ONTARIO AND PROHIBITION.

The decision of the Privy Council in the case of the Manitoba Liquor Law has caused no more intense interest in any Province of the Dominion than in Ontario. This arises mainly from the fact that Sir Oliver Mowat during the latter portion of his term as Premier, and Hon. G. W. Ross, since he succeeded to the leadership of the Province, had both promised that whenever the principle of Provincial Prohibition was authoritatively decided to be constitutional they would introduce a Government measure to that end. Premier Ross is now face to face with the promise made conditionally a year or two ago, but now rendered binding because of the Privy Council's recent decision.

The situation in the big Province is the more urgent because a general election is near at hand and must follow the next session of the Legislature; because at the last provincial election after 25 years of continuous power, the Liberal majority was narrow, while in the federal elections there was a considerable Conservative majority; because the principal brewing and distilling interests of the Dominion, representing many millions of capital, are located in Ontario and the Licensed Victuallers' Association represents a great power in the politics of the cities especially and of the Province generally. For all these reasons we find the Liberal journals of Ontario viewing the situation in regard to provincial prohibition with considerable trepidation.

The Toronto Globe in a recent issue discusses the question at length but with a seemingly careful avoidance of any reference to the pledges given by two successive Liberal Premiers. This is of itself significant. But the Globe admits that the Privy Council decision virtually says they can have prohibition in Ontario if the people desire it and the people at two successive plebiscites have said that they do desire it. The plebiscite of 1894 gave a majority of 80,900 in favor of prohibition in Ontario. The federal plebiscite of 1898 gave a smaller majority of 39,424, there being 154,490 votes for prohibition and 115,275 against it. All the larger cities such as Toronto, Hamilton, London, Ottawa and Kingston gave majorities against prohibition, the Toronto majority being 4,251. Nine of the county constituencies also gave anti prohibition majorities. On the other hand 23 constituencies gave majorities of 1000 and upwards; 14 others gave majorities of 150 and upwards and four gave smaller majorities in favor of prohibition.

Outside of the cities Ontario may be called a temperate Province, and yet in county after county where the Scott Act was at one time in force it has been repealed, largely as the result of political manipulation. It is therefore the fear of political complications that causes hesitancy in regard to taking up the subject of prohibition. The Globe remarks that either to give the law or to refuse it will involve consequences which will have a marked effect on the political situation. But the Liberal organ talks in a doubtful way about the difficulty of enforcing prohibition in cities, and argues that without any strong restrictive measure the country is becoming more sober from year to year. Evidently the Globe is not prepared to strongly urge upon Premier Ross the prompt fulfillment of his promise to give Ontario a prohibitory law.

Since the above was in type our despatches came to hand giving an Opposition journal's forecast of what the Ross Government are thought likely to do.

The United States army in the Philippines has been reduced from 74,000 last May to 43,000 now, and it is intended to make a further reduction to 32,000 shortly.

A Patriot reader wants to know where the editor of that journal got his authority for saying that Saint Andrew brought his mother to the Savior.

The penalties for violation of the Manitoba Liquor Act are pretty severe. If a doctor prescribes liquor for other than bona fide medicinal purposes he is liable to a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $300. Retail druggists selling liquor to persons under a doctor's prescription are liable to a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $300 with forfeiture of license if they do not keep a full and particular record of every such sale, and are further liable to not less than $200 nor more than $1000 fine, or to imprisonment for not less than three nor more than six months with forfeiture of license if liquor is allowed to be drunk or consumed on or within their premises. Licensed druggists being the only persons permitted to sell, and they only for medicinal, sacramental or mechanical purposes, all sales by other than druggists, whether by private individuals, clubs or societies, involve penalties of $200 to $1,000 or imprisonment from three to six months for each offence.

