Government Marketing Board
 OTTAWA, Jan. 25 (CP)—Agriculture commodities should enjoy parity on the basis of 1926 prices, the Canadian chamber of agriculture was told today by president J. H. Weston of Regina, who also is president of the Saskatchewan wheat pool.
 He said the wheat pools believed a definite marketing policy should be established and complete control should be vested in the Canadian wheat board.
 The Canadian government, also should negotiate directly with the British government with a view to establishing price levels for Canadian wheat which would bear a proper relationship to prices of other commodities.
 Mr. Weston said this would involve establishment of parity prices and since 1926 price levels are generally regarded as coming close to parity, the wheat pools consider these levels should be used for the price.
 "He believed the chamber should formulate a policy along the lines that: 1. The policy approved a year ago requesting the establishment of a producer marketing board should be waived, and that, as a war measure, approval should be given to the establishment of government marketing boards, with producer representation in an advisory capacity; 2. That all possible steps should be taken to improve the position of the farmer and the public generally; 3. That the necessity of parity prices for agricultural commodities, and the foregoing for the duration of the war does not mean that the Canadian chamber of agriculture has abandoned its policy in support of marketing legislation."

Army's Set-Up From Division To Foot Squad
 Military Command and Organization Made Plain for Civilian Reader of Current News
 By FRANK FLAHERTY
 Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Jan. 24 (CP)—As the manhood of the Empire again mobilizes for war a bewildering succession of military terms greets the eye of the casual reader. Recruits entering the army learn their meaning by experience and instruction but civilians are sometimes confused. A glance through the organization of the Canadian Active Service Force provides concrete illustrations of the meaning of the commoner terms.
 Canada has two divisions mobilized, one in England and one at home. The division is the largest Canadian military organization at present and contains about 12,500 men, divided among artillery, engineer, signals, infantry and servicing units of different functions. It is commanded by a major-general.
 Main components of a division are three brigades of infantry and three platoons, each commanded by an infantry brigadier, and consists of three rifle battalions, using service rifles and light machine guns.
 There are also machine gun battalions which use heavy machine guns in the air in order to pass over obstacles such as hills, woods or buildings. It has a high "trajectory" term used by gunners to denote the elevation reached by a projectile in the air before striking its objective. The field gun has a longer barrel, a flatter trajectory, and a greater range than a howitzer.
 Each battery consists of a number of sections of two guns or howitzers each. A battery is commanded by a major, while a lieutenant commands a section and a sergeant heads a subsection or the crew of a single gun.
 The new set-up now being placed in effect with the first overseas division in England provides for three field regiments in divisional artillery. Each regiment consists of two batteries and each battery of a number of "troops" while each troop includes a number of sections. Divisional engineers are organized in companies.
Regimental Organization
 This summary of the formations included in a division makes no mention of two terms commonly used both in and out of the army: regiment (in reference to infantry) and squad. A regiment is a recruiting organization and may include one or more battalions. In former years most of the regiments of the non-permanent militia included at least two battalions one called the active and one the reserve battalion. A few years ago all but two were put on a one-battalion basis.
 The regiments mobilized for the first and second divisions were called upon to provide battalions at war strength. Each infantry unit of the first division left behind in Canada a nucleus of all ranks which is called a depot.
 "Squad" is a term used freely to designate any small body of troops, usually when they are in training. Thus a squad may be a group ranging from a half-dozen to 50 men, receiving instruction in drill, bayonet fighting, or rifle shooting.
 Another term sometimes used is "detail." It designates a small group of men detached from their regular unit for some special duty. The men called up from the non-permanent militia units to guard air stations, docks, canals, bridges and other key installations in Canada are organized in details.

Mr. Fred Martin was called upon to read a brief address and presented the boys with a well filled purse. The games for the evening was conducted by Mr. Lincoln Dewar, the music was supplied by Mr. Harry and Regie Mellish and Miss Bertha Mellish all of the Union Road. A bountiful lunch was served by the hostess. The evening was brought to a close by singing For They Are Joll Good Fellows.

 A bricklayer was building a wall when a man in overalls came along and passed some remarks about bricklaying in general. The bricklayer, somewhat annoyed, asked sarcastically:—"And wot do you do for a living?"
 "I'm a precision fitter," the other replied, "and in our trade we have to work to a thousandth of an inch."
 "Really?" said the bricklayer. "And 'ow many thousands are there in an inch?"
 The fitter scratched his head, and then replied:—"Bilmev, millions of 'em."

"Hopalong" Rides Again At Capitol
 Straight-from-the-shoulder action and plenty of it is the keynote of "Hopalong Cassidy," our favorite range hero, rides back to town in "Silver on the Sage," latest thrill-story of high life in the desert cattle country. With William Boyd again playing the dashing "Hoppy," the picture had its first local showing yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.
 A frontier clash between rustlers and cattle-owners finds Boyd, the "Bar 20" foreman, at even more of a disadvantage than usual. One rustler chief is a cinch for Boyd to handle, but this time the band is led by twin brothers, one a gambling hall owner, the other a double-crossing ranch foreman. When either is suspected of a crime, the other is on hand to furnish the perfect alibi.
 Boyd adopts the technique of posing as bad a character as the rustlers, themselves, and in this way not only avoids a fatal head-on collision but gains their confidence and learns some startling secrets. His ability earns him the admiration of every frequenter of the gambling tables. His shooting-eye wins him the respect of the outlaws.
 Boyd's feud with the bandits, which starts when they rustle "Bar 20's" prize cattle, comes to a head when they killed a wealthy rancher and pin the crime on Boyd's range pal, "Lucky," played again by Russell Hayden. The "Bar 20" foreman now throws off his disguise, declares open warfare on the gang and fights it out with them in one of the most exciting and thrill-packed battles ever to figure in a "Cassidy."
 Others in the cast are George Hayes and Stanley Ridges.
