HAPPENINGS OF THE WEEK

This week was delightfully warm, and appreciation of the welcome change was shown on every side. Campers are preparing to leave for places unnamed, while everyone who possibly can is picnicking, boating, bathing, driving, or enjoying the out-of-doors in some restful way.

The vacation season is nowhere more apparent than on the arrival of the different trains and boats, where the summer tourist traffic is beginning to make itself felt. Quite a number of visitors have arrived this week and many city people have taken their departure.

The American tourists are now coming east, having waited until after the glorious 4th was duly celebrated. The tourist trade is said by those in authority to be quite brisk.

Among the visiting craft this week was the handsome American yacht, Alvina, having on board Mr. D. H. Hutchins of Ohio, and several guests, who are enjoying a trip through the Nova Scotia and St. Lawrence waters.

There were picnics galore this week, public and private. Those to the car ferry at Carleton Point were very largely attended and thoroughly enjoyed. The entertainment was so varied and new that no one was in the least bit bored, and many expressed the wish that they might return to this favoured site ere the summer days pass away.

Victoria Park is the popular resort in the evenings now and all that is necessary to make it perfectly ideal is the band once or twice a week. When the band is playing the water front is dotted with motor craft and canoes of all kinds, making a very charming picture.

Mrs Ernest Lord, who came home from South Africa a few years ago with her husband and young son, to visit Mr and Mrs Artemus Lord, Brighton, leave early next week for England, where she will join some friends and travel with them to her old home in far away Australia. Coming here as an entire stranger with her husband, whose strength gradually failed until she was left a widow, she made for herself a wide circle of friends, having a sunny, sociable disposition which endeared her to all, and especially to those more intimately acquainted with her in her home. Mrs Lord's Charlottetown friends will miss her and her little son, but will always have pleasant memories of their visit here. She will be followed, with many sincere wishes for a safe voyage home and many future years of happiness among her own people.

Holland Hall is a very popular resort this summer, and the cottages are now occupied, while others will be in the near future.

Mrs (Col.) Ings and family, Holland Hall, have as their guest Miss Jean Blanchard, of Windsor, who arrived this week.

Mrs Carson Hood has taken a cottage at Holland Hall, and has as her guest her mother, Mrs Green.

Mrs Jack McLaren and Miss Mary McLaren, of St. John, are guests of Mr and Mrs J. P. Gordon and Mrs McGregor at their summer cottage, Miss McLaren goes to Summerside to-day and will visit with friends there next week.

Sir Louis and Lady Davies are to arrive home this week to spend the summer at their beautiful residence, Waterside.

Mrs J. LeRoy Holman and her mother, Mrs John McKay, of Summerside, are spending this week at Carleton Point.

Mrs J. A. S. Bayer and son, Theodore, were guests this week of their friend, Miss Anita Taylor, Halifax. It will be interesting to Miss Taylor's friends here to learn that she was a winner in Halifax Chronicle's contest trip to the Panama Pacific Exposition at San Francisco having probably the highest vote of the entire Province.

Mrs Deacon had the pleasure this week of entertaining her brother Colonel Montgomery Campbell, of Sussex, who is recruiting for the 64th overseas C.E.F.

The tennis tea at Victoria Park this afternoon will be served by Miss J. Johnston, the Misses Jenkins and the Misses Byrne.

Mr C. C. Gardiner, of Los Angeles who is greatly enjoying his visit here was this week renewing old acquaintances in Summerside, the guest of Miss Eva McNeill.

The many friends of Mr Allison Stanley, of Montreal, who is spending the summer here, regret his illness in the P.E.I. Hospital, and trust he will soon be sufficiently strong to leave that institution.

Among the officers going overseas from Vancouver, is Major Hoyle's brother of Mrs (Rev.) T. W. Murphy.

HOW WE SHOULD CONTROL HABITS

We are all creatures of habit. We perform most of our daily acts in a habitual manner. If it were not for habit we would take all our conscious life in balancing ourselves, or walking as it is for the child. But habits may be both beneficial and injurious. The habit of idleness is a valuable one. But the habit of idleness is easier to acquire, and is very detrimental. We have all tried to break ourselves of some bad habit, and know how hard it will be found of practical help.

1. Make as decided a start as possible. Take a public pledge; tell your friends; most of all, make a determined resolution. A man who was trying to break himself of drinking advertised that he would give $50 to anyone who thereafter saw him drink.

2. Never allow a relapse. Never indulge again in the old habit. It is possible to undo in an hour of indulgence all the good you have done in a month of abstinence.

3. Seize the first opportunity to act in your resolve. Habits are formed or broken, not by resolving, but by action. If the resolve is to be neighborly, take advantage of the first opportunity to speak kindly to your neighbor. Never try just to stop a bad habit. Try to form a good one in its place. Don't try to break the habit if being cross. Try to acquire the habit of being pleasant.

OUR FARMER FRIEND AND YE EDITOR

By the Patriot's Office Cat

"I'm mighty glad to see you," said the editor as Our Farmer Friend entered the sanctum after giving the door a roasting thump. "But what in the name of Sam Hill are you making such a noise about? Where in the world have you been these many weeks? I have missed you greatly and our readers have also missed your words of wisdom, as they percolate through this favorite fire-side journal."

"What am I making such a noise about, and why haven't I been here before? I am surprised at your asking such a question. Don't you know that I always called when I was in town to commend you for your good work when I could do so without doing violence to my conscience. But lately I have been giving more thought to provincial affairs and have begun to think that perhaps we have both been stepping a little over the bounds and not giving credit where it is due."

