GEORGE TALKS.

Chapter 32.

Had Pan been in any way a coquette she would have evaded George's question, or answered it haltingly. But being of a direct honest and truthful mind, she said simply:

"Yes, a great deal." Then added quickly, as though she knew she had confessed too much:

"We both missed you."

And George, who read her thoughts easily, was both touched and amused by these statements. When they were seated in Pan's tiny room and George had stretched out on the one big chair, a lighted cigarette held limply between his long fingers—exactly as she had seen him so often at Gloria's—Pan felt suddenly perfectly happy and contented. She reached for her work basket and began to sew while they talked.

"Do you work all the time?" George asked, watching her fingers busy with needle and thread.

"No, but if I have something to do with my hands I can talk better," Pan answered. "They don't get in my way then. I'm not so painfully conscious of them. I've tried to learn knitting. Everyone says nowadays that I'm slow and awkward at it."

"So you're making Frankie's suit?"

"Goodness, no!" She laughed with amusement. "Only putting back lost buttons."

George puffed at the cigarette—he always seemed to take a puff just when it was ready to die out from neglect—and watched the mending with the curiosity of a man clever with his fingers at big things, who has all respect, but no comprehension, of the minute difficulties of sewing.

"You're such a comfortable person to be with, Pan," he observed after a time. "I'm glad you missed me. I wasn't particularly happy over there either."

Because of Gloria, Pan thought instantly, but said nothing. George went on:

"There were a lot of things to worry me. The man I was painting was bad tempered and restless and difficult to do—look me twice as long as an ordinary portrait. It was hot, too, and I had trouble selling a house I wanted to dispose of."

Pan knew that George, in his student days, had purchased a country house outside Paris. Being young and enthusiastic, he had been badly cheated, according to Gloria, and was willing almost to give the place away now to be rid of it.

"And I was worried about Gloria."

"He had said it, so Pan felt she could talk of it now."

"I knew. If only you had been here, or if you hadn't gone over there at all—"

"But why? My presence would have made no difference one way or the other—except I would have known sooner that Santley was back. But you were angel enough to tell me finally."

"Yes, I would have written soon, or only I didn't want to worry you. When I wrote, it was because I thought if you came in time—"

"In time? What do you mean? What difference would my coming have made?"

Pan hated to answer this. She pretended a great interest in a button she was attaching to a very diminutive pair of trousers, and hesitated.

"What do you mean, please?" George urged.

"Oh, I don't suppose your presence would have made any difference after all," Pan said finally. "It was clear that Gloria was very much in love with Santley's course, there was a little time when she tried to pretend she wasn't, but it never was a serious pretence, after she knew Santley had followed her at once to New York. She had to go on with it. Just because she'd begun that way."

She snapped off a thread, and laid the little suit aside. Being so earnest in what she was saying she felt no self-consciousness now, her hands clasped in her lap naturally, and she leaned back in the chair, at ease and graceful because of it, and looked at George with her serious, dark eyes.

"So even if you had come back, it wouldn't have made any difference, she would have married him anyway. Only—"

"Only, what? Why shouldn't she have married him?"

"Well, you see—at least you would have had a chance to fight for yourself."

"But why fight for myself? I waited for you to marry him."

"I know. You were always a generous about that. But I knew you were in love with her."

"But, my dear little child, I've been in love with you all winter."

Tomorrow—Being in Love

AMERICAN MAN HAS LITTLE APPRECIATION FOR HIGHER THINGS OF LIFE, SHE SAYS

NEW YORK, July 16.—Margot Asquith, wife of Herbert H. Asquith, former premier of Great Britain, who deals with men and events in a manner which, if a man handled her vocabulary, would be characterized as brutally frank, pays her respects to the American following her visit to this country in an article in a magazine for August.

Her observations are far from flattering. She declares that American men are uncultured, money-grabbing, lacking in individuality, too engrossed in business, victims of standardization, indifferent to the arts, and never insistent upon the principles of freedom.

She names "some admirable and charming individuals" among American men, but they are all dead. She uses a criticism ascribed to her fellow countryman, the late Oscar Wilde, to sum up the American male. "He is a man who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing."

She says:—"Leisure to the American man means loss. He seldom enjoys art, he rarely enjoys music, he has no time to read, and he leaves the things that go by the average American man I know is not cultured."

"Not knowing the value of money or of leisure, he works too hard and either refuses to exercise his intellect or is unable to enjoy other people's."

