St. John's, Nfld., Oct. 24. The British cruiser Charybdis, Commodore Paget, received orders this evening to be in readiness to proceed to England on a moment's notice. The training ship Clayson has been ordered to arrange for the mobilization of 600 men of the Newfoundland Naval reserve.

RINGING IN THE EARS.

This is an unailing sign of catarrh, and if not checked will ultimately result in deafness. The simplest remedy is Catarrhazone, which in a few minutes prevents the catarrhal condition from spreading. Catarrhazone quickly stops the ringing in the ears, head noises, gives permanent relief to catarrhal deafness. For catarrh in any part of the system, tracheitis, Asthma, Lung or Throat Troubles, Catarrhazone is a specific, and is guaranteed to permanently cure or your money back. CHARLOTTETOWN GUARDIAN.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1904.

MR. BORDEN'S MANIFESTO.

The Conservative leader's manifesto to the electors of Canada is issued very late in the campaign and is by no means a sensational document. It contains nothing new, and reads like a recital of principal points in his campaign and parliamentary deliverances. It differs from most announcements hitherto put forth by Opposition leaders at election times in that it avoids any very aggressive attack upon the Government of the day. These are its general features.

It very properly gives prominence to the transportation question, and condemns the Government railway scheme. "We oppose to this," he says, "our declaration of constructing the new Transcontinental Railway as a public work, to be owned and controlled by the people, and to remain a national highway in the truest sense." And he asserts that it is still open to the people of Canada to decide whether this shall be done. He does not explain how the existing contract is to be got rid of.

What remains of the manifesto declares in favor of freeing the existing Government railways from party political control (presumably by commission); the equipment of our national ports and improving our inland waterways; the principle of protection as exhibited in Sir John Macdonald's policy; the extension of our markets; by means of reciprocal trade arrangements within the Empire, with a preference for our products in British markets, and that appointments to the public service shall be made on grounds of character and fitness rather than for party reasons.

The manifesto is distinctly moderate in tone; it is void of bitterness; it avoids the extremes of ringing denunciation on the one hand and of rash promises on the other. By those who believe in Government ownership and the policy of protection it will be regarded as "safe and sane," and a must concede that it is entirely free from anything that could give offence to political friends or opponents. Mr. Borden never possessed the instinct of attack, and his modest address is more suggestive of the "sunny ways" professed by his chief adversary than of the defiance and sturdy blows which Sir Charles Tupper was wont to deliver. It may be none the less effective on that account.

The New York Times characterises the Admiral of the Baltic fleet as "a lunatic at large," and his ships as a "mad dog fleet."

The microbe maniacs have discovered a new danger, this time in the "Chautauqua salute," which, by the way, is not an oscillatory exercise, but a waving of handkerchiefs. They argue that the handkerchief, from its ordinary uses, becomes overcharged with various and numerous pathogenic bacteria, and that the operation of waving disseminates these more or less deadly germs in wholesale fashion. Of course, the removal from the pocket of a handkerchief that has been in use is always more or less dangerous to those in the vicinity, but less so than the general salute. And as for sneezing in the presence of others, it ought to be prohibited. So there you are. In the near future it will be in order that no one may enter a place of public assembly without first producing at the door a certificate of disinfection.

COMPLAINT MADE AGAINST ENGLAND

Foreign Visitors Who Come to the Country.

Say that they are Unable to Keep Clean in its Dense Atmosphere of Smoke and of Soot.

A writer in the Manchester Guardian says that foreigners who visit English cities and towns have a real grievance on the score of the dirty atmosphere. It is smoky and soot-laden; the streets are dirty, and after a few hours' sightseeing the foreigners think they have found an adequate explanation of the national devotion to the tub. The writer proceeds to apportion the blame for this state of uncleanness: "For long one has been content to be walled the smoky atmosphere of English industrial towns and to attribute it mainly to the bleaching stacks of factories and workshops. Yet recent years have seen much attention given to the worst offenders among the factories and workshops, and a great improvement in their furnace appliances, so that in many towns there is little ground for complaint. Nevertheless, the smoke nuisance continues, and one has only to climb to some commanding position whence the town as a whole can be seen to discover that the hundreds of domestic hearths are largely responsible for the evil."

