Italian Seaplane Badly Damaged and Will Be Destroyed

(Canadian Press)

ABOARD U. S. RICHMOND, Aug 26. —The discovery late Sunday night of the missing Italian seaplane piloted by Lieut. Locatelli and the rescue of its four occupants after tossing about for more than eighty hours on the bleak waters of the North Atlantic came in dramatic fashion.

The Richmond, flagship of Rear Admiral Magrader conveying a squadron to the United States world fliers was putting out to sea for the night after a fruitless all day search along Greenland ice pack when at 11.34 o'clock flares were seen. Immediately there was renewed activity aboard and the course was changed in the direction of the lights which reappeared at intervals. It was after midnight when the plane, bobbing on the water was picked up by the Richmond's searchlight. A line was thrown to them and the plane was hauled astern and the fliers were taken off. They were suffering only from fatigue and sea sickness, and were soon restored after partaking of hot coffee and sandwiches. The wings and steering apparatus of the plane were damaged and it was decided to destroy the craft.

DROVE S'SIDE-CH'TOWN STAGE FIFTY-ONE YEARS AGO

Mr. Ewen C. Cameron of Hyde Park, Mass., And Formerly Of Augustine Cove, Revisits the Scenes Of His Youth.

(Summerside Journal)

Mr. Ewen C. Cameron of Hyde Park, Mass., and his son Carlton W., of Washington, D. C, arrived in Summerside by motor car on Sunday afternoon, having come by Pictou and Charlottetown on a visit to Mr. Cameron's sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Cannon. It is 51 years since Mr. Cameron, sr., left his native place, Augustine Cove. Previous to leaving the Island he was driver of the stage coach between Charlottetown and Summerside and it was partly for this reason that he came in his car over the old route to observe the changes since he left here. In Charlottetown he had the plasur of meeting a relative in the person of Chief of Police Cameron and several other friends. This is the first visit of his son to the Island. The latter holds a very responsible position in the Federal Treasury Department at Washington, D. C. Both while in Summerside are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wallie Baker. Mr. Cameron, Sr., expects to remain on the Island for several weeks, but his son will only be able to remain here for a few days. Mr. Cameron has two other sons, Ewen C., Jr., with the Standard Oil Co., and Edwin L. with the Baraqua Sugar Co., in Cuba.

When it is taken into consideration that Mr. Cameron has not seen his native Island for over half a century, it can be well imagined that the changes he sees are very notable. As the driver of the old-time stage coach between Charlottetown and Summerside it was a matter of great interest for him to go over the familiar ground once more. He little thought as he made his last trip over the old route by the old method that in over half a century he would return in a self propelled conveyance of his own of a kind which at that time had not even been dreamed of.

And while autoists today may criticize parts of that road, to Mr. Cameron who has good reason to remember what it was like in the long ago, it stands today, even the worst of it—a marvel of improvement—so changed for the better that he could hardly believe his eyes. Driving in the opposite direction over this route daily in those days was the late Mr. William Manson, of whom Mr. Cameron has fond recollections, father of our esteemed townsman, Mr. Ed. Manson. The Summerside terminus was Crabbe's Hotel. which was situated near the site of the present Journal building.

Mr. Cameron is greatly impressed with the many changes and improvements which he sees both in Charlottetown and Summerside. Naturally of course he misses some of the familiar faces of long ago, many of whom passed from mortal sight.

It is pleasing to note that he is in splendid health and spirits and carries his 73 years like a youth of fifty. He declares that his next visit to the Island will be by aeroplane and talking about air navigation brought to his mind an interesting incident of the old stage-coaching days. It was one day when the House of Assembly in Charlottetown had just adjourned when some of th emembers going home in the coach were speaking of the great balloon ascension in Paris—a notable event just then which was being much discussed. Some of the gentlemen present ridiculed the suggestion made at the time by another that the air would in time be mastered by man. Hon. Herbert Bell, of Albany was not of the doubting Thomas kind, and while admitting that the older people might not live to see it, turned to young Cameron and uttered these prophetic words: "Young man, I've no doubt but you will live to see safe and successful navigation of the air."

