Happenings Of The Week

Everyone is anticipating the visit of the Duke of Kent to Charlottetown next week. His Royal Highness was christened George Edward Alexander Edmund and his other titles are Earl of St. Andrews and Baron Downpatrick. The Duke was married Nov. 29, 1934, to Princess Marina of Greeze and Denmark, and they have two children, Prince Edward George Nicholas Paul Patrick, aged five, and Princess Alexandra Helen Elizabeth Olga Christabel, aged four. The Duke is a personal aide de camp to his brother, the King, is Colonel-in-Chief of the Queens Own West Kent Regiment and a commander in the Royal Navy. He is a flying enthusiast and has spent much of his time with the three arms of the forces.

The King and Queen recently visited factories working for the Ministry of Aircraft Production and the Ministry of Supply. They saw the "V" sign chalked up in many different places, and once the King drew the Queen's attention to the sign chalked on the steel side of a big machine. In a metal melting shop at one factory the Queen talked to several woman workers. The King told Ministry of Supply officials that he had been most impressed with the spirit of the workers and their obvious will to win. In one factory the King and Queen watched parts being made for some of Britain's biggest and newest bombers. It was made known also that during a visit by the King to a Ministry of Supply factory a few months ago he saw the new "Churchill" tank in production. He spent nearly half-an-hour riding in the tank and later took charge of the machine for a short time. The King said that he had been impressed by the manoeuvrability of the tank and congratulated the directors of the factory on its comfort and speed.

Dorothy Dix Says—

PARENTS NEED DIPLOMACY DEALING WITH DAUGHTERS

They Should Recognize The Younger Generation Is Entitled To Its Views, Its Likes And Dislikes

Dear Miss Dix—I am a sophomore in college,, a very lonely only child whose parents have never allowed her a vistige of personal liberty They have bought my clothes—what they thought was proper for me to wear—without any regard for my taste or desires. They have chosen all of my friends and I have been permitted to have no other. Six years ago they picked out a boy for my husband when I got old enough to marry and I have had to go steady with him ever since. They do not let me have any other dates. I do not like this boy. I do not want to marry him. I want to have dates like other girls and go around as other girls do, but when I ask for permission to lead a normal life the answer is No. Miss Dix, I am so unhappy that I have terrible thoughts—about running away from home about having affairs with boys I meet on street corners. Sometimes I think I will go insane and I look forward with horror to the time when I will have to marry the boy my parents picked out for me and whom I do not love. I know that there is somebody in the world whom I could love. What shall I do? TOVA.

ANSWER—Study very hard and fit yourself for some occupation by which you can support yourself. A job will mean freedom to you. Make that a goal toward which you are working all the time. Concentrate your thoughts on that and forget the injustices to which you are being subjected.

Shun Morbid Thoughts

Put out of your mind all of the morbid thoughts over which you have been brooding and do none of the foolish things that you contemplate in your moments of despair.

Don't run away from your home because you are unhappy in it. It gives you, at least, security and food and shelter and a chance at an education, and these are great blessings however dearly you have to pay for them. The tyranny of your parents would seem a very small matter if you were tramping the streets, hungry and footsore and weary, with no place to go at night until the police ran you into some squalid retreat for tramps and vagrants.

And because you are not allowed any of the pleasures of youth and you crave the society of boys, don't run off with some lad who offers you a good time. Many a girl pays for one evening's fun with a ruined life.

And don't worry about having to marry a boy you don't love. Nobody can force you into that if you will just stiffen your back and refuse to say YES.

Parents' Mistake

I know it is hard for the young to believe that their sorrows and disappointments will pass and that while, as the Good Book says, weeping may endure for the night, rejoicing cometh with the morning. Everything to them seems so final, but all things pass. We live through our hardships.

But what a mistake parents make when they try to live their children's lives for them! How strange that fathers and mothers forget that their children are not replicas of themselves, but different individuals with their own personal tastes and desires and their own right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness! And how cruel that they should try to make a daughter marry a man of their choice instead of her own.

