

Halifax Boys Deaths Remain Deep Mystery

Police Unable to Advance Clue—No Human Hand Responsible.

HALIFAX, July 21. (CP)—Another day of investigation has thrown no further light upon the death of Bramwell Heffernan and his brother Edward, whose bodies were picked up beside a railway track Wednesday night.

Autopsies failed to disclose how the two young brothers died. Dr. Ralph Smith, Provincial Pathologist, said they had been killed by "something long and slender" which pierced their backs, but he could not explain how the wounds had been inflicted.

He was of the opinion that no human hand could have caused the injuries, but on the other hand he said it would have been difficult for them to have been caused by the front of a locomotive. The injuries to both boys were almost identical.

Police were in touch with two persons believed to have been the last to see the boys alive. Mr. and Mrs. George A. Parsons said they had seen the brothers picking blueberries beside the railway tracks Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Parsons gave the boys a cup with which to get a drink.

well, for on coming ashore he learned that the fog extended right up to the coast of Greenland.

As a member of Pan American Airways technical staff, Col. Lindbergh is directing an aerial mapping expedition of Labrador and Greenland to recommend an advantageous route for a proposed transatlantic mail and passenger service.

HEARTILY WELCOMED

Other members of the expedition went to Greenland last week on the steamer Jelling, chartered by the Company.

Even up on this northern territory word of the Colonel's thrilling experiences in the air had travelled among the whites, Indians and Eskimos, and the smiling Colonel and his wife received a warm welcome when they landed.

For Ann Morrow Lindbergh there were specially hearty greetings as the womenfolk offered consolation for the loss of her murdered child. News of the tragedy had been late in reaching the Labrador but they had suffered with her in her sorrow.

Flat. The aviator expected to hop off again at 4 p.m. (9 p.m., E.S.T.) for Edmonton, Alta., but that hour passed without his departure.

APPEARED FIT

Refreshed by six hours sleep last night while mechanics repaired his mangled landing gear, Post seemed to be fit when he brought the Winnie Mae to a perfect landing. An hour after he came down, he attended to details of servicing the plane with gasoline, oil and was eating a substantial meal.

He said he expected to reach Edmonton, 1,450 miles away, early Saturday morning, pause there half an hour and speed on toward New York, a distance of 2,200 miles.

LOSES 20 HOURS

He lost about 20 hours of his lead over the old record by himself and Harold Gatty in 1931, when he became lost over the interior of Alaska yesterday and then nosed his plane over in the emergency landing at Flat.

He still was 11 hours, seven minutes to the good over the Post-Gatty schedule when he set down on the field here, "however, and considered his chances for a new record good.

The Post-Gatty elapsed time to Fairbanks was 166 hours, 39 minutes. Post used up 155 hours, 32 minutes in getting here. The Post-Gatty record he is trying to eclipse was eight days, 15 hours and 51 minutes, and his flight representative in New York said he has until 3 p.m. Sunday night to break the old record.

Disaster hovered near when Post's plane bounced on the small flying field at Flat yesterday and nosed over, bending the propeller and damaging the landing gear. Mechanics on a gold dredge at Flat soon went to work on the landing gear and a new propeller was dispatched from Fairbanks with Pilot Joe Crosson.

Unfavorable weather which baffled Post as he flew in the clouds over the network of rivers in the Yukon valley yesterday, also delayed his start from Flat this morning.

Both Post and his plane were ready to resume their task several hours before the weather permitted them to get off. When the Winnie Mae did get into the air again, Post chose to follow Crosson and his plane into Fairbanks, explaining that he had become so confused in getting off his course yesterday that he preferred the slower but safer method of following Crosson.

Post and Gatty flew from Fairbanks to Edmonton in 10 hours, 14 minutes, after a six-hour stop in Fairbanks. Post expects to negotiate the flight in nine hours. Post and Gatty were halted at Edmonton slightly more than eight hours, while Post hopes to be there only 30 minutes.

Heavy Sales Volume Owing to the concluding recovery, the Associated Press standard statistics average for 90 selected stocks managed to hold its loss to 7.4 points at 76.5. This compared with a net decline yesterday of 8.2. The sales volume was the heaviest since October, 1929, with 9,992,570 shares changing hands.

While numerous obviously baseless rumors circulated throughout Wall Street, there was no actual news to account for the slump. As a matter of fact, the course of business and industry was still on the upgrade. The week-end trade review of Dun & Bradstreet reported additional evidences of broadening economic revival. The weekly loadings report tomorrow, it was estimated, would disclose that the movement of freight had reached another peak for the past year or more.

U. S. Dollar Erratic The American dollar moved somewhat erratically in foreign exchange markets, dropping sharply in terms of sterling at one time, then recovering all of its losses and adding gains of a few cents. The trend of European gold currencies was lower. Cotton dropped more than $5 a bale in early transactions and finished with net declines of $1.10 to $2.50 a bale. Bar silver again turned downward, losing 1 1/4 cents at 37 1/2 cents an ounce. The market at Chicago was closed in order to permit commission houses to catch up with their work, but Winnipeg wheat sagged about a cent a bushel. Future contracts of rubber, coffee, sugar, silver and hides were heavy.

