Canned Lobster Industry Threatened

Reported Japanese Crab Meat is Supplanting Lobster in British Market.

Parties interested in the Canning business who have recently returned from Great Britain report that Japanese Crab Meat is supplanting lobsters in that market.

While of comparative recent development the packing of these large land-crabs is assuming larger proportions annually. Last year over 300,000 cases are said to have been packed. By co-operation among the most of the difficulties experienced at the outset have been overcome. Many complications in canning Crabs are akin to those encountered in packing lobsters into cans, but in an organized business strict quality gradings have been possible so that those who buy the "Fancy" grades are assured a satisfactory article. The introduction of the goods into various markets has also been systematically effected. In 1925 special attention was given to American markets and over 30,000 cases were sold there. Last year a attention was directed to the English markets and 65,000 cases were disposed of in Great Britain. The price is about five dollars per case cheaper than lobsters. Their uniformity in quality and better keeping properties make grocers willing to handle and push their sale.

The total pack of lobsters is only about 130,000 cases. Our canners depend upon European markets to consume 50 per cent and the American demand for about 35 per cent, the remaining 15 per cent in Canada and other outlets.

Few laymen can tell the difference in appearance between Japanese Crab and Canadian Lobsters, though the flavour of the latter is admittedly superior, but unfortunately, in the multiplicity of small packs and an irregularity in gradings, that advantage is lost.

Unfavorable conditions in Britain, following the Coal Strike of last year, are still apparent in the reduced spending power of the artisan classes. Expensive foodstuffs are being avoided, but the cheaper canned goods are sought.

In this way the South African Crayfish in tins gets its chance to be introduced because it sells at about ten dollars per case less than Canned Lobsters. The absence of claws, coarser texture, and poorer flavor are barely noticeable when made into salads and other concoctions that are growing more popular in Britain as here. This lower cost, aided too by a smaller risk of having "black cans" delivered has made this line a strong competitor.

A prominent exporter says, the Maritime Provinces' Canners need to concentrate their efforts more than ever to produce a truly choice and uniform quality and the trade will require to organize and cooperate to a greater extent than in the past if they are to successfully combat the new situation created by the advent of Crab and Crayfish into the markets which hitherto the Lobster has monopolized. (S. John—Telegraph and Journal, Mar. 18, 1927.)

During the war he served for four years with the Seaforth Highlanders, being twice wounded. He was appointed as junior trade commissioner at Cape Town in 1922. At the end of 1924 he was transferred to the Jamaica office with the rank of trade commissioner, and in February, 1926, was sent to Port of Spain, Trinidad.

LATE PATRICK SMITH

Citizens of Kinkora and Prince County will be shocked to learn of the sudden and unexpected death of Mr. Patrick Smith which occurred at his home in Newton at the age of 65 years. The late Mr. Smith although not in the best of health for some time did not become seriously ill until a short time ago and although the best medical skill was obtained and everything possible done to bring about his recovery the end came quite unexpectedly on Saturday. The deceased was one of the most estimable citizens of Kinkora and interested in everything for the upbuilding of that prosperous community and the province in general. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus, the C. M. B. A. and also a member of the prohibition commission. He leaves to mourn a widow and a large family to all of whom the Guardian extends sincere sympathy. The funeral takes place this morning to St. Malachis Church, Kinkora.

Satisfied That Best Team Won

MONTREAL, April 19.—"I did not see the alleged assault on the referees and therefore I cannot very well comment on it." This was the only statement President Frank Calder would make when interviewed on his arrival here today from Ottawa in regard to the events that took place at the Capitol last night, when the Senators defeated the Boston Bruins in the last game of the National Hockey League series for the world's hockey championship honors.

As soon as he received an official statement from those concerned in the reported free-for-all fight between the team officials, referees and players, he would issue a statement, the president said.

