Propaganda Of 13 Years Has Produced Fixed Ideas Of Uniformity In Russia

Standardized Thinking of Population Even Exceeds That of the United States—Little Room Left for Personal Views.

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the eighth of a series of articles by Eugene Lyons, United Press Staff Correspondent in Moscow, after a residence there of 36 months.

United Press Staff Correspondent
(Special to The Guardian)

MOSCOW, March 11.—If the equality of life under the Soviets will ever be conveyed to readers outside it will be done not by economists or journalists, but by artists. The things which give that life its special flavor, its deep tang, are not alone in the concrete facts. They are in overtones, in new attitudes and new prejudices not easily caught in words.

Not even the United States with its reputation for standardized thinking and well-advertised catchwords, is as thoroughgoing in these respects as the Soviet Union. Thirteen years of ideological propaganda for a set of ideas have produced a mental uniformity rarely matched in history. Germany or France in the midst of their death grapple scarcely developed such uniform opinion as has the land of Soviets.

Path of Safety

For that active fraction of the population which takes the trouble to have a well-defined viewpoint at all, stock phrases too often take the place of thought. "Slogans" they are called here. Because of the exceptional strain and sacrifices imposed on the nation by the present policies, there is no room left for independent opinions. The prime political virtue is orthodoxy. Personal journalism, for instance, has been practically eliminated. Whether in "stories" or editorials the Soviet writer sticks to texts, stereotyped phrases, the path of safety.

Like the orthodoxies of older religions, Communist orthodoxy finds expression in unthinking and irrational taboos. Some things are "unclean," infidel, unapproachable. One can understand these taboos, the lines are too strenuous for anything that is not materialistic, hard-boiled and utilitarian. It might glow the machinery. Anything which smacks of "bourgeois comfort"—even too many cushions on the divan in the living room—is per se shameful. More and more these attitudes are becoming fixed and unreasoned, a Communist ritual. Not that these slogans and taboos are necessarily wrong; in the main, from the Soviet viewpoint, they are even right. The objection is that they have become routine, depriving

ABSORBINE
Reduces Leg Pain

Here's how to stop lameness and reduce leg pain. It's the only medicine that swells tendons, sprains, strains, bruises and stings together. It's the only good old Absorbine that works right through treatment. Does not blister or remove hair. Absorbine is the only medicine that works. At all drug stores, or sent postpaid, $2.50 bottle. Horse Booklet sent free. Young, Inc., Lyman Bldg., Montreal.

virtually sanctified by the Bolsheviks. I refer to John Reed. But had Reed arrived in 1920 instead of 1917 he could have found most doors slammed against him. He would have fallen automatically under the taboo against foreigners. Few if any Communist leaders today would be willing to meet him socially and openly as they did meet him in the early years of the revolution.

I have watched other correspondents of the same general stamp as Reed, liberal intellectuals with a flare for the drama of revolution, come here with every intention of "merging" themselves with Russian life. Invariably they were treated as actual or potential enemies, avoided, prevented from getting more than a peep at the show. I have watched them shrink in confusion further and further into the camp of frank opponents of the Soviet regime. It is almost too much to expect that a man who is treated like an enemy should behave like a friend.

It is one of the things which the foreign observer in the Soviet Union must know and guard against. The processes at work here, for all the error and waste and stupidity with which they are unavoidably encumbered, are far more significant and vital than the comfort of any individuals. A thoroughly objective approach is the first prerequisite for understanding the Russian scene.

The healing Vapor of Catarrhazone
banishes Coughs, Colds, Catarrh

The healing oils in Catarrhazone instantly destroy the germs that inflame the nose and throat. Irritable throat and bronchitis are soothed away. Stuffed-up nostrils are cleared of nasty discharges and pain over the eyes disappears. Winter ailments such as Catarrh, nasty coughs and colds never bother people who keep their breathing organs in healthy condition by the use of Catarrhazone. The inhaler can be carried in your purse or vest pocket—use it when the first sniffle or sneeze appears. Many a bad cold is stopped in this way. Two months treatment costs but a dollar,
