STORY SPEEDS ON LAND, WATER AND AIR. Suspense, thrills, humor, adventure and romance dominate Bebe Daniels' new picture, "Hot News," which came to the Prince Edward Theatre yesterday.

It is not only one of the most spectacular and entertaining films this popular star has ever produced, but it tells a graphic and authentic story of what is undoubtedly one of the most exciting professions in the world—that of the newsreel cameraman.

The audience at the theatre gasped with evident relish as Bebe stood on top of the Statue of Liberty with her camera and attempted to film an incoming trans-Atlantic liner.

And they gasped again when she was shown riding through the air in a breeches buoy to a wrecked ship at sea, with her trusty camera under her arm.

"Hot News" is undoubtedly one of the most thrilling pictures Miss Daniels has ever made.

The events themselves are breathtaking—but the manner in which Miss Daniels obtains views of them is even more so.

Nell Hamilton lends capable support to the star as a rival cameraman and Paul Lukas makes a splendid villain and brings about a spectacular climax.

For good measure Lloyd Hamilton and Stan Laurel kept the spectators in continuous laughter in the two part comedy "Two Tars." We guarantee this as entertainment plus.

Marceline Day and Edward Nugent head a stellar supporting cast which includes Katlyn Williams, Eileen Manning and others.

Dorothy Dix Letter Box

Does the Old-Fashioned Girl or the Modernist Win Out in the End?—Why Every Young Couple Should Have a Home of Their Own—Ought the Working Daughter to Help With the Housework?

DEAR MISS DIX—I have read many times what you have written about men preferring old-fashioned girls, but I have never been one. They are scarce as hen's teeth.

I used to be an old-fashioned girl and never had a date before I started to drink and smoke and put. Now I have dates to burn.

ANSWER: I am going to let a man answer your letter, Helen, for in the same mail came a letter from a man who says:

"Dear Miss Dix—This letter is written by a man who is a sophisticated philosopher, who likes his women and his liquor, and until lately, could not have been forced to the altar with a shotgun.

"Deep within themselves men of my type wonder more about this than they do about the girls who are naturally wild, and they respect the modern dumbbell less than they do the wild woman, even though they seek her out and persuade her to go whoopee.

"Few men, no matter what they have been themselves, want to face the world with a wife who has been a plaything for scores of other men.

"Naturally, every girl desires to acquire a mate, but the right man will never be found lurking in the bushes along the primrose path.

"While a lot of men, both married and single, are more or less worthless, the majority have a good side which is responsive to the right appeal, and that is bound to come from a woman who has kept herself pure.

"I have represented to my fiancée that it would indefinitely delay the start in life which we should make on our own account; that it would deprive me of the privilege, which every man must cherish, of being master in his own home, and that it would require me to sacrifice my right of independent thought and action, and subject me to direct or indirect domination of my parents-in-law.

"You are exactly right in wanting to set up your own home when you are married, where you and your wife can get acquainted and fight out your own battles and adjust yourselves to each other without any outside interference.

"Every young man and woman who go off by themselves when they get married have a hundred times the chance of happiness and of making a go of marriage than those who continue to live with their parents have.

"You are quite right in thinking that if you go to live with your wife's people that you will have no authority over her and no influence with her.

"Inevitably, when you live under another man's roof, you lose your individual freedom. You are bound to conform to his ways and customs.

"DEAR MISS DIX—I heartily agree with you that a man who works all day at his job should not be expected to come home at night and do the housework, but don't you think that the same thing is true of a working girl? My two sisters and I toil to the limit of our strength every day but when we return home we are expected to do the bulk of the housework at night and give everything a good cleaning up on Sunday.

"What do you think should be expected of a working girl in the way of domestic duties? BARRIE.

ANSWER: Not a thing. If your mother had sons instead of daughters she wouldn't expect them to help with the housework and do their own laundry. No, indeed.

She would rush around trying to make things comfortable for the poor dears who had to work so hard. She would go around telling all the neighbors how good they were to provide her with a nice home, why support the family. But it is different with girls. God knows why. When girls go out and do a man's work in the world most mothers expect them to do a woman's work at home, also. And the girls are foolish to do it.

"Of course, if your mother were an invalid, then it would be your duty to help with the housework, but as long as she is able-bodied she should treat you like a star boarder that she was afraid of losing, and do everything she can to make you comfortable.

SEEKS CHILL TAKEN TO P.E.I.

TORONTO, Jan. 28.—The Second Appellate Division of the Ontario Court of Appeal yesterday handed down its decision in the case of four-year-old Joyce Harding, who is now with her father's parents in Prince Edward Island.

The father, Harry Harding, carpenter, is separated from his wife, Rose Harding, and an alimony action is pending.

Her child was taken away from the home in Toronto to Boyaragon. One day the mother, who was supporting herself as a telephone operator, returned home and found a note from the husband stating that the little girl had been taken away and would be placed where she would be well treated. Later she was taken to the father's parents in Prince Edward Island.

On application before Justice Rose an order was issued that the child be given into the custody of the mother but this order could not go into effect until passed upon by the Appellate Division.

W. W. Parry, appearing for Mrs. Harding, said he was moving to have the child delivered to the mother, subject to the court's limitations.

Mr. Parry argued the point of jurisdiction, and stated that a threat had been made to take the child into the United States if the decision in pending alimony and custody actions was not favorable to the father.