America is more violent than free and takes constant interference in the state or by some society, she claims—and is tacitly accorded—police powers. If you do anything that you appear to enjoy, you may be quite sure some one will form a society to prevent you from going on with it."

THE KAISER AT HOME

Many interesting facts bearing upon the Kaiser's family name and also as the proud ruler of an empire are given in memories of the Kaiser's Court," by Miss Anne Topham, who was for some time English teacher to the monarch's only daughter, now the Duchess of Brunswick. From this book we make jokes with his family at breakfast table and even to indulge in punning.

"Miss Topham and the Kaiser frequently held conversations on the subject of England, and upon one occasion her imperial master remarked:

"You English people, you drink those awful fiery spirits—horrible stuff—whisky, brandy, what not! How can you imbibe such quantities of poisonous liquid ruining your constitutions, simply ruining them—whisky and soda every where? No, it's awful! I tasted it once—like liquid fire—ugh. Your drinking habits are fearful!"

Though possessing great admiration for the Kaiser's everyday life, the Kaiser had a profound contempt for English politics and politicians.

"Not one of your ministers," he said to me on one occasion, "can tell how many ships of the line you have in your navy. I can tell him. He can't tell me. And your minister for war can't even ride I offered him a mount and every opportunity to see the maneuvers. "Thanks very much for your majesty's gracious offer. Sorry cannot accept it. I'm no horseman, unfortunately." A minister of war, and can't ride! Unthinkable!"

During his visits to England he evidently took careful note of valuable relics and mementos of bygone ages and after one of these visits he thus expressed his thoughts:

"Ah, you have never had a Napoleon to plunder and burn your country-houses! Your Reynoldses and Gainsboroughs, where would they have been if Napoleon's marauding soldiers had seen them? Perhaps burnt or destroyed or sent to the Louvre. Think what it must mean to the children of a house to live with one of these pictures, to absorb it unconsciously into their mentalities! They must grow up with a love of beautiful things. They cannot help it. We have nothing of the kind. Our houses were stripped and burnt."

PLEASANT AFFAIR AT FALCONWOOD

On Thursday evening of last week the staff of Falconwood Hospital met in the Assembly Hall for the purpose of presenting an address to Miss Hazel McKenzie and Miss Margaret McQuarrie, two recent graduates of this institution who intend leaving for the United States.

Miss McKenzie received a beautiful Kodak and Miss McQuarrie an Ivory Mirror. After dancing for a few hours the party adjourned to the dining room where they partook of a bountiful supply of Brighton ice cream and the best of "Spa" cake. This treat was supplied by the kindness of one of the officers of the Institution.

It is characteristic of Falconwood that one does not have to die to receive bouquets, and Miss McKenzie and Miss McQuarrie deserved all the compliments which they received.

Those young ladies have ever been obliging, courteous and kind to their patients and associates, and we wish them success and happiness where ever their lot may be cast.

The following is the address: June 20, 1922 To Miss Hazel McKenzie, and Miss Margaret McQuarrie, Dear Friends: We your friends and associates of this institution, have learned with regret that you are about to leave us.

Some two and a half years ago you entered our training school, and through your untiring efforts and strict attention to duty, you have done so well as to have graduated and fitted yourselves for the profession of nursing and we wish you the respect and esteem of all. You have been a source of gratification to your superior officers, under whose direction you have studied and worked and your places will be hard to fill.

You are going away to continue your noble profession in a wider field and we must be content to know that our loss is another gain. Please accept these small tokens as a feeling of friendship and goodwill and as a remembrance wherever your chosen field may be, you carry our best wishes for your continued success.

DO WOMEN WORK AS HARD AS MEN?

Yes. And They Must Keep Well and Strong

Two Interesting Letters

Toronto, Ontario.—"When my husband was called back to England in 1914 I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to strengthen me so I could work. I had a trouble that used to make me weak, but I am able to do my work now and am perfectly satisfied with your medicine. I still get it at the chemist's and I strongly recommend it to anyone who is suffering as I did. I would like to publish this if you wish."

—Mrs E. HOENLOWER, 899 Yonge St., Toronto, Ontario.

I Did Not Feel Like Working

"I was in a general run-down condition with a weak back and a tired feeling so that I did not feel like working. My mother was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and recommended it to me, so I have taken it and my back is better and I am now able to do my work. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my neighbors and you may publish my letter."

—MRS. JOSEPHAT A. GAENZIE, Box 47, Carbon, Alberta.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken when you first notice such symptoms as nervousness, headache, weakness and irregularity. It will help you and prevent more serious trouble. Give it a fair trial.

