DIVINE SERVICES PLAYED ON BARREL-ORGAN

(British United Press)

LONDON, Oct. 26.—The only church in England where the musical part of divine service is still played on a barrel-organ as it was more than a century ago has just been discovered.

It is the Church of St. Thomas a Becket, at Brightling, which was built before the Norman Conquest, and stands on the highest point of the Sussex sheep downland.

For more than eighty-two years the organ has been played by father and son. Mr. Henry Croft, who is in his eightieth year, and has lived all his life in the village, has turned the handle every Sunday for forty-two years.

His father, James Croft, was "organist" for forty years.

The barrel-organ has six stops and two barrels, each containing twelve tunes. One barrel contains hymn tunes for Lent, Easter, Christmas and other festivities, while the other contains chants, psalms and voluntaries.

The "organist" turns the handle with his right hand, manipulates the stops with the other, and works the bellows with his feet.

"Other organs may sound better," said Mr. Croft, "but our barrel-organ seems like a part of life itself to me. We have had an American organ, a modern pipe organ, and a harmonium in recent years, but the barrel-organ has survived them all."

Rudyard Kipling, who lives a few miles away, often attends the services at St. Thomas a Becket's Church. Erightling has also another claim to fame.

John Fuller, who gave the barrel-organ in 1810, and was a wealthy if eccentric landowner, built a great pyramid in the churchyard to serve as his tomb.

It bears no name to date, only a verse from Gray's Elegy, and its originator's memory is perpetuated locally by the description of "Fuller's Folly."

POLICE RECOVER STAMPS WORTH $6,400, STOLEN IN 1926

TORONTO, Oct. 26.—Sixty-four hundred dollars worth of postage stamps collected from foreign countries all over the world, some dating back as far as 1840, the property of the Marks Stamps Co., 462 Spadina Ave., Toronto, and stolen more than three years ago, were recovered today by Detective-Sergeant Greenlee and Detective Harry Clarke, headquarters division, in a house on Markham St.

The recovery was due to a local collector being called in to examine the stamps, with a view to buying

This man was a client of the Marks Co., and at once recognized the stamps as having been stolen from that firm. He informed the company, police were called in, and the stamps which are in book form, were brought to headquarters.

The man who stole the stamps is now dead, Leslie A. Davenport, general manager of the Marks Co., told The Star. He was once employed by the company.

"These stamps, prior to three years ago, were stolen from our stock over a period of two years," Mr. Davenport said. "It is like finding $5,000 to get them back. They are from all foreign countries. Some ofthem are stamps of the earliest issue in the world, dating back as far as 1840, the year the first postage stamps was ever issued, which was by Great Britain.

The most valuable individual stamps in the collection are those of 1840, valued at $25 each.

"Who has the rarest stamp in the world to-day?" The Star asked Mr. Davenport. "A wealthy man in Utica N. Y., has the rarest stamp in the world," he said. "It is a British Guiana one-cent stamp of the year 1856, and it is valued at $40,000 by this man. I had the pleasure three weeks ago of valuing it.'

PROGRESS IN SURVEY FOR CANAL

AMHERST, Oct. 26.—Survey work upon the Chignecto canal is being rapidly pressed. One party of engineers had crossed over the water shed while a second party are within a short distance of the height of land

The advance party are now conducting boring operations along the west branch of the river, and expect to be through to the sea by the end of the month. It is understood that the surveyors will next give their attention to the depth of water in the channels of Cumberland Basin and Bale Verte. These figures must be secured in connection with the present survey.

After concluding this work it is expected that the representatives of the Department of Railways and Canals will start to survey the Musiquasa route for the proposed canal and later give their attention to the route at Aulac.

They have several months of hard work ahead of them. Since the survey party has been around the head of the marsh, their work has been difficult, as the operations have been carried out upon floating bog land several feet in depth. Test borings have been along the entire route between 700 and 1500 feet apart.

Gravel beds have been encountered in certain instances while the borings also showed a strip of sandstone along the proposed line of survey. The surveyors and members of their party have had several exciting experiences upon the bog land surrounding the marsh lakes, and on more than one occasion the boats which they have been using upon the lakes have sunk beneath them.

HANGS SELF WHEN EXECUTIONER FAILS

LONDON, Oct. 26.—(British United Press)—The courtyard of the main prison of Zagreb (Jugo-Slavia) was the scene of a terrible spectacle recently. Four Croatian bandits had been sentenced to death, and four gallows were erected in the courtyard.

The gallows consisted of a rudely-made gibbet with a stool upon which the condemned man stood while the rope was fastened round his neck, and which was then kicked from under him.

By 4 a. m. in the morning an immense crowd had gathered in the prison yard. At seven o'clock the executioner arrived with an assistant, whose duty is was to place the noose around the neck of the unfortunate men.

The bandit Perpic was the first to be led out. On being asked if he had a last wish to demand, he turned to the journalists.

"Describe my death," he said, "as vividly as possible. I have no complaint against anyone, and am satisfied with my fate. Which of these gibbets is mine? I don't need an executioner, I can do the job myself."

His death agony lasted eleven minutes, and the next victim, who had been led out too soon, watched for seven minutes the death struggles of his comrade. Stepping up to his gallows he shouted, "Good-bye life."

His agony lasted fourteen minutes.

The third was called Perpic the short. He exclamed: "Good luck to everybody. I ask pardon for all I have done."

The executioner's assistant was by now almost in a state of collapse. His trembling hands tied the cord so badly that the condemned man fell to the ground three times when the stool was removed.

Mad with fury he hurled himself on the executioner. "What are you doing, you clumsy beast. If I had been in your place I'd have you strung up in a minute."

Snatching the rope from the hands of the executioner, the victim tied it round his neck, carefully tested the knot, kicked the stool away, and launched himself into eternity.

One of the strangest things about this Macabre execution was the fact that although the death agony of each man lasted at least ten minutes the victmis showed more courage than their executioners.

CABLE HEAD GREENWICH NOTES

Digging is all completed around those parts, not much shipping has been done yet, every one is waiting for the price to go up.

The many friends of Mr. Ira MacLaren are glad to learn he is improving after his severe attack of pneumonia.

Mr. Willie Rose, North Lake, was a visitor to Cable Head recently.

Mrs. Frank McLaren, Greenwich, was a visitor to Cable Head last week.

KATHERINE ALICE NICHOLSON

Death again has entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel M. Nisholson and taken from them their second and only remaining daughter, Katherine Alice, a young girl in her fifteenth year. About a year ago she had an attack of pleura-penumonia and gradually through the year grew weaker and weaker till death came on the seventh of October to end the sufferings which she had born so patiently. Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson have the sympathy of a host of friends and neighbours in the loss of a loving and dutiful daughter.

She is not dead,—the child of our affection,—
But gone unto that school
Where she no longer needs our poor protection,
And Christ himself doth rule.

The funeral service on the afternoon of the ninth, at which very many were present from all over the nighbourhood, was conducted by Rev. A. E. Chapman of Hunter River. Interment was made in the Hartsville cemetery.
