To the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. Brewer Waugh, the bride-to-be was escorted to the seat of honor by her friend Miss Helen Huestis. After the bride was seated she was presented with a bouquet by Miss Marjory Huestis. Misses Joyce Clark, Gwendolyn Clark, Frances Waugh and Mildred Curtis then carried in daintily decorated baskets of gifts which were opened by Misses Eileen Waugh, Norma MacMurdo and Ella Tuplin while Miss Mildred MacMurdo and Miss Lillian Hogg read the accompanying verses. Others assisting were Misses Patricia Clark, Mary Gamble and Mrs Clark Caseley. After the lovely gifts had been presented and arranged Beth in her usual pleasant manner thanked her friends for their gifts and best wishes, inviting them to visit her in her new home after which all joined in singing "For She's A Jolly Good Fellow." Miss Hortense Clegg Lectures On Beauty Aids

Miss Hortense Clegg, representative of the Dorothy Gray Salon, who was at the store of Moore & McLeod, Ltd., last week illustrated her lecture with a movie in sound and color, entitled "Ninety-seven Salon Secrets." It was but a preview, the picture will follow later, Miss Clegg said, sponsored by the same local organization. Its purpose is a morale builder for women across Canada, based on the idea that they, being too busy to go to the salon, the salon is brought to them.

Miss Clegg in an address in conjunction with the picture said that since powder and rouge are limited to four shades, the vogue is now to encourage a fresh, natural complexion, and to choose the shade of make-up to blend with the complexion, rather than with the hair, eyes or costume. It is more important now than ever before to care for the skin, and prepare it to receive the make-up to the best advantage.

The basis of proper skin care is to cleanse, stimulate and lubricate. Then, having followed these rules, it will be unnecessary to use the quantity of make-up that has been formerly used.

Miss Clegg commented on the fact that the girls of the Maritime Provinces, who are noted for their healthy complexions, have an advantage over those in the inland provinces, because the climate of the former is in itself an aid to beauty.

The hall at Rustico was filled to capacity, last Friday evening on the occasion of the closing of the Short Course, the first of a series being put on in this Province by the Extension Department of St. Dunstan's University.

Reverend Francis McQuaid of St. Dunstan's delivered an address of the problems of farmers, and answered satisfactorily a number of practical questions put to him by the farmers present. Mrs. J.H. Delaney of the St. Francis Xavier Extension Dept. gave an address on Home Economics, profusely illustrated with colored charts. Professor A.B. MacDonald reviewed the work of the course and expressed his satisfaction of the work done and pronounced the course one of the best yet. Rev. J.C. Pitre and Rev. J.D. MacNeill spoke briefly and tendered the thanks of the people of Rustico, and vicinity to the Very Reverend R.V. MacKenzie, Rector of St. Dunstan's, for the course.

In the morning Prof. A.B. MacDonald spoke on the causes of economic ills, and he and Mrs. Delaney conducted model study clubs. In the afternoon Dr. E.J. Reedman of the Dehydration Plant, Summerside, spoke on Irish Moss; Dr. J.A. MacMillan on Group Hospitalization; S.T. Wright and Henry McDonald of the P.E.I. Dept. of Agriculture on the farm forum, and care of milk and cream.

The second course of the fall series opens at Morell today and will continue until Thursday evening of this week. At the evening session today Very Reverend R.V. MacKenzie will preside.

Soviet Paper Takes Japanese To Task

MOSCOW, Nov. 21—(AP) — The labor magazine war and working class, saying the initiative in the Pacific is completely in American hands, charged today that Japanese extremists had "inspired various anti-Soviet plans" in behalf of Germany.

(This was one of the frankest statements concerning Russian-Japanese relations to be transmitted from Moscow in recent months.)

Fine Program Of Church Music At St. Paul's

A recital of sacred music of great interest to all who care for the best and highest in the art of worship, was given last night in St. Paul's church after the evening service.

The programme was as follows:
Hymn 398, "Ye, watchers and ye holy ones"
Organ Choral in A minor, Cesar Franck.
Choir, "O Gladsome Light" — Sullivan.
"How They So Softly Rest (Remembrance Day) Willan.
Hymn 40 "Round Me Falls The Night".
Organ, "Sleepers Awake", Bach.
Adagio from Sonata No. 1— Mendelssohn.
Carillon Vierne.
Soprano "Consider the Lilies"— Thomas Sheppard (from "The Sermon on the Mount).
"Prayer Perfect" Ervine Stensen—Mrs. Frances Holl Trainor.
Choir, "Give Ear Unto My Prayer"—Arcadelt.
"O How Amiable — " Vaughan-Williams.
Hymn 210 "If Thou Hast The Skill To Reckon".
God Save The King.