Mr. Cameron never forgot these words nad has good reason to bear them in mind, for in the aerial service between Boston and New York the great buzzing planes pass almost directly over his home in Hyde Park daily, a constant reminder of what Mr. Bell had said in those far-back days.

Mr. Cameron intends visiting his old home in Augustine Cove within the next few days, where no doubt there are old friends who will be pleasd to see him once more.

Bandits Steal

where they found a message to report to Police Headquarters.

As Knopf and Sarro approached Twenty-third Street and Madison avenue, four flocks from the Schwarzenbach, Huber & Co. offices, a sedan suddenly closed in on them, forcing them to the curb. Knopf thought it was reckless driving and stopped to remonstrate with the occupants of the car.

Two of them had stepped to the truck meanwhile and produced revolvers, calmly ordering Knopf and Sarro to step into the sedan at once an dwithout rising an alarm, under threat of death. The pair obeyed, while passers-by were unable to make up their minds whether it was a hold-up or simply a change of drivers.

Two bandits then took possession of the truck, driving northward at high speed. Knopf and Sarro, in the sedan, were forced to lie down and serve as footstools while they were driven east by the four other members of the gang. There was no conversation during the trip.

At no time during the kidnapping and hold-up was any member of the band nervous, according to their victims. The robbery was planned to the last detail, the gang apparently agreeing that a daylight holdup at a busy crossing was possible if they conducted it with an unconcerned air. Knopf and Sarro, both of West Hoboken, gave the police only fair descriptions of their captors.

In Ashby-de la Zouch, one Sunday night, a public meeting was held in connection with the League of Nations, the platform being a lorry. One minister, a Primitive Methodist, when called upon to speak said: "I will tell you a story first. A man in Leeds got into a tram car who certainly was drunk, and catching hold of a strap held on as best he could. A minister sitting opposite saw the state the man was in, helped him to a seat; when nicely seated the man shouted out. 'A parson is the only man in the car that knows what it is to be drunk."

200 Vultures Bath

(By Dominion News Service)

LONDON, Aug. 26. —Six "carecrows"—officially described as Hooded Vultures—have arrived at the Zoo from West Africa.

Smothered in mud and lacking many feathers, they looked a sorrw crowd when unpacked, but a "wash-and-brush up" with a hose pipe improved their appearance considerably.

They, at any rate, brought joy to Dan the only other Hooded Vulture in the Gardens, for, after living alone ever since he came, he now has their companionship.

To cheer him up Dan was once allowed to share the cage of a King Vulture but this gaudy-headed bird, failing to grasp the idea, kept him prisoner in a rear compartment, so Dan had again to sulk in solitude.

There is no mistaking Dan, for he wears an "oasis" of feathers on his head comically suggestive of a black wig, whilst the others are of almost golden hue.

Important Decision

aging director and president of the company at its organization meetings and to have so continued until the end.

The Bank of Nova Scotia was the banker of the company and the Royal Bank of Canada had the personal account of J. Stanley Wedlock.

On February 22nd, 1922 J. Stanley Wedlock was personally liable to pay the Royal Bank $34,222 at its Charlottetown Branch, while at the same time his brother, Everett Wedlock, was indebted to the same Bank at Hunter River in the sum of $17,340. Later Everett's account was transferred t othe Charlottetown Branch and charged against J. Stanley Wedlock's personal account.

J. Stanley Wedlock to cover his personal indebtedness to the Bank gave the Bank a Demand Note for $25,000 dated 22nd Feb, 1922 signed by J. Stanley Wedlock, Limited, by its President J. Stanley Wedlock in favour of his brother, Everett and endorsed to the Bank by Everett and by J. Stanley Wedlock. This note was used as collateral security for J. Stanley Wedlock's personal account.

At the time the negotiations were in progress which resulted in the note being given, the Bank seems to have regarded the account as unsatisfactory and was pressing both Wedlocks to pay it or improve it. The credit period granted by the Bank had expired on February 1st, 1922. In consequence of the negotiations the above note was given and another note of like tenor and amount from the Greenwood Foxes Limited, was hypothecated to the bank as a general and continuing collateral security for the payment of the present and future indebtedness of J. Stanley Wedlock.

