Chief Petty Officer Hutt has been in the merchant marine since 1940, enlisting as a seaman and rising by steady promotion to his present rank. In that time he has made many voyages back and forth across the Atlantic on one occasion journeying to Murmansk in Russia. Twice his ship was torpedoed off Newfoundland and he spent some time in a lifeboat before being rescued. The last time was during the invasion of Normandy in June 1944 when his ship was sunk by shell fire from the enemy shore. Both times he was fortunate enough to escape injury. Chief Petty Officer Hutt intends to spend a month at home before proceeding back to sea, this time likely to the Pacific.