The organ numbers were beautifully played by Mr. Walter MacNutt, choir director and guest organist. Particularly pleasing to this listener were his rendering of the Cesar Frank choral, and the Bach Chorale-prelude "Sleepers Awake." In this piece, with true artistic insight, he gave due value to the theme of the chorale, so that it could clearly be heard through the beautiful counter melody which runs through the whole composition.

Mrs. Frances Holl Trainor was in excellent voice and sang the solos "Consider the Lilies" and "Prayer Perfect" in a manner most acceptable to the audience. Miss Lillian Earle, the organist of St. Paul's, furnished a most tasteful accompaniment on the organ.

The choir numbers were all well sung, and were of such beauty that it would be difficult to single out any for special mention Mr. MacNutt played beautifully the accompaniments for the Sullivan and Vaughan-Williams motets; the others were sung 'a capella'.

Lovers of music will be pleased to learn that it is planned to have another such recital after Christmas—probably in January. It only remains to thank Mr. MacNutt, Miss Earle and the choir of St. Paul's for what they have done and are doing to raise to yet higher levels the standard of church music in this city.

Factory Work Lacks Compelling Motive

LONDON, Nov. 21 —(CP)— It was the first serious attempt to gauge the mind of the women who became factory hands within the vast world of wartime British industry. And it concluded:

"Underlying the life of young working women today there is a background of aimlessness, irresponsibility and boredom . . . These factory girls emphasize the danger," ous decline in positive citizenship."

Such was sober report of Mass Observation, a social research organization which sent a highly trained Cambridge graduate into a factory of 1,000 workers which sprang up in a quick English town under the impetus of war demands.

The factory obtained its unskilled and trainee labor from the surrounding countryside. Most of the girls had never seen a factory before and few were enthusiastic about the life.

These were some of the findings of the research worker:

Boredom resulting from monotonous unskilled work led to slacking; generally a half hour elapsed after the official starting time before all machines were working; women more than 40 got down to their jobs more quickly than younger women.

Many girls had no desire to know the purpose of their jobs. They did not realize their job was important to the war effort and did not care whether it was vital of not.

In the machine shops the charge-hands were all men who treated the girls with an amused tolerance which assumed that they have no mechanical sense. Some of the girls took advantage of this as a cover for carelessness and laziness on the grounds that they were considered scatter-brained anyway."

The girls were hearty eaters and looked forward to mealtimes as a relief from monotony.

An overpowering atmosphere of "it's not worth bothering with" hangs over attempts to organise social activities. They enjoyed only mechanical amusements which required little effort, such as dancing and cinemas.

Unskilled girls earned on an average of $12 a week. Unlike men, girls treated their jobs as a way of filling in time and meeting friends untill they got married. Fines and suspensions, humiliating to men, made little impression on them.

They regard their new lives not as exciting adventure, full of new personal and social possibilities, but as something to be put up with until peacetime life can be resumed.

Sqdn.-Ldr. J. A. MacLean of Lewes

Couple From West Married Here Saturday

A very pretty wedding of more than usual interest took place at the chapel of St. Paul's Church on Saturday evening at 6.30 when two young people from western Canada who had not before visited in Charlottetown were united for their life's journey by Rev. A. Ledrew Gardner. The bride was Miss Gwendolyn Winnifred Hall, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hall of Winnipeg, who with her mother arrived earlier in the week as the guests of the former's brother Hon. George D. DeBlois and Mrs. DeBlois. The groom was Sergeant George Eldon Smith of the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps, now stationed at Montreal, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Smith of Moosejaw, Sask. who had met his bride while a co-worker in the Winnipeg office of the Bank of Montreal. He arrived in the city by plane on Saturday afternoon.

The charming and vivacious bride, wearing a very becoming dress of pale blue French metalasse and carrying a nosegay bouquet of roses, was given away by her uncle, Hon. George D. Deblois, Only the immediate relatives of the bride were in attendance at the ceremony; Mr. Andrew Likely, of the Bank of Nova Scotia at Newcastle coming over by plane and returning on Sunday.

After the ceremony all had a very delightful dinner at the Charlottetown with suitable toasts and much enjoyment.

The happy young couple left this morning for Montreal.

THE BAPTIST CHURCH

At the service of morning worship the Rev. Ronald Noble took as the subject of his sermon "Escape to the Mountain." In the Old Testament lesson of the morning there is a picture of strength developed in striving, and decayed in luxurious and too easy prosperity in the life of Lot in Sodom. There is a vivid picture of the destruction of a civilization which lacks the vital factor of spiritual and moral soundness. The threats to our own civilization are Naturalism, the Mechanization of Man and Materialism. Man is more than merely a factor in an economic machine. It is ours to escape to the mountain of christian principles, under the leadership of our Lord Jesus Christ going forward religiously, spiritually, in brotherhood responsible before the throne of God. The morning anthem was Clarke-Whitfield's " I Will Lift Up Mine Eyes Unto the Hills," with the solo taken by Mr. MacAulay.

