A YANK ON THE BURMA ROAD

LARINE DAY - BARRY NELSON
STUART CRAWFORD - KEVE LUKE

Plus Laurel - Hardy Comedy
Travelogue - Pete Smith

The reason why barbecuing has become the nation's newest epicurean hobby is to be seen on the screen in a Metro-Gwynn-Mayer short subject, entitled "Barbecue-Tues", which is coming to-day to the Prince Edward Theatre. Narrated by Pete Smith, the film introduces Max G. Cullen, foremost authority on the preparation and carving of meat, who shows how delectable barbecued food can be when properly cooked. Old-time barbecuers as well as novitates will get many pointers about the art not only from Cullen but from another character in the film, who, by example, forcefully demonstrates what NOT to do if you want your barbecue feast to be a success.

Thrills And Action
On Burma Road In New M-U-G-M Drama

Plenty of action, a new setting and an above-average supporting cast combine to make "A Yank on the Burma Road," which opens to-day at the Prince Edward Theatre, an outstanding picture.

More than just a story of China's efforts to keep supplies rolling over the famed Burma Road, it is a tale of China—of its fathers and mothers and children, of the Chinese spirit which will not down. Actually the Burma Road element only provides the background for an action romance story. It serves an admirable purpose, however, giving excellent atmosphere which is sharply realized and penetrates the Chinese character.

The story opens in New York with the capture of two killers by a cab driver. He is invited to lead a fleet of trucks over the Burma Road, accepts. In Rangoon he meets a girl anxious to get to Chungking in order to meet her husband, held prisoner by the Chinese. She joins the caravan, which proceeds over the Burma Road to the punctuations of thrills, fights, pathos and action.

Excellent Cast

The performances of the entire cast are good, particularly that of the leading man, a newcomer named Barry Nelson, who plays the part of a hunkie, and his interpretation of the role is so vigorous and punchy that it guarantees in the opinion of this reviewer, his being seen in many more pictures.

Laraine Day, as the girl, does her usual superb job. She is more effective in her handling of the adventures made by Nelson. The byplay between the two of them, with their thoughts becoming audible, forms one of the highlights of the picture.

"There is no more important war duty resting on the people at home than that of keeping in touch with the men overseas, and writing them regularly," declared Honorary Colonel C. L. Neligan, Bishop of Pembroke, Ont., and head of the Roman Catholic Chaplain service with the Canadian forces, in a brief interview with Guardian representatives here yesterday.

Bishop Neligan, who is a native of Tignish, P. E. I., has been on a brief visit to his old home, the first since his return from the United Kingdom about six weeks ago. He spent three months there, meeting a great many members of the Canadian forces of the three branches of the service. He found their morale to be even higher than it was on the occasion of his previous visit, eighteen months ago. This he attributed to the work of the chaplains and also of the supervisors of the auxiliary services.

He said it was impossible to over-emphasize the importance of the adroit letters from home to the troops. He urged everyone in Canada to keep this in mind, especially at Christmas time.

On Sunday, Sept. 6, Bishop Neligan officiated at a largely attended outdoor service in Sussex, N. B. On the occasion of the service he had a great number of letters from home to read to the troops in Saint John.

He left yesterday afternoon for Halifax to hold a meeting of the Halifax Chapter of the Knights of St. John. He will remain in Halifax for a few days and then return to his home in Tignish, P. E. I.

Was Guest At Dunvegan Castle Isle Of Skye

The following interesting letters were received by Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Black from their son, Lieut. C. F. Black, who was recently on leave in Scotland, having been invited to visit at Dunvegan Castle, Isle of Skye. Lieut. Black's paternal grandfather, Mr. C. F. Black, was born at Dunvegan Castle, 19 July, 1942.

This is being written in the Library at Dunvegan. I have been most hospitably entertained by the present Chief of the Clan, Flora MacLeod of MacLeod. My room is in the old keep, perhaps 14th century. The narrow windows, through which I can see the sea, are 9 feet thick, look out over Dunvegan Loch, and the small islands toward Harris. I have been shown the treasures of the castle, the Fairy Flag, the Dunvegan Cup, Rory More's Drinking Horn, and the rest. Almost below my room is the dungeon, and later went out shooting rabbits. Today is Sunday and a strictly observed one here. In a few minutes we are going to the castle. The castle is the work of the late Chief, she is shooting later I hope to take a walk with her in the hills round about. With her cousin here is Mrs. Mitford, whose father was Canon MacLeod, brother of Sir Reginald, the late Chief. She is visiting here for her home tomorrow. I have just been looking at a book on the Skye pioneers to P. E. I.—the "Poly" etc. When did Grandmother Black's people leave here, and what was the name of the original Canadian settler? They were very interested here in the ramifications of the clan, and have asked me to get what I can I don't see any reference in the "Poly" book. The castle is the oldest inhabited building in Scotland, at least continually inhabited, and always by the same family. The portraits of ancestors by famous artists are along the corridors, and in the large rooms, and make a brave show. The castle is completely modernized, and is comfortable as any home in London. Now I must get ready for church. Much love to all, Fred

"Dunvegan Castle" — 19 July '42
We have just finished dinner in the large dining hall of the Castle, where is a magnificent lot of furniture, and a number of life size portraits of MacLeods by such as Romney. This afternoon Mrs. MacLeod and I went for a walk on a beach of coral, made up of coral and delicate shells, most unusual here. It has been a fine day for me, but the children are under a mist. This morning we walked to church (of Scotland) and enjoyed a very simple service. I am enjoying very much being here. The conversation is most interesting, clear Transvaal.