"What's got you now?" said the editor, as he seated uneasily in his chair. "What have I been saying that has touched your conscience? I thought there was as much rubber in it as there is in my own."

"Well, to get down to brass tacks my uneasiness begun some months ago and I think it was caused by those Saturday sermons of yours, and I greatly appreciate them. I thought you meant everything you said, but when you stopped them and gave their place up to politics and called the Conservatives all kinds of hard names I began to have my doubts."

"But don't the Conservatives deserve everything I said about them?" interrupted the editor who I could see was beginning to get hot under the collar. "Haven't they been spending much more money than the Liberals and isn't that enough to condemn them?"

"I know that they have been spending more money than the Liberals," said Our Farmer Friend as he warmed up to his subject. "But that in itself is not to their discredit if they have been spending it wisely. I haven't noticed that you have brought home any corrupt charges or shown that any of the money was improperly expended. Neither have you shown that the Liberals did better when they were in office."

"That's no way to talk," said the editor as he allowed his hand to meander through his hair. "If I can convince people that the Conservatives spend more each year than the Liberals isn't it reasonable to suppose that there are some who will believe that it was not all well spent? That is fair politics according to the Liberal's rule of faith, and the boss smiled at the convincing character of his argument. But Our Farmer Friend had a quick think, and it evidently did not serve to quiet his conscience.

"I don't believe your course is a fair one," he said as he uncrossed the leg he had astride of the other. "If you can prove that the Conservatives spent more money than they could afford or wasted any of it I'm with you in driving the fact home. But I don't like your policy of insinuation. I'm a Britisher and fight in the open; I don't like German tactics."

"You talk like a parson—or the Guardian. I can't prove anything wrong, but I can call attention to such facts as I think necessary to deal with in the interests of the party. For doing this I don't think I deserve the censure of a good Liberal like yourself and I dislike your reference to German tactics," said the boss, and I could see that he was trying to refrain from saying something severe.

"That kind of reasoning may stifle the voice of conscience in your case but it does not go with me," was the reply. "Until I read those Saturday sermons of yours I thought the course you speak of was alright but now I see things in a different light. I can see a great deal of good that the Conservatives have done in the short time they have been in office and I can see many things that the Liberals did when they were in power that do not seem to be right."

This declaration made the editor even more uneasy and he could not help showing his perturbation. "If you know anything good about the Conservatives keep it in the back of your head until after the election," he said, "and if there is anything in the Liberal record that you do not like forget it. One of the prime requisites of a truly loyal Liberal is a good forgetter where party interests are concerned."

"You advise me to be discreet in the interests of the party," retorted Our Friend, "but why don't you practice what you preach. Was it discreet on your part, for instance, to tackle the Mathieson administration on its financial policy. That is their long suit. They have been spending more money on roads and bridges every year than the Liberals. They have spent more on education. Their expenditure for the promotion of agriculture is much greater. They set their old claims against the province inherited from the Liberals and in the war last year alone cost them $20,000. In spite of all this they had a surplus each year and the rate of taxation has not been increased. The Liberals had a deficit every year despite their comparatively small expenditures. These are facts that speak for themselves. It is upon the records of the different administrations that the people will pass judgment when given a chance. This being the case I have grave doubts as to the success of the Liberals at the polls. Indeed it may be that the small remnant we have in the Legislature now will be swept away."

"Say, you're Job's comforter, surely. You give me the blues. Your visits in the past always cheered me up but today your heart seems to be away down in your boots. I'm getting discouraged with the way a lot of my old political friends are talking. I'm doing the best I can under the circumstances. But I must put up some kind of a fight. It is not by talking the way you do that political battles are won."

As the editor said this he arose from his chair with a weary look and extended his hand. Our Farmer Friend took the hint and also arose. It seemed to me to be a pathetic parting—so different from former ones when the political sky was brighter for the Liberals than it is today.

As the two men stood looking into each other's eyes a rap was heard at the door. "That's my boy Benjamin after me," said Our Farmer Friend, and I must go. There are some other things I would like to talk to you about but I must leave them for my next call. Even if I cannot see eye to eye on some things just now we can at least be friends. I shall long remember those Saturday sermons of yours for they have made me see things in a different light."

With this parting remark Our Farmer Friend took the hand of Benjamin and the two wended their way streetward. As the door closed after them I peeped out from where I was lying under the desk and the look I saw on the editor's face still lingers in my memory. The editor saw me at the same time and made a vicious drive at me with his foot which just missed its mark. I have since been trying to figure out why he should thus attack me, but the mystery is still unsolved. Perhaps you can tell me?

TOOK GUN UP 7,000 FEET.

UDINE, Italy, July 8.—Details have now been received of the taking by the Italians of Zellkofel Peak, west of Monte Croce Pass, on July 26. This mountain is over 7,000 feet high, and is usually ascended from the Austrian side, as the Italian slope has been considered impassable. The Austrians had a fixed observation point with forty men well entrenched just below the top of the mountain, when they signalled with the heliograph to their artillery below. The Italians, finding it impossible to take the front line, which is extremely steep, and was exposed to the enemy's fire, decided to try the route which had been considered impossible.

Thirty volunteers from the Alpine troops, headed by two lieutenants, climbed the almost perpendicular face of the mountain, tied together by ropes. Notwithstanding the difficulties of the ascent, they carried a machine gun in pieces, which were strapped on their shoulders.

Slowly and with immense precautions they reached the top overlooking the Austrian encampment. They waited till night, and then opened fire with the machine gun, after which they charged with bayonets before the Austrians had time to recover from their surprise. Only one Austrian, the officer in command, escaped. He managed to rush down the mountainside.