The Church School met for its Bible Study session at 2.30 p.m.

Evening worship was observed at 7 p.m. with sermon by Mr. Noble "First hand—or Second Hand." The evening anthem was Curschmann's "Protect Us Through the Coming Night." Mr. R.B. Ross of Wollaston, Mass., sang "The Ninety and Nine" very effectively.

John Inch, Mus. Bac., organist and choirmaster was in charge of the music at all services.

Saw Service On Famed Corvette

Not many men are privileged to see a moving picture of a ship they served on but one of the few is signalman Malcolm (Buster) MacMillan, R.C.N.V.R., son of Mr. James D. MacMillan of Wood Islands who has put four years in the Navy, the greater part of it being on the Corvette K-225, used in the making of a picture of the same name, which was shown last week at the Prince Edward Theatre in Charlottetown. The ship used was the one on which Signalman MacMillan served, with the name changed. He was aboard while the scenes at sea were being filmed.

Signalman MacMillan, who is home convalescing, said he had no hair raising experiences during his time at sea but admitted he had seen action around the Mediterranean and in South Africa.

Their work was entirely with convoys along the Mediterranean and he admitted being on duty when the S.S. Louisburg was sunk last winter. They were quite near the torpedoed ship when the torpedo struck, but as no orders were received to stop, they just carried on," satisfied the crew would be rescued later.

Lights Bobbing

Lights could be seen bobbing about the water. These were from small lamps carried on life preservers which the men wore, making rescue work easy. After the convoy passed the submarine area a ship was dispatched to pick up the survivors.

This happened while enroute to North Africa. On their return trip they picked up a number of survivors from a torpedoed merchantman, bringing them safely to port.

"Have you ever been torpedoed?" the signalman was asked. The nearest I came to it was while in port in North Africa," he replied.

He explained as they neared the coast, planes and submarines started in to work on the convoy and even when they arrived in port the work is continued by the enemy until driven off.

Hit Once

Asked if he ever was hit in any of these sorties he replied he was only hit once and that was with pleurisy which finally caused his discharge, and now leaves him ready to take a position in civil life.

He has a brother, Corpl. Roy MacMillan, in the Nova Scotia Highlanders, now in England, who has spent three years overseas. His wife the former Claire Clark of the Magdalene Islands, is with her husband in the city.

Another brother, Angus MacMillan is also serving with the Canadian navy.

Signalman MacMillan enlisted here, Sept. 12th 1939 quitting in his training at the Naval Barracks here under Lieut. Commander-now Commander J.J. Connoly.

Members of the Canadian Women's Army Corps are given instruction in rifle and revolver shooting.

upper front window, that smoke was coming from the window beneath her. She had heard a noise which sounded like an explosion. The telephone was at the top of the stairs leading to the front door and the fire had then made such progress that the whole lower part of the building was filled with flames and smoke.

Miss MacLeod heard no sound from Cheverie downstairs, and did not know that anyone was there.

She and the other occupants of the Grafton House made their escape, with the assistance of the firemen, from windows which opened above the roof of an adjoining shed at the rear of the building. With her were her mother, Mrs. Fred MacLeod, her sister Laura, and her brother Fred. There were also two boarders Gordon MacKinnon and Bruce Dunning.

Mr. MacKinnon returned to his room and succeeded in salvaging his savings, reportedly amounting to a thousand dollars.

Mrs. McClarey, occupant of two rooms on the rear lower floor, was also able to make her escape.

It was impossible to salvage much furniture from the fire which burned for several hours, though it was brought under control within an hour and a half.

When the firemen arrived it was seen that their task was pretty hopeless. Flames were pouring from the front door and from the auction rooms office windows. The interior was a blazing inferno. It was impossible for some time to get into the hall where the body of Cheverie was subsequently found. The fire had got between the walls and spread with great rapidity.

Four streams of water and splendid work on the part of the fire fighters kept the fire from spreading to other buildings, until it had burned itself out, leaving the interior gutted, from roof to basement.

The burned building belonged to the estate of the late Mr. George Rogers and is in the hands of the Eastern Trust Company.

How Destroyer Borie Fought Nazi Sub to Death

(U. S. Navy Sketch From NEA)

Drama of the death fight between a U. S. destroyer and a Nazi submarine is captured in this drawing by Coast Guard Combat Artist Hunter Wood. Just after the destroyer Borie rammed the surfaced sub, a searchlight is played on the U-boat's conning tower and seamen on the U. S. vessel's deck begin firing at the enemy with deck guns and rifles. Dead on the deck of the submarine lies a German hit by a knife thrown by a Borie seaman, while Nazi in searchlight beam has been hit by empty shell case. Both vessels were sunk in the encounter.