WHERE FISH RULE.

An old woman in Scotland heard a gentleman ask a station master in Fife why the train was so late. The answer was: "It has to wait to let the fish train through."

"Fogs," she exclaimed. "Ye get nae consideration on this line unless ye happen tae be a haddie."

Canadian Cheese Not Responsible

LONDON, July 15.—Reporting to the Dover Health Committee on last week's serious food poisoning epidemic in the Tower Hamlets district, the Medical Health Officer of Dover said that ninety-seven persons were attacked by abdominal pain, diarrhoea and vomiting, followed by prostration. Investigation showed that ninety per cent of the sufferers had partaken of Canadian cheese purchased in the district.

Although there were symptoms of collapse in some of the cases, no deaths occurred.

Samples of the cheese and the patients' blood have been sent to the county laboratory, and a representative of the Ministry of Health and the Pathological Department are investigating the outbreak.

The allegations to the Dover Health Committee against Canadian cheese first reached the Canadian authorities here through a small newspaper item which was by no means widely published. Prompt measures were taken to ascertain on what grounds the charges were made and the investigation is now proceeding.

The allegations are the cause of much surmise coming at a time when Canadians engaged in handling imports of cheese from the Dominion are interviewing dealers extensively regarding new grading provisions shortly to become effective. In these interviews there has not been the slightest reflection cast upon the quality of Canadian cheese.

Hon. P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner, has ordered a report from an expert for the Canadian Government. The health officer's statement that ninety per cent of the sufferers from poisoning had partaken of Canadian cheese which was purchased in the district is regarded as too serious to be allowed to pass without investigation.

SAVAGE HARBOR SCHOOL CLOSING

The semi-annual examination of Savage Harbor School was held on Friday, June 30th. The attendance of parents and others interested in an encouraging nature, and showed increase interest in matters educational. The pupils were examined in the various subjects by Inspector J. F. After the examination public school certificates from the Dept. of Education were awarded to the following pupils: Nellie McIntyre, Agnes Doyle, Scott Coffin and Cyril Morrison and prizes for attendance and penmanship to John Morrison and Charlie McIntyre.

Calls Gold Coast Canadian Colony

LONDON, July 15.—The Gold Coast is becoming almost a Canadian colony. It has a Canadian governor, a number of Canadian civil servants and some Canadians in business, while I myself employ about thirty-five Canadians in construction work," said General John W. Stewart in an interview today. General Stewart sails tomorrow from London on his way to Canada from the Gold Coast, where he has been working on his $2,000,000 harbor contract at Secounde. This is now well under way, and will be finished in three years. The lighterage interests, which charge eight shillings per ton for transporting goods between ships and shore, or more than one-third of the total rate from Vancouver to British Columbia, are not anxious to see the harbor built. The native leaders are stirred up to believe that their colony was being exploited by skillful financiers and General Stewart had to forsake his customary tactfulness and make several speeches to them before they were reassured.

General Stewart states that he was immensely impressed with the possibilities of West Africa, particularly for Canadian trade. Large quantities of canned goods are consumed there, which might as well be supplied by Canada, and there are openings for manufactured goods. Railways are the next most urgent need of the country, where cocoa for export has to be carried fifty miles on the heads of negro porters. The Toronto-born governor, General Guglisberg, whom General Stewart describes as a real Empire builder, is bent on the construction of railways as soon as finances and other factors permit, and it is possible that when tenders are called General Stewart may make a bid for this contract also.

"If I had been Prime Minister, Jack Stewart would have found a seat in the British House of Peers, as the only recognition adequate to his past services to the Empire in his worst hour of peril," said T. P. O'Connor, commenting in the Sunday Times this week upon General Stewart's visit and referring to his organization of the work of building the light railways, which played so important a part in the winning of the war upon the western front.

SUIT BY EX-PRISONER

ALBANY, N. Y., July 15.—Because he found unsanitary conditions in the lockup at Springville, Erie County, a former inmate has threatened to sue the village authorities for having been forced to endure them. State Prison Commissioner Wade, who recently inspected the lockup and tells of the threatened suit, has recommended that the village authorities be cited to show cause why the jail should not be closed. The commissioner referred to the lockup as unsafe and unfit for the detention of human beings.

If the suit is brought, it will be the first of its kind, since the average prisoner is oblivious to the conditions he meets with when in detention; or else the environments are far different from those which prevail at Springville.
