To Produce Surgical Cleanliness

There is a new kind of cleanliness in the world today, one that cannot be secured by the use of soap and water. It means a cleanliness so perfect that all bacteria or germs are destroyed and the conditions for their growth removed. These conditions can be secured by use of harmless agents of which the leading one is or as usually called, "Peroxide". This is being largely used as a mouth wash, gargle, as an application to wounds to prevent infection and for any purpose where a cleansing germicidal application is needed. Bottles 25, 40 and 75 cents.

MINERS KILLED AT WILKESBARRE.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 23.—Eight workers were killed and six others seriously injured by an explosion of gas at the prospect Colliery of the Lehigh Coal Company here today. Two of the injured probably will die. The accident occurred in the red ash vein at a point nearly two miles from the shaft. A heavy pocket of feeder gas that had accumulated behind a wall of coal and leaping behind the naked lights of the miners ignited, causing a terrific explosion.

KING GEORGE SHOWS REGARD FOR CANADIANS BY SECON D REVIEW OF THE CONTINGENT

LONDON, Feb. 4.—(Correspondence)—On the eve of their leaving England for the area of hostilities His Majesty King George reviewed the whole of the Canadians quartered on Salisbury Plain and the townships and hamlets round about. This was the second time His Majesty had shown his regard for the forces sent by the Dominion to the Motherland in paying them a personal visit of inspection, for some weeks before Christmas the King, accompanied by Queen Mary and attended among others by the late Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener, journeyed to Salisbury and made a thorough inspection of the soldiers of the Maple Leaf.

Today's visit, like the previous one, was characterized by an absence of marked ceremoniousness. His Majesty left Waterloo at nine in the morning, being attended by Lord Kitchener as far as the railway station. Lord Kitchener did not proceed further, the King later being attended by Sir Charles Cust, R. N., and Major Clive Wigram. Arriving at Amesbury shortly before eleven, His Majesty was met by General Pitcairn Campbell, commanding the Southern division. The party immediately entered a royal car attached to a light engine and proceeded direct to Hamilton Camp, which adjoins the railway. Three hundred yards away on a stretch of grass were drawn up Canadian troops of all arms. Men and horses looked in splendid condition. The sun gave its welcome brightness to the spectacle and high overhead several military aeroplanes were circling. His Majesty on alighting immediately greeted General Alderson and his staff, and straightaway proceeded to inspect the lines. This done the King returned to the saluting base and took up a position where the Royal Standard was floating. Promptly at noon the march past began to the strains of a regimental band which was directly facing His Majesty. Near the King there were standing General Campbell, General Alderson, Sir Charles Cust, Major Clive Wigram, Major General Altham, Colonel Carleton Jones, Col. Bridges, General Hickson, General Sir Arthur Durward, Col. Hamilton, Sir Henry Walker (general manager, L. and S. W. Railway) and Col. Lloyd.

SPLENDID GATHERING.

It was particularly remarked that King George looked bronzed and well and was much more vivacious than on his previous visit to the Canadian camp. Another feature which was specially noted was that the whole of His Majesty's entourage engaged freely in conversation among themselves. His Majesty never took his eyes from the splendid gathering of men, mounted and unmounted, which for over an hour passed before him. It seemed impossible to realize that these were the troops who for months had been floundering amidst rivers and lakes of mud and slush on Salisbury Plain. Without exception the whole of the review looked in the most robust health and their uniforms and accoutrements were as smart as could have been wished. The King had obviously moved to admiration at the fine show before him, and His Majesty's appreciation was reflected outspokenly by the hundreds of civilians who were gathered at no great distance.

At the head of the columns were the Canadian Horse Artillery, followed in order by the Dragoons and Strathcona's Horse. The former looked very fine in yellow, close-fitting oilskins, while the latter wore their Stetson hats. The horses, it may be added, no longer limp from their sufferings among the privations and rigors of a British winter, but on the other hand were curveting and prancing to the strains of the martial music, while the swords of their riders gleamed bright in the sunshine.

Highlanders from Montreal.

Following, there came the Canadian cyclist corps, with rifles strapped to their machines then more artillery, and after them the Canadian Engineers, with Col. Armstrong at the head. The infantry were the next; first the men of Ontario, then Colonel Turner looking fresh and fit in spite of a recent spill, riding a little ahead of the Highlanders. The approach of the latter was heralded by the skirl of the pipes, immediately at their head rode Col. Loomis, of the 5th Montreal, followed by the 48th Toronto, Col. Currie and Col. Leckie leading. Particular attention was concentrated upon this unit. After them came the Army Service Corps and Medical Corps, which brought the procession to an end.

For a few moments the King chatted with the officers, and Mrs. Alderson, wife of the general in command, had the honor of being presented to His Majesty. Meanwhile the troops, now dismissed, went at the double to the railway line and gave the royal train a mighty round of long-continued cheering as it went back to Amesbury.

Fourth Brigade Detached.

