copies of that issue in exist- ence, three are in museums in the United States and the copy which Dr. Harrison has. This paper continued in existence for seventy-four years. Dr. Harrison has also a copy of the original Declaration of Independence of the thirteen States. This paper is beautifully written. Dr. Harrison nat- urally prizes this antique collection very highly and has declined to name a price for them when asked for by an antiquarian in the United States.

New York Fur Markets

(Special to The Guardian) NEW YORK, N. Y., April 10.—Sales again reached the million dollar level at the fur auction in the Masonic hall here today bringing the grand total for the first three days $2,500,000. The Marten was easily the star. This fur is in great demand for the summer use, and the bidding for it was so brisk that several lots were disposed of at prices double those paid at the midwinter auction, the prices paid for the entire collection averaged sixty per cent. higher than at the last sale. The best martin often called Hudson Bay sable brought $127 per skin. Another interesting feature of to- day's selling was the sharp advance scored by the ringtail cat. This fur when dyed looks something like martin and for this reason is popular with the manufacturers of the cheaper lines of goods. The whole collection of these pelts averaged 100 percent above the midwinter prices. These are the price ranges of the skins dis- posed of today. Martin $10 to $127. Chinese weasel 23 cents to 50 cents. Chinese racoon $1.40 to $3.50. wildcat $1 to $2.50, ringtail cat 35 cents to $3.50, otter $5.50 to $30.50, Karagan fox $1 to $4. Macedonian fox $4 to $6.50, Indian fox 50 cents to 80 cents. Australian fox $1.50 to $5.50 and wolf $1 to $21. Compared with the prices paid at the midwinter sale those got for pelts sold today showed these percentage advanced martin, sixty; Chinese weasel, forty; Chinese racoon, 25; wildcat, northern, 25; wildcat, south- western, ringtail cat, 100; otter northern, ten; otter southern, none. Australian fox, none, wolf northern, ten and wolf southwestern ten percent.
