WEDNESDAY MORNING AUGUST 29, 1906.

TO PREVENT TUBERCULOSIS.

Ever since physicians have discovered that tuberculosis is a germ disease a number of clever men have devoted their talents to securing a serum which would render human beings immune from the bacilli of the disease. One particular German doctor has found that a certain kind of caterpillar is immune against the tuberculosis of man, cattle, and birds. Its immunity is due, apparently, to the possession of a special kind of ferment capable of dissolving the wax on which the caterpillar feeds, and as the bacillus of tuberculosis contains 40 per cent of fat, it is probably dissolved, and so destroyed, by the same ferment.

To test this theory, he examined caterpillars that had been infected with tuberculosis.

The results showed that the ferment was the active principle in resisting tuberculosis, being capable of dissolving the bacilli, and then the question immediately arose as to whether an extract made from the blood of the caterpillar could be used to give immunity against the disease.

RESULTS ON GUINEA PIGS.

After some difficulty in making the extract, he succeeded in getting a satisfactory preparation, which he used in experiments upon tuberculosis guinea pigs to test its power of making them immune.

Of five tuberculosis guinea pigs treated with the preparation, three died, but post mortem examination showed no trace of the bacilli, and it was evident that they had been affected to some extent by the treatment; the remaining two guinea pigs were living nine months afterward, and showed no loss of weight. Fifteen others treated in the same way were still living at the time of writing, several months after being infected with the tuberculosis bacilli.

Although there has developed as yet nothing definite on which to base hopes of a cure for tuberculosis, it is evident that clever men are not idle. Their efforts may yet result in bringing some relief.

The Guardian is in receipt of a lengthy and most interesting communication from F. W. L. Moore, formerly of Charlottetown, now Superintendent of Police at Pietermaritzburg, on the recent rebellion among the natives of Zululand and Natal. This will be published later in the Saturday Magazine section of The Guardian. Captain Moore's account will be interesting for all his old friends, especially military men. He certainly with the knowledge of one acquainted with his subject presents the matter in a light somewhat different to that in which it has hitherto been placed.

THE WEED WAR.

It may possibly strike some readers that too much fuss is being made in regard to noxious weeds but the seriousness of the case may be judged by the experience of other countries.

Take Australia for instance: A romance of botany comes from the colony of Victoria, where a lady a few years since introduced for the first time into Australia a species of "St. John's wort." She set a few seeds in her modest garden in the town of Bright, in the hope that this peculiarly European plant would take to the new soil and provide her with a little of the herb for medicinal purposes. Her experiment was eminently successful, Particulars of it are given in the last issue of the Victorian "Year Book of Agriculture," from which we learn that the Hypericum Perforatum has by now taken possession of nearly a whole country, and occupies over 10,000 acres of good land.

It has even got across the main watershed of Victoria and taken root in Gippsland. The efforts of the Agricultural Department are now being directed to eradicating from the soil what is threatening to become as gigantic a pest as the Australian rabbit. It cost the lady of Bright a mere trifle to introduce it, but various remedies to get rid of it at a cost ranging from $25 to $250 an acre have not yet accomplished much.

WEARY.

I'm tired of seeing the pictures
Of "the ravishing youug Mrs. Thaw,"
I'm tired of Hartjes and Coreys,
I'm tired of G. Bernard Shaw.
I'm tired of all the muck-raking.
I'm tired to death of John D.
I'm tired of all the bank looters.
And I wish they were sunk in the sea;
I'm weary of scandal, I'm weary of woes,
I'm weary of grafters and weary of those
Who come with their troubles to me,

I'm tired of hearing of Pittsburg
And the nastiness festering there;
I'm tired of Anthony Comstock,
I wish they would lose him somewhere;
I'm tired of hearing how people
Forever keep going astray
Because they will bet on the races,
In the same idiotic old way;
I'm weary of all the grand dukes and the czar,
I'm weary of hearing how wicked men are,
How they murder and rob and betray.

I'm tired of filthy sensations,
And I wish that there might for a while
Be nothing to see or to hear of
That was fearful or wicked or vile;
I wish that the headlines to-morrow
Might tell us of splendid things done
By good men and glorious women,
And I wish that the world could be run
For a year without having the vulgar in sight,
As if they alone had the gifts or the right
To claim prominence under the sun.

ADVERTISING IS BROAD.

Advertising in itself means publicity and publicity is a very broad and comprehensive term. It does not mean simply a word whispered to a favored few. It is, rather, synonymous with a general, broadcast declaration, and the broader the scope of the announcement, the better the advertising. No occupied space that directs attention along given and desired lines can be reasonably regarded as wasted; nor can any funds expended to this end be adjudged extravagance.—American Medical Journa
