STEAMERS AND TUGS COLIDE BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 22.—An unusual accident in which two tugs were damaged and two steamers escaped damage occurred recently at the North Chelsea drawbridge. The four-way collision happened as the steamer Sage Brush, attended by the tug Nathaniel P. Doane, was proceeding through the draw for Charleston, and the steamer Sewalls Point, with the tug Taurus, was heading down stream. In some manner the Taurus swung into the path of the Doane, which forced her stern against the Sage Brush. The Taurus then turned about directly under the bow of the Sewalls Point, the steamer's sharp prow slicing off a large section of the towboat's stem-head and splintering her bow. Pearl B. Crowley, cook on the Taurus, suffered a lacerated leg and Sam Justassen, cook of the Doane,

SOCIAL GATHERING — Another large crowd attended the B. I. S. card party auction forty five in their hall Wednesday evening, when the usual good time was enjoyed by all. Since those social evenings were instituted they gained in favor and devotees of the game anxiously await Wednesday evening to "sit in." After cards a special orchestra furnished music for dance which followed. These social evenings will necessarily conclude before Lent which is now less than a month away. The winners in last evening's games were: Ladies—1, Mrs. J. McAleer; 2nd, Miss Biso, Gentlemen—1st, Mr. Henry Hughes; 2nd, Mr. J. McAleer. Lucky chair, Mr. J. McAleer.

The situation undoubtedly was causing concern, the extent of which was reflected in a dispute which arose early this month. A group who had bought a lot of animals—silver foxes, blue foxes, and mink—from the United States and had paid, it is reported, 10 per cent of the purchase price, refused to accept the animals on their arrival in Norway, on the ground that they were not as good as the animals they had agreed to buy. The shipment is in quarantine pending the settlement of the dispute. The exhibition period of the year is now nearly over, and since the breeders have returned home rumors regarding the future of the industry are not depressing. It seems generally to be appreciated that the days of making large dividends from the sale of breeding stock only have passed for the great majority of the breeders have returned home rum: from the industry must be based on pelts. That this belief is gaining ground is apparent in a recent report that in February the Pelts-ent-ralen (pelt association) expects to ship to London, on behalf of members of the Norwegian Silver Fox Breeder's Association, between 10,000 and 15,000 skins, which it is hoped will realize about 4,000,000 kroner ($1,080,000). Norwegians also appear to have met with some success in selling their

THE BREATHE-ABLE TABLET

Silver Fox Industry In Norway

Mr. Frederick H. Palmer, Canadian Trade Commissioner, writes in the Commercial Intelligence Journal:

Another series of exhibitions of silver foxes and other fur-bearing animals has been concluded in various centers in Norway. As is usual, the largest and most important of these displays was held in Oslo well over a thousand animals from all parts of the country were exhibited. The Oslo show is by far the most important in Scandinavia, but this year there were no animals exhibited from other countries. Last year some silver foxes from Swedish farms were shown.

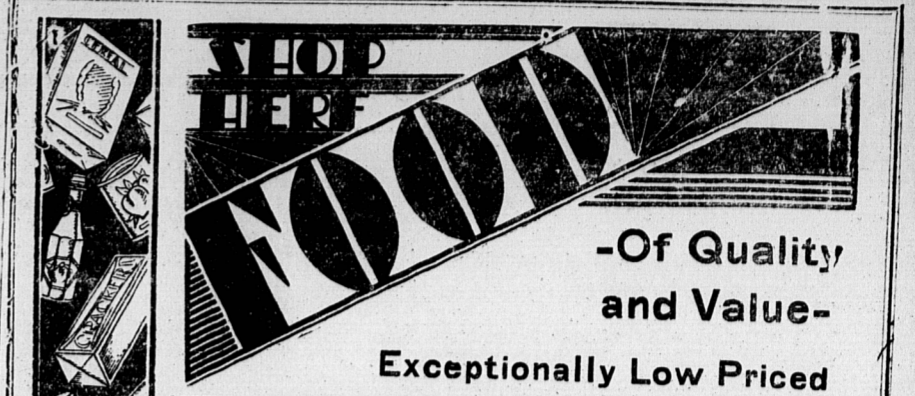

There are 70,000 silver foxes in Norway. Although local experts value the animals at 65,000,000 kroner ($17,500,000), doubt was expressed at the Oslo show whether the quality of the stock was being maintained. Leaders in the associations of fur breeders are taking steps to educate individual farmers as to the necessity of placing the entire industry on a pelt basis—that is, to discontinue raising stock expressly for sale as breeding animals, but to breed with the idea of selling the pelts. This policy may be a hardship for the smaller breeders who have been operating with two or three pairs of animals, and hoping always to sell their young foxes for 3,000 kroner per pair to people desirous of entering this business. (In nearly every prospectus which was issued this year, inviting subscriptions to stock in new fox-breeding companies, the value or breeding stock was generally estimated to be worth 3,000 kroner per pair. Towards the end of the year this value was sometimes placed at 2,500 kroner per pair.)

As the proposal for the organization of farms on a pelt-producing basis became more widely known, and its possible effect on the smaller farmer began to be appreciated, a condition approaching panic was noted in some sections of the country. The fall in value did not take place until late in the year, and serious results in depressed prices were observed only at a small locality on the west coast and at an auction of some 600 animals held in Oslo immediately after the exhibition.

There were several hundred animals displayed at the Oslo exhibition for the sole purpose of being sold, and it was perhaps the lack of interest shown in this feature of the exhibition which was responsible for the low prices which were offered. At the auction held after the exhibition registered animals sold for between 300 and 600 kroner each ($81 to $162). At this auction some pelts sold which realized about 100 kroner ($27) each.

The exhibition period of the year is now nearly over, and since the breeders have returned home rumors regarding the future of the industry are not depressing. It seems generally to be appreciated that the days of making large dividends from the sale of breeding stock only have passed for the great majority of the breeders have returned home rum: from the industry must be based on pelts. That this belief is gaining ground is apparent in a recent report that in February the Pelts-ent-ralen (pelt association) expects to ship to London, on behalf of members of the Norwegian Silver Fox Breeder's Association, between 10,000 and 15,000 skins, which it is hoped will realize about 4,000,000 kroner ($1,080,000). ONLY "TRULY LOYAL" WANTED IN TORONTO

TORONTO, Jan. 22.—Toronto is a bit particular about the type of overcoats teachers that are allowed to come here on exchange. The management committee of the board of education has decided that they must furnish certificates on these points: (1) Physical and professional fitness to give acceptable service in the place of the Toronto exchanging teacher. (2) Satisfactory religious faith and moral character. (3) A truly loyal attitude in public and private life. No. 3 effectively bars out Communists but there is no definition of just what "satisfactory religious faith" may be. There was a suggestion in a previous year that Roman Catholics should not be eligible because they have separate schools here but the committee decided to ask for Protestant teachers. This year the committee names no particular shade of religious faith. Incidentally Toronto makes sure to send good teachers overseas by insisting that only pedagogues of five years' experience or more, and holding 75 per cent rating in the past year, are to be accepted for exchange.
