

WHEN those who know not what liberty means were threatening to destroy that which decent men had worked for and had cherished...

The world was dark. Few men, if any, knew what to believe. We stood on the brink of a precipice of political slavery. It was the darkest hour ever faced by free men.

Fortunate indeed, are those of us who live in the same world at the same time with such a man. Long may he remain hereafter after his work shall have been finished.

It is inevitable that, for generations to come, our children and their children will read the story of Winston Churchill and thrill with pride because father or grandfather had heard his voice...

HELP WANTED If the weather is favorable the early part of this coming week we need four truck drivers, about ten good strong capable men to assist us in the potato digging as well as a number of girls to pick potatoes. The wages will be good; you are paid by the hour and those who work during potato digging will be given the preference of working in the turnip waxing plant and the potato shed later on.