Of course, the parents' excuse for their tyranny is that they are trying to protect their daughter by keeping her shut away from the world, but the girl has to live in the world and she cannot protect herself against its dangers if she does not know them.

Nontalkative Boy Friend

Dear Miss Dix—I am a girl of 19 and go steady with a boy of 29. We have been going together for two years and I love him very much. He has never told me that he loved me, but says he wouldn't be going with me for so long if he didn't care for me. When we are out we always have a good time, with one exception. After two or three kisses and a little conversation he falls asleep and doesn't speak a word until time to go home. But after he leaves me he seems to wake up and feel lively and goes to the club with his friends. Miss Dix, my problem is this: Why does he fall asleep when we are alone? Does it mean that he is bored with my company? Does he love me? P. M. L.

ANSWER—I think you had better get your courage together and face the fact that the young man is not in love with you. No man in love ever goes with a girl for two years without mentioning the state of his affections.

If you cannot pry even a little lovemaking out of your boy friend, you had as well give him up and turn your attention toward some better prospect. You will never get him to the proposing point.

As to why he falls asleep in your company, I can only suggest that you must have a soothing influence over him. Something almost hypnotic. Perish the thought that he is bored! Now that our ancient defense, hat pins, has been restored to us, why don't you give him a jab now and then so as to wake him up? DOROTHY DIX.

Queen Mary Acknowledges Lovely Gifts

Members of "The Queen Mary Needlework Guild" will be interested in the following letter—which was received by their Secretary—

Dear Madam—I am commanded by Queen Mary to thank Mrs. MacLure, Mrs. Evans, together with the members of the Prince Edward Island Branch and the Quepec Branch respectively, of Her Majesty's Needlework Guild most warmly for the lovely contribution of clothes, which have now safely arrived, and for which the Queen is most grateful.

They really are very beautiful things and as regards the babies' woollies and little nightgowns the Matron of "Queen Mary's Maternity Home" is absolutely grateful, partly because such things are extremely difficult to come by these days what with the necessity for coupons etc., and partly because of the essential high standard of the wonderful hand work.

Then the sweaters, socks, etc. for soldiers, airmen and sailors, are most acceptable to Her Majesty, who will divide the soldiers' comforts among the Regiments of which she herself is Colonel.

The Queen is most interested to hear of all you have sent to Plymouth and elsewhere. Your members must be absolutely indefatigable in their work for the Forces.

Believe me,

Yours sincerely,

CYNTHIA COLVILLE,
Lady-in-Waiting.

A Morning Smile

ONE THING CLEAR

Pompous in manner and difficult to please, the customer had given waitress a lot of needless trouble. At last, however, he finished his meal and beckoned her to the table. "How much do I owe?" he snapped.

"I'm sure I don't know," she retorted coldly. "But your bill here is one and ninepence."

Exercise Can Bring Back 'Lost' Youth and Beauty

Double Chin Can Be Conquered

Getting old? That double chin means only that you're getting soft!

Chin and neck exercises, you know, can vanquish a double chin, just as right exercises reduce fatty hips or a bulgy tummy. When unused muscles are brought back to youthful firmness that "lost" beauty returns!

A simple daily chin routine, including this exercise, should do the job very nicely:

1—Turn your head sharply to the right until chin is over right shoulder. 2—Keeping chin over shoulder, tilt head backward slowly and lift face to ceiling. 3—Lower head slowly.

Repeat this 5 times, turn head to left and repeat. After a minute's rest, repeat exercise again until you've done it 20 times.

Then, if you have other figure problems, go right on with the rest of your "youthifying" program—exercises for unlovely waistline, bust, arms, hips!

Our 32-page booklet has exercise routines to correct all these figure faults, as well as poor posture, "dowager's hump," heavy legs. Also has general daily exercise routine, special exercises for relaxing tense nerves, relieving aching feet.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of BEST EXERCISES FOR HEALTH AND BEAUTY to The Guardian Home Service, The Charlotteown Guardian. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of BOOKLET.

