FOOD CRISIS

rice said today that the names of the Ministers on this battle-of-the-wool committee are not being announced at once but it is understood almost every Minister in the Government is liable to duty on the group.

Worse Than War Years

The basic consideration for the Ministers is that Britain is worse off for food than in the blackest days of the war in 1942, the bacon ration was four ounces weekly. It is now three. Cheese was 100 per cent rationed in June, 1942, but now it is three-quarters rationed. The most bitter blow would be the imposition of a ration on bread, thus far plenty available after March 3 of this year. United States meat and rice from the Far East were available four years ago but now are unavailable.

Mr. Atlee is facing a rising outcry over the present rationing, with housewives complaining that the health of their families is suffering because of limited and monotonous supplies. Commissioners of Sewers And Water Supply

Having nominated as a candidate for the election of Commissioner, I solicit the favour of the votes of all electors in the Five Wards.

I have no reason to doubt that the present Commissioners are doing their best in the interests of taxpayers, but I feel there is room for improvements and the further development of the system.

My practical knowledge and long experience fit me, I think, to be of service to the electors in this respect.

D. L. MacKINNON.

Quality Of Pasture Index To Prosperity

"I know of no place on the farm where closer study and substantial investments are justified as in the building of good pastures on good land," said Dr. E. S. Archibald, Director, Dominion Experimental Farms Service, in a recent address.

The establishment of a pasture is an important part of the farmer's program. It is a long-term investment and one that pays off in many ways. A good pasture can produce more food for less money and can also improve the soil and the health of the animals that graze on it.

One of the most important factors in the establishment of a pasture is the choice of the right type of grass. The grass should be hardy and able to withstand the weather conditions of the area. It should also be nutritious and easy to digest for the animals.

Another important factor is the amount of fertilizer used. Fertilizer can help to increase the yield of the grass and make it more nutritious. However, it is important to use fertilizer wisely and not to over-fertilize, as this can be harmful to the soil and the environment.

Finally, it is important to have a good drainage system for the pasture. This will help to prevent waterlogging and keep the soil healthy. A good drainage system can also help to reduce the risk of disease and parasites.

By following these guidelines, farmers can ensure that their pastures are of the highest quality and that they are able to produce the maximum amount of food for their animals. This is essential for the prosperity of the farm and the well-being of the community.

It's always feeding time for these four-month-old twin calves. Even when there are two clamoring for food there's enough to go around and the photographer gets little attention. The mother and her twins are owned by Ray Webber of Berwyn, Alta.

Remember four-year-old Francine Opon of Chicago, whose grief over the loss of her dog, "Funkin", was so strong that she spurned the friendly overtures of a new pet, "Fee Wee". Photo at left shows Francine giving "Fee Wee" the air shortly after they were introduced a week ago. Things are different now, as photo at right proves. "Fee Wee" has won Francine's heart, and word will abound. Pedigreed Boston terrier was a gift from a sympathetic newspaper reader after "Funkin" was killed by an auto.
