Memoriam

MR. AND MRS. SAUL RAPSON

Saul Bonal Rapson entered into rest at Milburn, Lot 40, P. E. I., on October 9, 1940. The call came suddenly, while Mr. Rapson was a family sick daily work.

He was born at Fortune Bay, Newfoundland, July 3, 1867, and came to Morell with his parents, the late Henry Rapson and Maria Burton at the age of six. One brother, Robert, living in Lowell, Mass., survives.

After his death, his aged widow Jennie Alice Cobb, left the old home, where she had spent fifty-eight years, a happy wife, to live with their son Harry and his family. But on the morning of June 11th, the gentle voice of Jesus called, "Come sister and be re-united to your loved ones gone before."

She was the daughter of the late William Cobb, and Katherine Alexander, his wife and was born at Union Road, P. E. I., on November 15th, 1858, and was the last surviving member of a large family. She was confined to her bed from the time of her husband's death till she passed on and was tenderly and lovingly cared for by her son, and daughter-in-law and her family, Alton, Jennie and Lillian. Her only daughter, Hecctor Compton her adopted daughter are left to mourn the loss of kind parents.

This grand old couple were well and favorably known, and many friends will sincerely miss them. Their home was always open to friend or stranger and all were made to feel welcome.

God-fearing and honest; they lived and made a comfortable home for themselves. They were loyal supporters and members of the former Methodist Church in Marle, and were laid to rest in its quiet cemetery.

When Union came they joined and helped support the larger church.

In politics they were staunch Liberals but showed no bitterness to any who differed from them. Good citizens, kindly neighbors, and faithful friends went with their passing, but their memory will long be cherished and kindly remembered.

The funeral service at both house and grave were conducted by their pastor, Rev. E. B. S. Miller, St. Peter's Bay.

Mr. Rapson's pall-bearers were: Messrs. Ira Stewart, Maynard Sanderson, George Cobb, Hector Compton, E. Dingwell and Wesley James. The hearse driver was Mr. John Partridge.

Mrs. Rapson's pall-bearers were: Messrs. Jas. E. Dingwell, R. R. Webster, John O. McDougall, John Pigott, Wilbur Webster and John Partridge.

The hearse driver was Mr. Ira Stewart.

When Teats are Bruised

Rough milking and handling of the teats may result in bruising the teats and a thickening up of the lining of the teat canal, making milking both difficult and painful. The whole teat may be swollen and hardened up, or a distinct ring of thickening may be felt when handling the teat. The latter is, however, of more frequent occurrence when the injury is inflicted by an over-vigorous calf.

The treatment is to remove the cause and subdue the inflammation by soaking the teat in hot water three times daily, gently massaging with olive oil, and inserting soothing antiseptic bougies into the teat canal. Two or three times daily, in bad cases, the cautious use of a milk tube for drawing off the milk without injury to the inflamed teat may be advisable. Before introducing the tube, however, it must be sterilized by boiling it for 20 minutes, and the end of the teat wiped clean with some cotton wool soaked in methylated spirits.

After the teat has been soiled with a piece of clean cloth before milking, so that it may be taken out of the water and handled through the cloth without the fingers touching it at all. The tube should be allowed to remain in the water to cool off sufficiently to use.

"GIVE US THE TOOLS"

"AND WE WILL FINISH THE JOB"

Because of the urgent need of metals to speed Canada's war effort, no more Sunlight silverware will be made until after the war.

If the "tools" of victory—ships, planes, guns, tanks—are to be forthcoming in vast quantity and in time—Canada must mobilize immediately all her resources of metals, including a very large proportion of metals which would ordinarily be used for domestic purposes.

And so, until victory is won, no more of the beautiful "Allure" pattern silverware, heretofore available to users of Sunlight Soap, will be made. Orders will be filled from stocks on hand while the supply lasts.

circumstances. He would have forced you to buy your daughter's freedom from an intolerable bondage.

The silence that followed was nothing to the silence that had gone before. Sir John broke it.

"The unutterable scandal!" His face was pale and drawn.

Peter said quietly: "Perhaps that's what Monte meant when he said to me that he was a 'member of the Carr family.'" He meant that by being to thwart Parry, he was going to a good end.

"Sir John shook his head. 'It has been an amazing business. And we owe you a great deal of thanks. If Mr. Xosa had been capable of business, he would have bought me and murmured something. Sir John went on: 'You seem to have had the murderer completely tamed from start to finish. So far as I can see, you made only one mistake. Sir John returned to Peter's in-jury arm.

"You let that last bit of play-acting of yours go a bit too far, didn't you? I realize, of course, that your object was to catch Parry red-handed. But, according to your own story, you already had plenty of evidence against him. And in that shot of Parry's had gone just a little truer—well, the story wouldn't have had such a happy ending, would it?"

Lucy gripped Peter's hand very tight.

"Xosa shook his head. 'Last act very necessary,' he said.

"Oh! Why?"

"Mr. Crosby very upright, shy young man. Has great difficulties in affairs of the heart," said the dark man, blandly. "Shot fired by Mr. Parry precipitated emotional crisis. Lying together in sea water in uncomfortable position. Mr. Crosby proposed to Miss Carr. Miss Carr tells me she was beginning to despair of him doing this. Mr. Crosby tells me he was so frightened of murder he forgot to be frightened of Miss Carr.

"Slight bullet-wound is low price to pay for this blissful development, is it not?"

And Mr. Xosa, in the act of gathering up his black stick and white hat, beamed on two lovers.