Important financial quarters expressed the opinion that the "house cleaning" of the past three days in the security markets could be looked upon as a healthy "correction" of the unwieldy and top-heavy situation if public sentiment toward business and industrial recovery was not cooled too severely by the adjustment of quoted values.

Angels—Catcher, E. Ward; pitcher, H. Fisher; 1st base, H. Ebers; 2nd base, E. Ward; 3rd base, H. Lewis; short stop, E. Stentford; left field, J. Hunter; centre field, Bill Burnett; right field, G. Young. NOTES

Eb McNeil played a wonderful game at second for Maple Leafs. Hunter played a wonderful game at left field for Angels and showed that he could take it.

About 2.30 o'clock, with the tape running half an hour late, the market found relief and staggered upward. United States Steel common, which had collapsed to $49, off $8.50, snapped back to a closing price of $62.50, still a net loss of $5. American Telephone, pummeled down to $114 where it was $9.75 lower, rallied to a final quotation of $120; General Motors rose from $22.50 to $24.62, or $4.37 net lower. Corresponding recoveries helped other leaders.

By John L. Cooley, Associated Press Financial Writer. NEW YORK, July 21. (A.P.)—Stock prices crashed today in the wildest and most active market since the 1929 collapse.

Shares of all descriptions, high grade and low grade, were thrown into the maelstrom of sinking values without benefit of bids or support from short covering. It was the sort of rout that, at one time, seemed impossible to stop. But last minute reinforcements of "bargain hunters" arrived, however, and losses of three to 17 or more points were pared or substantially reduced.

While the close was weak, the late rally encouraged market observers to hope that the third day of drastic reaction might mark the beginning of the end and that trading would settle down to a quieter and more dignified pace with much of the mad speculation of recent weeks eliminated.

DEATH OF 20 YEAR OLD BRIDE MYSTERY

Bridegroom Returns Home From All-night Job to Find Wife Dead.

(Canadian Press) MONTREAL, July 21. — Mystery surrounding the death of Marie Ange Pelletier, 20-year-old bride of Isidore Guerin, remained unsolved tonight as detectives prepared evidence for the opening of the coroner's inquest tomorrow.

Returning from his all-night job as a car washer, the 24-year-old bridegroom found his wife stretched dead on a bed, suffocated to death with a dirty towel stuffed in her mouth.

Police questioned the young husband all day and released him tonight to turn their attention to Fernand Guerin, 31-year-old brother-in-law of the victim. He was taken to headquarters for prolonged questioning.

No Signs of Violence The victim was fully-dressed when her husband found her dead as he returned home from work shortly after dawn. There were no signs of violence on the body except for two bruises of a light nature on one of her arms.

Neighbours said they heard a taxi stop in the street outside the tenement where the Guerin couple lived, about 2 p. m., a little over four hours before the husband came home.

Detectives tried to trace the taxi through local cab companies, but tonight had found no clue. It was expected that the inquest tomorrow would be of a formal nature and that it would be adjourned till a later date after the formalities of identifying the body had been completed.

to receive the formal acclaim of what Mayor John P. O'Brien described as the "largest Italian city in the world."

At a brief ceremony in the aldermanic chambers the Mayor pinned on the breast of the youthful Air Minister the city's gold and platinum medal of valor. He presented other medals to the full company of aviators.

"I would like you to understand," said Balbo in a brief speech of appreciation, "that my mission would not be complete if I did not explain that it was the organizing genius of Benito Mussolini which made the flight possible.

"He told us to come to America and here we are." "Then he ended suddenly: "Viva America!" "Viva Italia!"

Chief Inspector John O'Brien estimated that more than 2,000 persons witnessed the procession between the battery and a mid-town hotel to which the Italians were escorted for luncheon.

tion of getting back some of the territory yielded in the previous session. Many of the leaders recorded early gains of one to three or more points and some of the volatile alcohols got back as much as eight.

Trading slowed down to a jog around noon, another selling rush, however, started around one o'clock and from then on until just before the finish values crumbled.

Floor traders were literally swamped with orders during the afternoon and the ticker tape ran for almost 45 minutes after the close of the session.

Currency and Trade

These Empire talks are proceeding along the double lines of currency and trade. The move for creation of a sterling bloc of which the Empire sterling countries will be the centre, as opposed to the gold standard bloc, seems to be gaining strength though the British Treasury still declines to reveal its hand.

The proposal is to divorce sterling from the gold bloc influence and let it follow its own course, independent both of the United States dollar and the gold franc.

Major Walter Elliott, British Minister of Agriculture, is one of the moving spirits in the Empire trade schemes. Elliott by a system of tariffs and quotas, is endeavoring to reestablish British agriculture. He wants the Dominions to relax some of their pressure on the British farmer. He is seeking curtailment of dairy products from the Antipodes. He would like to see such a cut in imports of Canadian oats, particularly, as he thinks would give the British farmer a better chance.