Living & Leisure —The Woman's Realm

THE MESSAGE

It was carried by the wind
As it whistled in the trees;
The grasses caught the message
From the gently blowing breeze.
The flowers nodded wisely
As they heard the words go by,
While the birds took up the echo
And went winging through the sky.

A wagtail told the river
Which was flowing to the sea;
The billows roared the message—
That's how it came to me.
To those who wish to hear it
The message I pass on—
"Fear not! God lives and loves
Go to, and carry on!"
—E. M. Howie (Edinburgh)

Human beings are able to live about four days without water.

Snoods, out of the summer picture, will be in evidence again this fall and will appear in lavish editions for evening and will also anchor smart fall hats. Some of them will be dotted with tiny bow knots or thumbnail swirls of plume and cop feather.

"BLUE-JACKETS"

The wearing of the traditional "true blue" by our naval forces can eb traced back as far as the Roman invasion. At that time we read of British seamen putting to sea in wax-smeared longboats, the boat sails and clothing of the crew being dyed a light blue colour so as to make them less easily seen from a distance. We find this use of colour for protection in the present day custom of painting warships grey.

Sailors in Chaucer's day wore "a rough blue gown of 'falding or coarse sack-cloth," according to Sir Henry Price, the authority on the history of men's dress. This garment, girdled at the waist, continued in general use until after the Stuart times. On high-days and holidays, however, the seamen were attired in the liveries of the shipowners or noblemen owning the fleets. On such occasions the crews presented a gay spectacle of colour. In Tudor times the livery of the Royal seamen was green and white. In those days an officer's coat was made of damask, camlet, or satin. The trousers were richly slashed and ruffs were worn. The Commonwealth period saw a return to more sober attire.

The Duchess of Bedord is said to have been responsible for the choosing of the colours of blue and white for the first officers' uniforms. King George had admired a riding habit of blue and white worn by the Duchess and had decided upon those colours for the uniform of the Royal Navy. Gold buttons and braid were used to distinguish the various ranks.—F.R.G.S.

UNFINISHED WALLS NEED PROTECTION

Unfinished brick walls should be covered at night with boards, canvas, or tar paper as a protection against weather and the absorption of excessive moisture or excessive drying in hot watheer.

When the walls are finished they should be thoroughly cleaned and washed down. For washing away efflorescence a five per cent solution of muriatic acid may be used, followed by a washing with clear water.

TIPS TO WOMEN ABOUT CLEANING

There's no reason in the world why spring housecleaning season should leave a trail of rough, red, unattractive hands, arms and knees, broken fingernails and frayed nervous systems. Housecleaning may not be the pleasantest work in the world, but it certainly isn't as bad as it is made to appear by the annual frezy in altogether too many houses.

A good tip for any homemaker is the way the annual cleaning out job is done in her husband's office. He, the boss, you may be sure, wouldn't dream of upsetting all departments the same day. He orders cleaning-up in one department at a time. Furthermore, he doesn't expect miracles. He gives people time to figure out a place to put things. He lets them go home at the regular hour and begin fresh next morning, instead of working far into the night and doing so much that they have no energy next morning. Why can't the housewife be at least as fair to herself as the boss is to his employees?

Rushing

Instead of upsetting every room in the house, then rushing from one place to another all day and half the night as well, why wouldn't it be smarter for the spring housecleaner to do one room at a time, keeping it locked until it is finished? Or to do all rugs one day and all curtains the next instead of dashing madly between vacuum cleaner and laundry room many times a day for a week?

At best, cleaning is difficult, but trying to do too much at a time in order to be finished by a certain date doesnt make it any easier. Better to have it dragged on for three weeks by a smiling, good-natured woman than to have it finished, however expertly, by a woman so nervous and worn out that there are lines between her browns and a growl instead of a sing in her throat. Clean curtains don't mean much to the man who isn't allowed to forget for a minute that their freshness was achieved at great physical and mental strain.