Afterwards upon the basis of the securities existing including the note in question, the credit period was extended to December, 1922 and further credits were given.

J. Stanley Wedlock, Limited, went into bankruptcy and the Bank then sought to prove this claim against the estate of J. Stanley Wedlock, Limited.

The claim was filed by the Bank in the usual way with the Trustee in Bankruptcy who disallowed the Bank's claim. From this decision an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court and tried before the Chief Justice. The case was heard in the month of April last and a number of witnesses were examined on both sides.

Mr. Inman, K. C., and Mr. Duffy, K. C. represented the Royal Bank, while the Wedlock Estate was represented by Mr. Bentley, K. C., and Mr. Jenks, K. C., of the Nova Scotia Bar.

The two chief questions that came up for decision were:

1. Did J. Stanley Wedlock have power to sign this note on behalf of the Company.

2. If he had such power, was he capable to exercise it to impose a liability upon the Limited Company for his own personal advantage?

The Chief Justice rendered his decision on the 6th day of May last reversing the decision of the trustee in bankruptcy, answering in the affirmative the first and second questions above mentioned, and allowing the Royal Bank's claim in full against the bankrupt estate.

From this decision an appeal was taken to the full Court of Prince Edward Island which Court unanimously sustained the decision of the Chief Justice.

The Trustee then sought leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from the decision of the full Court of Prince Edward Island.

The argument on this application took place before Mr. Justice Anglin of Ottawa who, after consideration, dismissed the application with costs, approving of the judgment of the Chief Justice of this Province.

Below is the full text of the judgment delivered by Mr. Justice Anglin of the Supreme Court of Canada.

Supreme Court of Canada
In the matter of the Bankruptcy of J. Stanley Wedlock, Limited, Debtor;
and
In the matter of the claim of the Royal Bank of Canada.

After mature consideration of the argument of Mr. Greene and the material submitted in support of it, I am of the opinion that a case has not been made for the granting of special leave to appeal to this Court. Upon the questions of law involved the judgment of the learned Chief Justice of Prince Edward Island, with respect, appears to me to be clearly right. The decision of this Court in McKnight Construction Co., vs Vansickler (1915) 51 Can. S. C. R. 374, is conclusive against the right of the applicant, in the absence of mala fides imputable to the respondent, to question the actual authority of the President of the bankrupt company to sign the note in question. It is admitted that he was the apparent agent of the company to transact business of that kind, and that the power which he purported to exercise was such as under the constitution of the company he might possess.

The company's note was made in favour of Everett Wedlock, who was neither a director of nor a shareholder in it. Enough appears to indicate that he may have had a claim upon the company which would entitle him to obtain from it such an acknowledgment of liability. But upon that field of enquiry it is unnecessary to enter—indeed, it is not open to the applicant. Everett Wedlock endorsed and with J. S. Wedlock delivered the note to the respondent bank to be used as collateral to an overdrawn account of which a considerable part represented an indebtedness for which former he was already personally responsible to the bank. The bank took the note in good faith, the evidence, as the learned Chief Justice emphatically finds, affording no ground for any suggestion to the contrary. The further finding that the bank gave value for the note is also fully supported.

At the conclusion of the argument the only point which I felt required further consideration was whether, as Mr. Greene contended, having regard to the fact that the company's note was deposited to the credit of the overdrawn account of J. S. Wedlock, and that him motive in signing it was to benefit himself, this case falls within the recent decision of the English Court of Appeal in A. L. Underwood Ltd vs. Bank of Liverpool et al, (1924) 40 T.L.R. 302. But it is apparent that in making the note in favour of Everett Wedlock, and thus renderinng the company liable to any subsequent holder of it in due course. J. S. Wedlock purported to act as its agent and representative—professed to exercise an authority which might have been given him as its President and General Manager. I agree with the learned Chief Justice that that fact distinguishes the present case from the Underwood case, where, as Lord Justice Scrutton points out, A. L. Underwood clearly acted and professed to act on his own behalf in the handing to the bank for collection on his account, cheques belonging to the company. The present case thus remains within the principle of our decision in McKnight Construction Co, vs. Vansickler. In the absence of bad faith or its equivalent on the part of the bank, the motive of the ostensible agent of the company is not material. Bryant, Powis & Byrant vs The Quebec Bank, 1893, A.C., 179. I agree with the Chief Justice there was nothing to affect the bank with notice that J. S. Wedlock in signing the company's note in favour of Everett Wedlock, was exceeding his authority as its President and General Manager—nothing to put the bank on enquiry as to the scope of his actual authority. Moreover, in what capacity J. S. Wedlock acted or purported to act in making the note is a question of fact, on which, however, I see no reason to doubt the conclusion of the learned Chief Justice.

