IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Michael Burge, St. Peter's Bay, who passed away August 5 1919.

JUST A GIRL

BY JANE PHELPS

THE FIRST CUSTOMER

CHAPTER 81

Mrs. Fagin had scarcely mixed her batter, and Mary and I set up the tables, when in walked Mr. Pope, the real estate agent.

"Whew!" he whistled through his teeth, "but this is scrumptious; let me compliment you young ladies. Is Mrs. Fagin around?"

"Sure she is, and waitin' to serve you some lunch," she answered. "It's good you said nothing against me, because I could hear every word you said. Set right down, the pancakes will be ready in a minute."

"Will you have honey or syrup with them?" I asked as he seated himself.

"Honey, please. What else have you?"

"Nothing today but doughnuts and coffee."

"You mean the kind with lots of sugar on?"

"Yes. The kind your mother made," I answered smiling.

"Fine! I see where my money will go, and all I can hope is you will refuse to serve me when I have had enough.

Mrs. Fagin came out and talked to him while he ate his cakes. She told him she coudn't be there all the time, but would keep track of things. He promised to send us customers, and they were chatting gayly when the door opened and two nicely dressed ladies came in. Mrs. Fagin fairly scuttled off to the kitchen, while Mary placed chairs for them at the window table, the choice one of them all.

"What a pretty place!" one of them exclaimed. "It looks so neat and cheery. Let me see a menu please."

"We ain't got none," Mary replied. We only serve pancakes, doughnuts and coffee today.'

"Oh—I did so want some toast and tea!"

"I think I can manage that Madame," I had overheard, and had no intention of disappointing our first customers—and such nice looking ones too.

"I'll take pancakes too," she said, and her companion duplicated her order.

I whispered to Mrs. Fagin.

"You done just right dearie. I bought a loaf of bread—it won't take but a jiffy to toast it." And she browned it so nicely "I" was embarrassed by the praise the woman bestowed.

"This is something like toast! It is delicious. You must have a good cook. It's time we had a decent place in this part of town to run in for a bite."

The other woman agreed with her, and they ate each an order of pancakes besides their toast and tea.

"How much do I owe you?" she asked when they had finished.

"Sixty cents apiece," I said.

"That is very reasonable. You will see us often." When she left, there was a quarter left beside her plate. According to our agreement this went into a box to be used to buy stock or anything needful.

Mr. Pope, the real estate agent, had lingered reading a newspaper. Now he rose, an said:

"Don't be too cheap in your prices. You can't give food too cheap and make a living."

"Wait a minute, Mr. Pope," Mrs. Fagin called, then came in wiping her hands on her apron. "I want you to look over these prices. Do you think them about right?" We had put down what we thought we should charge for the simple things we had decided to serve.

"Yes—I should say these were aout right Cheap enough, yet I think they will leave you a margin of profit that will insure success when you get going. Then, too, if you are too cheap you might get an undesirable crowd. Um—yes—I think these prices will do—for a trial anyway."

"Thank you! Come often and bring your friends!" Mrs. Fagin said with a laugh as she disappeared.

Several more dropped in for lunch. Then Mrs. Fagin went home, leaving some batter ready mixed so if anyone came in during the afternoon. She would come back to be there at tea and dinner time.

"Gee, but ain't it swell!" Mary exclaimed when we were alone.

"It is going to be very nice, Mary, and it is all owing to you. I never would have thought of it—never dared to try it had you not been so sure we could succeed.

Hints for the Motorist

BY ALBERT L. CLOUGH

THE BADLY FITTED PISTON

Expensive To Correct, But More Expensive To Tolerate

One thing that is absolutely fatal to the successful operation of a car is the presence of ill fitting pistons, and this includes the fitting of the rings as well as of the pistons themselves. In the hurry of quantity production, not a few cars are put into service with this initial defect and fail to give good results until it is corrected, but as a rule, loose and leaky pistons develop only after long usage or after a failure of cylinder lubrication which has resulted in the scratching or "scoring" of cylinder walls and pistons and perhaps the breaking of rings. A single failure of engine lubrication may work more harm as to piston fit than years of normal operation and it is especially to be guarded against with the fuel now in use. The first indication of faulty piston fit is very often the oil-fouling of spark-plugs which, if it develops suddenly, without any charge having been made in lubricating conditions, is a fairly sure sign that piston-rings or even pistons and cylinder bores require attention. If a cylinder will not tightly retain its charge of gas, when it is hand-cranked through its compression stroke and both inlet and exhaust valve are known to be tight, it is proof positive that the charge leaks past the piston-rings and piston, assuming that there is no leak at the spark-plug or around the head gasket. The leaky piston results in deminished power, waste of fuel and oil, rapid carbonization and ultimately in noisy and uneven engine operation A cylinder with a leaky piston loses much o fits charge before it is fired and the explosion pressure upon the piston is thus greatly reduced, with a corresponding reduction of power. The escaped fuel is worse than lost, for it enters the crank-case and thins the oil, while the oil that passes the leaky rings forms deposits on the piston heads and elsewhere. After piston and cylinder wear has gone sufficiently far, enough looseness is developed so that the piston, instead of running smoothly, "cocks up" in the cylinder bore, striking its upper and lower edges against it and producing the peculiar rattling knock, known as "piston slap," which in most engines, is pronounced when they are suddenly accelerated.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep.
