THE BROOKFIELD, HARTSVILLE AND HUNTER RIVER CONGREGATIONAL PICNIC The annual Congregational Picnic of the Brookfield congregation which was held in Arlington on the afternoon of Friday, Aug. 13th, was a splendid success. As the shades of evening gathered round the young people and all who had had the pleasure of being present at the picnic wended their way homeward feeling that they had spent one of the best afternoons of their lives. The home rule party in this country consists of women. Necessity knows no law and is usually too poor to hire a lawyer. A man full of himself is as disagreeable as a man full of whiskey. The occasional bird that gets up in October, one beats the covers for grouse adds to the sport, and the wonderfully elusive flight of the bird makes the successful shot one to be remembered. Woodcock demands the careful selection of ammunition with the dependable and accurate qualities of