President Charlie Adams of the Boston Bruins, who arrived on the same train, was also non-communicative and beyond stating that "the best team won" he would make no further comment. Pressed for a statement the Bostonian declared that the thing had ended in Ottawa last night when the game came to a conclusion.

After long research, television was inaugurated last week. For the first time men sat in New York and looked 200 miles over a telephone wire at other men in Washington, D. C. Photo shows Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover as he appeared at his office in the capital, while speaking to and being seen by Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in New York city. Listening in on the conversation are: General J. J. Carty, A. E. Berry and Stephen Davis. The arrow shows the box like apparatus in which the distant face or scene is shown.

An informal study of the Prince of Wales, which he owns and which he is said to prefer to all other portraits, is now on exhibition in New York. It was painted by a young English artist, Douglas Chandora.

IN MEMORIAM

MR. PATRICK SMITH

The death of Mr. Patrick Smith, Newton, Lot 26, on April 16th, came unexpectedly although he had been confined to his house for a month previously with a severe cold, no serious results were thought of until a few days before his death, when the best medical treatment proved unavailing.

The late Mr. Smith was a highly respected member of Kinkora parish, and took a leading part in everything that tended to the welfare of his school district of the community in which he lived. For the past three years he was a member of the Prohibition Commission and in that capacity he performed his duties zealously and faithfully. His funeral took place to Kinkora Church Monday morning and despite the bad roads was largely attended. Requiem High Mass was sung by the pastor Rev. M. J. Smith, who was assisted in the services at the grave by Rev. J. J. Macdonald and Rev. Geo. McCabe. The Knights of Columbus of Summerside Council and the Kinkora Branch C. M. B. A. of which branches the deceased was a member, attended at the funeral. The pall bearers were: P. J. Smith, Patrick Mulligan, Michael Mulligan, John Greenan, Wilbert McCarvill, John A. McCarvill.

He leaves to mourn a widow (nee Mary A. Kelly of Kelly's Cross) three sons and two daughters, also two brothers and three sisters to all of whom the sympathy of the Guardian is extended.

Chicago Detectives Placed on Probation

(Canadian Press)

CHICAGO, April 19.—Detectives on the Chicago city police force were placed on probation yesterday for a three months period. The probation is the result of an announcement by "go get em" Mike Hughes, newly appointed chief of police that Chicago is to be rid of its criminals ninety days hence.

William O'Connor, chief of detectives, following a conference with his superior called in workers and curtly told them, "you are all on probation, bring in the crooks and plenty of them, or off goes your head."

Sectional steel armor, covered with hard rubber, has been invented to be placed around pneumatic tires on heavy motor vehicles to guard them against puncture.

IT PAYS TO GET THE FACTS

A large proportion of all the nerve energy generated in a normal body is expended in the act of seeing.

Eyes are often found to be defective so that although vision is still good, they are consuming twice or three times their allotted portion of nerve force, thus robbing other vital organs of their motive power.

The result is serious physical disorders—often in remote parts of the body.

Two out of every ten people are in this fix, yet the real cause of their trouble is often not even suspected until a thorough examination discloses the facts.

If there is any reason whatever to suspect eye strain, the common sense thing to do is to have a thorough examination and Grand Falls—one of the world's greatest cataracts. Brought into the public eye in the recent territorial Labrador award to Newfoundland against Canada, the waterpower of this rugged domain is regarded as one of the greatest plums known. Chief among the great power cataracts is the Grand Falls, one of the mightiest in the world. They were discovered in 1839, but have been seen by few white men. The falls have a vertical drop of 316 feet. The banks of the Grand river rise in towering cliffs. The illustration on the right, made from a rare engraving, shows the Grand Falls viewed from a projection of rock below facing is the canyon, a quarter of a mile below the falls. For some time after the privy council judgment there was doubt concerning the actual ownership of Grand Falls. The arrival of the text of the decision, however, removes this doubt and it is admitted that the judgment awarded the cataract to Newfoundland.