The domestic hearths on the continent are free from blame in this respect, and the factory chimneys, although guilty of belching the blackest smoke, are generally gathered into one quarter. He thus explains the better behavior of continental domestic chimneys: "The factories, I think, account for this—the first is that there is a great deal of labor in regard to the preparation of food saved in continental towns. Workmen, business and professional men, all classes of society, use the restaurant much more frequently than we do in England. It is for them more than an eating house; it has something of the function of a club, and, besides saving house labor, it affords opportunities for social intercourse which are highly valued."

"Of course, there is a great deal to be said for our English home life with its close-knit ties when that home life is at its best; but how often, from lack of the stimulus of outside ideas, from the narrowing especially of the woman's horizon through her slavery to the family needs, does our home life tend to run in a narrow and straight groove, dead to all that is outside the daily round?"

The writer omits to mention, though he doubtless realises the fact, that until British restaurant keepers are content with something less than the cent per cent profits which they now endeavor to squeeze out of their customers, they will never become popular. He attributes the comparative cleanliness abroad to the use of slow combustion stoves in place of the medieval open fireplace.

"Not only is the atmosphere clean in the towns through which we ramble, but the streets, too, are well kept and tidy. England is a land of great engineering enterprises; our great towns bring their water over many miles, and provide a good and plentiful supply. Yet small towns in Belgium and Germany are much more prodigal of their water in street cleansing than are great English towns like Manchester and Birmingham. It is a commonplace, apparently of continental origin—that the streets not only are sweeping, but regular washing. In no other way can the noxious products of city life be cleared away."

DO YOU CHOOSE

YOUR MEDICINE WITH CARE AND INSIST ON HAVING
Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed AND Turpentine
FOR AILMENTS OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS.

You cannot be too particular in buying medicine. It may be a question of life or death. There are so many cough and cold remedies that there is a tendency to be careless in the selection of treatment, and yet what is more dangerous than a cold? You would not think of taking any medicine that might be offered for heart trouble or kidney disease, and yet far more people die from the result of neglected colds than from these ailments. INSIST ON HAVING A MEDICINE OF RELIABILITY AND REPUTATION SUCH AS DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE. This great family medicine has stood the test of years, and never disappointed those who put their trust in it as a cure for croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma, coughs, colds and throat troubles. Do not be satisfied with substitutes and imitations, for they lack the curative powers which have given Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine its world-wide reputation. Mrs. Geo. Good, Tichborne, Addington Co., Ont., writes: "It is with pleasure that I certify to the wonderful success of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as a cure for colds. It is the best and surest treatment for coughs and colds that we have ever been able to find.—Mrs. Geo. Good, Tichborne, Addington Co., Ont." Mrs. A. A. VAN BUSKIRK, Robinson Street, Moncton, N. B., writes:—"For years I have used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for my children when they have colds in the winter. I first used it with my daughter who suffered from a severe form of asthma. The least exposure to cold would lay her up and she would nearly suffocate for want of breath. I must say I found it to be a most satisfactory treatment, and it has entirely cured her. It seems to go direct to the diseased parts and bring the desired relief." A MUTINOUS CLOCK

Do you own a mutinous clock—a clock that has seemingly lost all sense of right and wrong, and persists in telling time falsely week in and week out? Don't endure its tantrums any longer. Bring it to our workshop and let us take it to pieces and ferrit out the fault. If it's fixable, we'll make it right again. If it's trouble is simply that it is wholly worn out from age or inherited weakness of constitution—why, then we can sell you a good new clock to take its place, and at as low a price as could any store in town. Suppose you think the matter over.