Bonds had been given to the Prince Edward Island court that the child would be produced as required by the Ontario Courts, said E. C. Bogert, who appeared for Harry Harding.

"The reason he took the child to Prince Edward Island was because it was his home," said Mr. Bogert. He was arrested here on two occasions.

"That is not the whole reason," asked Chief Justice Latchford. "I was asked by my solicitors to get the child out of the Province of Ontario?"

No such advice was given as far as he knew, Mr. Bogert replied. "These parties are absolutely divergent. The only way to get direction is to have the issue tried," Mr. Bogert stated. It would cost money to bring the child to Toronto.

"A decent firm of solicitors who have taken over the mother's property might advance enough money to bring the child up," said Justice Riddell.

Justice Orde—"I cannot see there is anything wrong in doing what he has done."

Mr. Bogert—"I think when the matter came before Justice Rose he didn't have certain facts that we now have."

Mr. Parry—"This woman worked night after night in a telephone office to earn money to support herself and the child because she was not supplied with money by her husband. She is now in Prince Edward Island."

Chief Justice Latchford—"Didn't the grandmother make a statement that home conditions there were not all they should be?"

"She wrote a letter," said Mr. Bogert, "but it is since denied. I have an affidavit from the Anglican rector and two farm neighbors."

Chief Justice Latchford—"This child of tender years ought to be in the custody of the mother if the mother is a decent woman. The child was taken away."

"Will you agree to combine the two actions?" asked the Chief Justice. "I will have to confer on that," replied Mr. Bogert.

Mrs. Rose Anna Harding is to have custody of her child, Esgal Harding, according to a unanimous judgment of the Second Appellate Court brought down to-day, until such time as the trial of the issue as to whether the father, Harry Harding, is to have custody. There is also an alimony action to be tried.

"The motion for the custody of the child was originally brought by the mother before Justice Rose. As the father had removed the child to Prince Edward Island, His Lordship had doubts as to jurisdiction. Therefore he referred the matter to the higher court.

"1. That the father do forthwith deliver the child or cause her to be delivered to the mother, who shall keep her within this province until final determination of the question as to her custody.

"2. That an issue be directed to be tried as to the custody of the infant in which the mother shall be the plaintiff and the father the defendant, such issue to be set down and tried at the same time as the alimony action now pending.

"3. The order may embody such terms as are desirable as to expediting the trial of the issue and the motive.

Justice Orde, who writes the judgment of the court, says "I should feel inclined to make no order as to the interim custody of the infant, but it seems clear that the father deliberately removed the infant from this province after legal proceedings had been commenced or threatened, with the object of getting her beyond the jurisdiction of the court. Under these circumstances, I think the child ought to be restored to the mother, pending the final determination of the issue which our order will direct."

Collision Case in Supreme Court

The case of Benjamin G. Acorn vs. Major Daniel A. MacDonald came on for hearing yesterday morning before Mr. Justice Arsenault and a jury.

When the case was called, it was announced that one of the jurors was sick at home with the flu, and the court, under the provision of a recent statute, providing that in case of illness of a juror, who had been sworn in, the case could be tried by a jury composed of six jurors decided that the case should go on in the presence of these six jurors.

Mr. Johnston then opened the case for the plaintiff, and called the following witnesses: William MacDougall, provincial land surveyor, who made the measurements of the location of the accident, O. C. Craswell, photographer, who took photographs of the plaintiff's car after the injury, John MacAloose, who drove a passenger in plaintiff's car; Joseph Bolger, Police Constable William MacInnis, who examined the locality of the accident, also Mrs. Mary Reid, and Mr. Dalziel.

The plaintiff's case had not been concluded when the court adjourned at 5 o'clock until 10.30 a. m. today. This action is for damages arising out of a collision between plaintiff's and defendant's cars at the intersection of Prince Street and Grafton Street on November 21st last.

KENSINGTON WIN GAME IN P. C. INTERMEDIATE LEAGUE—The third game in the Prince County Intermediate Hockey League contest for the MacLean Trophy was played at Kensington last Friday night between Kensington and the Summerside C. Y. M. L. and was won by the former team by a score of 4-1. The game was far more closely contested than the score might indicate and at the end of the second period each team, by very determined play in which there was a good deal of checking, had found the net only once and appeared very evenly matched. On the third period, however, the C. Y. M. L. failed to score while their opponents made three goals. The next game of the series will be played tonight in the Crystal Rink at Summerside between Holm and Kensington.

PERSONALS Mrs. Vernon Matthew, of O'Leary was in Summerside on business last Saturday.

Mr. Lowell Compton, of Summerside, has been called to Craupud on account of the serious illness of her brother.

The friends of Mr. A. C. Gardiner, Freetown, will be pleased to learn he was able to be taken home the 25th, after a long and serious illness at the Prince County Hospital.

Mrs. Agnes Gaudet, and her daughter, Miss Katherine, of Tignish, left last Thursday for New York, where they intend spending the winter months with Miss Elmore Gaudet, who is also Mrs. Gaudet's daughter, and is the representative of the firm of Messrs Lepplethier of Paris in the Savoy Plaza Hotel on Fifth Avenue, New York. Mrs. Gaudet came to Tignish from New Brunswick at the time of her marriage, fifty-five years ago, and this is the first time her hospitable home has been closed during that time. While in Summerside Mrs. Gaudet and her daughter were the guests of Mrs. J. H. Gaudet.