I have been unable to discover in the proposed appeal any question of law of general public importance not already fully concluded against the applicant by authority binding on this Court—any question such as would justify the granting of special leave to appeal, having regard to the criteria established by the decision of my brother Mignault in Merchants' Bank vs. Angers (1921) 62 Can. S. C. R. 354.

The application will be refused with costs.

IN MEMORIAM

MR. JAMES KEENAN

It was with the deepest regret that his wide circle of friends heard of the death of Mr. James Keenan which occurred at an early hour yesterday morning in the Charlottetown Hospital after a very short illness. Monday Mr. Keenan's illness developed seriously and complications set in which could not be overcome and he passed away fortified by the church in which he was a devout member.

The deceased was for a number of years caretaker of the League of the Cross Hall and by his genial and companionable disposition was a great favourite among all the members, both young and old.

Although sixty-seven years of age, he took an active interest in the work of the boys and last winter was a member of the "Invincibles" League of the Cross bowling team, which won the championship of the L. of C. alleys. He was also a member of the Benevolent Irish Society.

The late Mr. Keenan was born at Greenfield, P. E. I., and settled in this city when quite young. For forty-five years he was a valued employee of the Steam Navigation Company, being attached to the Steward's department on their steamers.

When the Navigation Company suspended operations the late Mr. Keenan accepted the position at the League of the Cross Hall, the duties of which he discharged conscientiously and faithfully up to within a few days of his demise.

There are left to cherish his memory, besides his sorrowing widow, five daughters, Mrs. Roy Hunter, Massolin, Ohio; Mrs. Burton Case, Spokane, Wash.; Mrs. Jos. Curley, Charlottetown Royalty; Miss Nina of the Guardian and Miss Gwendolyn of the Patriot and one son Percy, of Montreal, who has just returned after a visit to his parents after an absence of eighteen years.

An only brother, Hugh, of Concord, Junction, also visited here after an absence of thirty years.

The Guardian extends sincerest sympathy to the bereaved family.

MR. R. C. McRAE.

The death occurred in the city Monday evening of Mr. Robert C. McRae, aged 76. Mr. McRae was favourably known in city and county, and the news of his death will be learned with deep regret. In his youth he followed the sea, and in later years had been engaged in the produce business, being for a time located in Sydney. He was a man of more than ordinary intelligence, and well informed on a wide range of subjects.

Mr. McRae was born in Vernon and was engaged in farming for many years. He went to sea when a youth and made number of voyages in sailing vessels to various parts of the world. He sold out his farm about twenty-four years ago and came to Charlottetown. He was a partner of R. E. Mutch and Co. for five years, when he went to Sydney and carried on business on his own account for sixteen years, when he retired owing to ill health.

Mr. MacRae had been in failing health for three or four years but was able to be around as usual. About three weeks ago his illness took a more serious turn and he suffered greatly from heart trouble which eventually proved fatal.

The late Mr. MacRae was a shrewd, capable, upright and honourable business man as all who have never dealt with him will testify. He was fond of travel, and after he had given up farming he took a trip to the Old Country.

He came of a family that was highly respected and honoured in the southern part of the Province, and the bereaved relatives will have the sincere sympathy of our people.

He leaves to mourn three sisters, Mrs. Grace Sharpe, at whose home he died; Mrs. Jane Harris of Windsor, Nova Scotia; and Miss Sarah MacRae of Windsor, who has been in Charlottetown since Wednesday, having been called here owing to the illness of her brother.

The funeral will be held today at 2.30 p.m. to the Cross Road Cemetery.
