SANDRA THE JEALOUS By Jane Phelps

A DINNER IN THE COUNTRY CHAPTER CIII.

I cried myself to sleep. Why, after one of Everett's unusual considerations of me I should always have to refer to Leola, his first wife, I cannot explain. I had been jealous of Irma Barton-would be jealous of anyone whom Everett showed a liking; but far more jealous of the woman who once had occupied my place in his home and in his affections. And Rose's unconsidered speech had made me still more sensitive. For as he held me closely in his arms there had flashed through my mind: "Just so he held her, just so he once told her of his love, just so he kissed her." I indulged in a perfect orgy of self pity before I finally slept.

But in the morning I felt differently. He had held me in his arms, he had told me of his love, and had kissed me. I would not let even the thought that he had given his first wife the same tokens of affection, spoil my happiness. In this mood I went down to breakfast. Everett looked keenly at me. "Did you sleep well, Sandra?" he asked as he gave me my good-morning kiss-so often omitted. "Yes, thank you. After I had got to sleep I didn't waken until Hetty told me my bath was ready."

"I am glad, because I have planned a nice afternoon's motor trip and a dinner in the country. I have asked Barrett Edmonds to join us," this last to Rose. "After he left, Rose said: 'I shall have to get Walter Kemp on the telephone.' 'Why?' 'I promised to meet him again this afternoon for tea. Of course I can't now,' she looked so disappointed that I asked: 'But wouldn't you rather go to the ride and dinner as long as Barrett is to be along, than just to have tea with Mr. Kemp?' 'No indeed! I would rather spend half an hour with him, than hours with anyone else.' 'Bad as that!' I laughingly replied, thinking Rose was simply making a show of her usual exaggerations, not dreaming she was in earnest. 'Yes, bad as that!' she replied as she went to the telephone. 'Naturally I heard part of the disjointed conversation-just enough to know that they had impressed one another enough to prefer being together than with others. Rose said: 'You know I would!' Then: 'Indeed I will, no I'll not let anything prevent. Of course I'd rather be with you,' etc. proving plainly that my premise was correct. 'And what about the ride, however, to Rose. Yet I couldn't help feeling sort of shut out, as if I wasn't wanted. Rose was my guest, yet she was making all sorts of plans which did not include me. I never thought that had it not been for Everett's training in the conventions, I would probably have thought it all right. It was only because he had made me understand what my duties were as a social factor, that I understood Rose's faux pas. 'We had a delightful ride and Rose was charmingly devoted to Barrett Edmonds. Rose had said she would try to be there, which rather pleased me. Everett was the perfect host. As usual I was very proud of him, yet kept thinking of what Rose had said about his age. 'Thoughtless people can cause a great deal of trouble, and what Rose had said was childish much of it even silly, but kept recurring to me until we reached the road house where we were to dine. Then the perfect smoothness with which we were served and the attention given Everett, consoled me for having an "old man" for a husband. The dinner was perfection. Everett had ordered it by telephone so no ugly paper menus were passed around and there were no long waits between the courses. 'The music was delightful. Everett danced with both Rose and me, and smilingly told me that for once he would waive his objections to my dancing in public with anyone but him. So Barrett and I had a wonderful dance. If Barrett made love to me-a little, it did not make it the less enjoyable. 'I had heard that open confession is good for the soul. So I am confessing that I liked the admiration, the compliments, Barrett Edmonds gave me that evening. Tomorrow - Rose Makes Remarks That Hurt.

Prince Edward Island Hospital Annual Collection

In accordance with the promise made a year ago, no appeal of any kind in behalf of the Prince Edward Island Hospital has been made or has been authorized during the year by the Trustees. The time has now arrived, however, when we must have the liberal financial support of the people of Queens and Kings counties, if we are to continue to maintain and increase the efficiency of the hospital, without increasing largely the rates of paying patients, and reducing our free accommodation for those who are unable to pay. A number of copies of our last annual report have been sent to the Secretary of the Board of Trustees in every school district, and we would like to have this report carefully read by everyone.

Outstanding Features of the Work,

- 1. The number of people served by the Hospital, by far the largest in our history, shows the imperative need of more accommodation and equipment. 2. The increased cost of everything used in the Hospital, - Coal increased $1,892.70; groceries, $1,482.42; medicine, $804.14; meat and fish, $321.78, or an increase of $4,500, on four items alone. 3. Salaries reduced $476.76. 4. The very liberal support given the Hospital by the majority of the people which alone made it possible for us to "carry on."

The few figures given herewith will show you that the difference between receipts and expenditures will be greater this year than last and that your strong support is necessary. Further, new equipment is constantly required if we are to keep the Hospital in the first class and a credit to the province. A contagious disease ward is something we should provide at once and we can do so only if we get your generous support.

In accordance with the Trustees' Report of last year, we are now asking the people of Queens and Kings counties to give us the assistance needed. Outside of Charlottetown the collections are being made through the School Trustees, who have been asked to appoint collectors to call on the people of their district beginning November first. In Charlottetown, the collections will be made by envelopes which will be left at every house on Friday and Saturday, October 31st and November 1st, and will be taken up on the following Monday.

- The Trustees wish to urge as follows: - To the School Trustees-Please see you get good collectors and start them out promptly. To the Citizens of Charlottetown-Have your envelopes ready for the collectors on Monday, morning, November 3rd. And to Everybody-Give according to your ability. The cause is a good one. All monies received will go to make someone a little more comfortable, and give them a better chance for life. That someone might be you.

W. K. ROGERS, Chairman Board of Trustees.

WILL FIGHT CLOSING OF CAMP HILL HOSPITAL

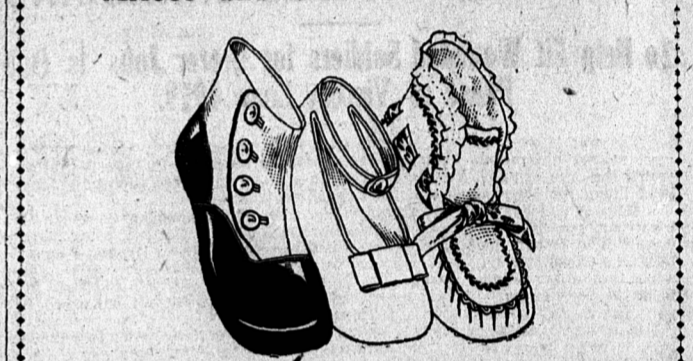

HALIFAX, Oct. 28.-The fight against the closing of Camp Hill hospital is being waged more vigorously than ever. The G. W. V. A. have taken the matter up and the limit support Mayor Parker to the limit in opposing that the right of the city, and particularly those of the city men, are respected in every way. Dr. Hamilton, secretary of the provincial G. W. V. A., wired V. G. McNeill, president of the Dominion G. W. V. A., protesting against the closing of the hospital and the serious predicament several hundred returned men would be in if the orders to close the hospital on November 15th were carried out. In reply President McNeill stated that there was no official confirmation that the hospital would be closed in the near future.