The sad and fatal shooting accident Thanksgiving Day, by which a young and promising life was suddenly extinguished and great sorrow brought to a worthy household, should enforce the lesson of the necessity for extreme care in the use of firearms. There are so many ways in which an accident may occur from a loaded gun. Many have accidentally shot or wounded themselves or others. In the State of Maine within a few weeks past twelve accidents, eight of them fatal, occurred from hunters in the woods mistaking other hunters for deer or other game. Every boy before being entrusted with a gun or pistol ought to be thoroughly instructed in the use and the danger of the weapon. All persons who go out to hunt ought to take especial care not to fire at any living thing without first making sure that it is not a human being. It cannot be too much impressed upon the young that a gun or pistol is a most dangerous thing to have or to handle.

IN THIS LOCALITY.
 The medicine dealers in this place say that there is no preparation on the market to-day that has anything like such an enormous sale as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Would this extraordinary demand for Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills continually and gradually increase if people were not being benefitted and cured by their use? Certainly not. One pill a dose 25 cents a box.

ST. ANDREW'S DAY.

So large a proportion of the people of Prince Edward Island are either of Scottish birth or descent that the annual recurrence of St. Andrew's day makes of this Island Province for the one day at least a miniature Scotland. On that day the native of North Britain if now residing in this country, delights to bring back in memory the scenes of the home land from which he feels himself to be in a voluntary sense an exile, while the children of Scottish parents, themselves ordinarily more imbued with the spirit of the new world than of the old, recall with pride the ties of blood which connect them with Scotland and her glorious history. And what is true of Prince Edward Island in that regard is true in large measure of the other Provinces of the Dominion in which the Scottish element is so conspicuous in all the relations of our national life.

For some reason which we need not here pause to consider, Saint Andrew has become a very notable saint in high northern latitudes. The Russians claim him as the founder of their national church, and thus the vast body of the Czar's subjects hold Saint Peter's brother in somewhat similar reverence to that accorded to Saint Peter himself in the Roman Catholic world. As the patron Saint of Scotland, and in a sense of Scotsmen everywhere, his day is especially honored in North Britain and throughout the Scottish communities of Canada, thus girdling the northern world with commemorative observances in his honor from year to year on the same day.

Beyond what is told in sacred story but little that is authentic has come down to our time concerning Saint Andrew. It is however told that he was an Apostle to the Gentiles, and that he suffered martyrdom at Patrae in A. D. 70, being put to death on a cross in the form of a letter X. The traditions have it that he adored and welcomed the cross on which he was about to suffer, using the words, "Hail precious cross, consecrated by the body of Christ! I come to thee exulting and full of joy. Receive me into thy dear arms." This incident forms the subject of two notable paintings, the Adoration of the Cross by Guido, and another by Andrea Sacchi preserved in the Vatican at Rome. This much at least all may believe that he was a willing and joyful martyr for the faith which he had received from the Master.

To the Scottish people the observance of St. Andrew's Day partakes more largely of a national than of a religious character. With us the day is redolent of the Land of the Heather, fragrant with memories of Scotland, garnished with song and story, with plaid and tartan, with the stirring music of the pipes and the stirring memories of a thousand years of Scottish history. It has become a festival day, much given up to Scottish melody and dances, but more frequently a day in which Scotsmen dine together and congratulate themselves on their exalted lineage and the fame achieved by men of Scottish blood. The Caledonia Club of this City has a reputation for annual banquets second to none, and already there are high expectations of the dinner which is announced to take place at the Queen Hotel on Monday evening next. We bespeak for the Caledonians a very happy gathering on that occasion.

WONDERS OF THE HEART.

All the blood in the human body passes through the heart in about three minutes. The heart beats 70 times a second, 4200 times an hour, 100,000 times a day, throwing out 2½ ounces of blood a second, 650 lbs. an hour, 7½ tons a day. It is only when supplied with pure, rich blood that the heart, an organ 6 inches long by 4 wide can accomplish this enormous amount of work and rebuild its own wasted tissues. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for heart affections because it forms heart corpuscles in the blood and gives to it that sustaining quality which is necessary to the health of every organ.
