Help For Difficult Reading

Difficult reading is a cause for much worry. The reason for this condition is perfectly natural and inevitable. If old sight (at about middle life) or error of vision is your cause of worry, the only complete relief may be obtained through the wearing of correctly prescribed and fitted glasses.

Mrs. Joseph Weir has returned to Scotchford, after spending a week at York. Mr. John W. McDonald, Mrs. Alfred Wats, Grand Tracadee, recently celebrated his 96th birthday and is more active than many men many years younger. Mr. Henry Birt, Covehead Road, has taken up his residence at York.

What's your alibi—Harry Stevens?

McLure registered disgust. "Not Stevens—just human nature." "Human nature—as how?" "Come over here." We sat down in Peacock Alley. "I've got it all in a book. Fourteen reasons why I was defeated and no Harry Stevens in the whole lot."

The Silver Fox King drew a little red covered book from his pocket and read off the items.

"They came to many thousands of dollars—wharves, roads, harbors—public works and improvements that the government had made for Queens County, P. E. I."

An old habit, I suppose, but McLure kept saying that Premier Bennett had done it. He personified him as the giver of all blessing.

"And what," he asked rhetorically, "did Queens County do for Mr. Bennett?"

"Helped to defeat him."

"Aye, so. And why do you think?"

"I give it up."

"Because," and Chester McLure's strong white teeth gleamed savagely under the bayonet mustache, "because he heaped them with benefits."

"Quite so. He heaped coals of fire on their heads and they failed to respond."

"It was black ingratitude," said Chester McLure. "Ingratitude sharper than a serpent's tooth."

Or, so I reflected, than a needle-point mustache.

"Yes," said Mr. McLure following up the thought. "The citizens of Queens County owed so much to Mr. Bennett that they felt they could never pay the debt. So they repudiated it by licking me and electing the other fellow."

"It's a growing practice," I mused. "Not paying debts, I mean. Look at France and Germany."

"Human nature," said Chester McLure with a grim smile. "If you can't pay your creditor, wipe him out."

And on this note our chat ended. But who shall say that there are not depths of devotion to E. B. Bennett in the Conservative party when his followers can talk like that and mean it? These sentiments have the true ring. They are not the split notes of a cornet player with a hare lip.

Address and Presentation

Knowing that Mr. and Mrs. C. H. McNeill of New Perth were going to move to Georgetown their nearest neighbors met at their home on the night of Nov. 18th and presented them with an address.

Mr. Samuel McPherson was appointed chairman and after some remarks explaining the object of the meeting, Mr. William Minchin was asked to read the address. Mr. McNeill made a very feeling reply and cordially invited all present to visit them in Georgetown.

Following was the address read to Mr. C. H. and Mrs. McNeill: "It is with profound regret that we, your friends and neighbors, have learned that you have departed after due thought and consideration to remove your residence from our midst, remove to a more central locality with congenial surroundings, and to a town where it will be more convenient to you and your family. We are proud that you are advancing your years here. You being two of our most obliging neighbors your going will leave a vacancy which will not soon be filled.

You are both highly esteemed residents of New Perth. In you have many friendly connections, and some family ties. In it, Mr. McNeill, you were born, and resided all your life with the exception of some time spent in your early years, teaching in the public schools and in those districts that obtained your services there remains many of your old pupils who retain pleasant memories of those bygone days.

In your entering the commercial world you formed many pleasant and lasting associations with prominent men and the extensive travel that your business required in its early stages gave you a splendid opportunity to know and to make the acquaintance of many people in the eastern part of the Province and of other parts of the world that in after years ripened into a firmer friendship and a lasting union, and one which has given you a good citizen, a kind neighbor and a true friend, one who after her life of 50 years among us holds the esteem and respect of the whole community.

You both have at many times held positions of trust and responsibility in church and state, and were honored members of our local societies, ever ready and willing to assist in any movement that would promote the welfare of the settlement.

During the World War when the making of necessities for the soldiers was urgent you both took an active part, your house being always open to any meeting that would advance that worthy object. And your home has always been to us the centre of sociable hospitality. In it the stranger and the weary traveller have often been refreshed by that cup that cheers but does not inebriate.

The tinge of sadness that your departing gives us is lessened to a great extent by your not going many miles away and that some friendly intercourse can still be continued, and also by the pleasant knowledge that you are going to reside in the city of your birth. And we trust that no cloud or shadow will darken the setting sun of your remaining years, that you may continue to live that life of peace and good will, and to enjoy it in the future as you have so abundantly enjoyed it in the past, and that He Who has brought you this far on life's fitful journey will be your Guide the remaining part of the way.

The meeting closed by singing Auld Lang Syne and God Save the King. (Patriot please copy)