Billeting officers proceeded to France some time previous to the King's last review. Over 500 men just arrived from Canada are comfortably housed at Tidworth and are linked up to the twelfth battalion, which has become a reserve for the Princess Patricia's. The 17th Battalion has become a reserve for the Highland Brigade and 500 men have already been transferred, leaving only about twenty men of the 17th at Tidworth and 150 digging trenches at Lard Hill. Colonel Worthington is now temporarily commanding the 17th, vice-Col. Struan Robertson. The whole of the fourth brigade at Tidworth are now detached from General Alderson's Canadian contingent and placed under Col. W. R. James, an Imperial artillery officer in command of the training depot at Tidworth.

INCREASED PENSIONS FOR FIGHTING MEN

LONDON, Feb. 20.—A special committee of the house of commons, which has been considering the matter of pensions for fighting men and their widows, has at last made its report, recommending largely increased rates for all classes of pensioners. The new rates, if approved by parliament, are to take effect March 1st.

Under the new scheme, the rate for total disablement will be $6.25 a week, with an additional allowance of sixtythree cents a week for each child.

All the committee's recommendations show about a hundred per cent. increase over the rates in effect prior to the war.

A widow without children is to receive from $2.50 to $2.75 a week If there are children, this amount is substantially increased.

The allowance for wives, whose husbands are at the front is increased to a rate from $3.15 a week for those who are childless to $6.25 a week for the mother of four children.

The question of pensions to officers will probably be dealt with later by the committee. At present the widow of a flag captain, officer, or commodore is given $600 a year, with an allowance of about $100 a year additional for each child.

TALES TOLD BY MEN IN THE FIGHTING LINES ON LAND AND ON SEA

LOVELY DAY OF SHELLING

An English woman engaged in nursing work in connection with a field ambulance in Belgium writes:—

We had a lovely day of shelling on Monday. At about 10.30, whiz—bang! just outside our house and all our glass came shattering down. Whiz—bang! another, and another, and yet another. I turned to Helen, who was busy with socks, and remarked that as they were big shells we had better retire to the cellar for a bit.

We went down to the cold, damp cellar and stood about on bits of wood and coal and listened to the continual whiz, bang and crash of the big shells. The noise was pretty nearly deafening and they must have plumped in about one hundred. Out of all that lot luckily we only got two wounded men—a priest, wounded by a flying bit in his face, and a solider.

Writing the following day the correspondent says: The big cannonade is still going on. There must be a tremendous battle. I am hoping we are gaining ground, and that we shall soon move on down the road. I should just love to move forward into Brussels. The weather has been truly awful lately, nothing but rain. I live in knee-high rubber boots and my oilskins. I am sure I shall never be able to get back to hobble-skirts and "fashionable sides," as our American nurse says.

We have all been thinking of going to Furnes for the afternoon just for a joy-ride. We have been hard at it for nearly a fortnight without a break, so we think of going in. You have no idea what a pleasure a trundle into Furnes is when you have not done a thing but remain in two smelly, dingy, little "postes" day in and day out.

I will tell you what the pleasure consists of—getting into a motor-ambulance that has seen its best days and trundling over broken holey pave, that nearly jolts one's inside out—probably at least one, and perhaps more, sticking in the deep mud and all having to get out and push and shove to get the car out, and eventually arriving at Furnes, having a mad rush round the shops and grabbing all the stores we can find. It all seems so new and interesting after a desolate town. Then a mad rush back again over the same old, bumpy, holey road and home to our tumble-down cottage.

FOUR ROBINSON CRUSOES

Four survivors of the warship Good Hope, sunk off Chili had been placed on a Pacific Island for look-out duty, and they might still have been there like so many Robinson Crusoes, if H. M. S. Canopus had not called and taken them off.

Arthur L. Forbes, lately of the Good Hope, writes to a friend:

"I feel I must write you a few lines thanking you for your good wishes, etc., enclosed with the supply of clothing you so kindly sent out here for the crew of H. M. S. Good Hope, but which, alas! were not destined to ever reach that ship, although some of the clothing did reach four of the crew, three others and myself, who were taken by this ship from an island off Chili, where we had been landed for look-out duties, while our ships lay in safety behind the island.

"The men out here are very joyful now that the Good Hope and Monmouth were so amply avenged on Dec. 8 at the Falklands."

FOUND PRISONER A FRIEND

A story is related of the meeting of a German seaman and a stoker in one of our light cruisers which was in Sunday's fight.

Glancing round the ranks of German survivors who had been picked up, the stoker was surprised to notice a familiar face. He looked closer, and a smile of recognition lightened the features of the Teuton.

"Why it's old Schmidt!" the astonished stoker ejaculated. "What the —— are you doing here?"

The German laughed. "I'm from the Blucher, marey," he replied in good English.

The two men had at one time been firemen in Camden Town, but had lost sight of each other for several years.

WANT SOCKS AND MORE SOCKS

An officer in the A. S. C. writes:

There are not enough socks. In this dampness we can't receive too many, and they get so muddy that they have to be thrown away and often cannot be replaced. Indelible pencils, paper, and envelopes are things that one bor-