Would Give and Take As some of the trade proposals mean in effect modification of the Ottawa agreements, and involve give and take alike, the negotiations of the "Little Imperial Conference" will in all probability stretch beyond the first session of the World Conference. Both Prime Minister R. B. Bennett and Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Canadian Finance Minister, are taking an active part.

The closing scene in the economic commission of the World Conference today saw the proposed new tariff truce from the United States, a protest from Stanley Bruce that Australia could not accept limitations of wheat production under the present situation, an objection from Mr. Rhodes to the report on copper and objections innumerable to phraseology of the reports.

Even Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade who prepared the main report, moved to delete some of its rhetoric. "We should be more careful in our use of epithets," gravely commented Prof. Asquith of the Italian delegation, at which the relieved delegates laughed.

The new tariff truce proposed by the United States contemplates action both against the erection of new barriers to trade and progressive reduction of existing barriers. It contains reservations which would allow the United States to take any protective action necessitated either by increased costs of production incidental to higher wages and reduced hours provided in the new American industrial codes, or by the imposition of internal excise taxes under farm relief schemes.

Maintains Objections Stanley Bruce, the resident Australian Minister in London, was frank that Australia, one of the "big four" wheat exporters, had withdrawn none of her old objections to limiting wheat production. "In the view of Australia," he recently declared, "if this conference does nothing but make efforts to limit production then indeed we shall have to admit the conference has failed in its great task.

"We of the Australian delegates are not desirous of being associated with any action of that character," he declared. Australia however was prepared to consider a special case where it was shown to be part of a coordinated plan in which the wheat importing nations cooperated.

But limitation of production alone, he argued, would lead to no useful end. For a government to take the initiative in such a field

Where he procured the saw used in the first attempt remained a mystery, but police said tonight Skillog had admitted his part in supplying Smith with the saw used this week. According to the officers, he said he found it in the jail yard and then passed it to Henwood who turned it over to Henwood.

Served Sentences Both men were serving short terms and were released from jail before Henwood was caught. Skillog was arrested at his home in Springhill and Tower in Amherst. Skillog was remanded today until Tuesday for preliminary hearing. Tower will be arraigned tomorrow. Meanwhile, jail workmen have riveted a sheet of steel across the door of Henwood's cell as a precaution against further escape attempts and his privileges have been cut down to a minimum. He has been in solitary confinement since his trial.

Henwood faces execution on September 12 with a companion of the same age, Truman Smith, also of Amherst. The boys were convicted of murder in June, after they had confessed to killing Mrs. Smith and robbing her home of $130. In Smith's case the jury recommended mercy.

would only be to follow Fascist and Communist or Socialist methods, and all alike were repugnant to Australia.

The conference of the special drafting committee of wheat exporters and importers, incidentally, was forced to adjourn today until next Tuesday when the importers, whose original offer was not enough to induce the exporters to agree to limitation of production and quotas for their exports, demanded time in which to consult their governments further.

Objects to Copper Report The Canadian Finance Minister's objections to the copper report were rather a matter of form. He thought the resolution submitted in the main commission report went beyond the decisions of the copper subcommittee. Furthermore the Canadian delegation believed that coordination of the production and marketing of copper could be handled more effectively by the industry itself than by governments.

The commission appointed a small drafting committee to make verbal changes in the report necessitated by the closing discussion.

The tentative resolution in which the American tariff truce proposal was contained was submitted by Cordell Hull for study before the conference assemblies again, if it does re-assemble, in the Autumn. It provided the ground for continuation of President Roosevelt's tariff armistice and made it clear the American programme intends to maintain the principal of equal treatment for all nations which treat the United States in like manner.

Several delegates however were more interested in the break in American wheat markets and suspension of trading on wheat exchanges. It was wondered whether this would expedite definite dollar devaluation and stabilization, permitting the conference to resume in the autumn.

ROMANCES OF CANADIAN HISTORY

The Romances of Canadian History was the subject of the illustrated lecture given last evening by Col. Bovey in the Prince of Wales College Hall. In opening he stressed the necessity of looking to the past for an understanding of the present. The scenes were taken in order from East to West. Reference was made to the migration of the United Empire Loyalists, to the prosecution of Joseph Howe for criminal libel, previous to the time when he became a great statesman, and to the early and romantic history of Fort Royal, later Annapolis Royal. New Brunswick scenes were bound up with the stories of the Loyalists and with the early industries of the Province.

Charlottetown was notable for the position it occupied in the Confederation discussions. The Province of Quebec was remembered for the incidents of early French history. Quebec was the most romantic city of Canada. A number of interesting stories of Canadian history were told in connection with this City.

The Eastern Townships, St. Hubert and Montreal were dealt with in an interesting manner. Scenes in the early history of Ontario were depicted. Reference was made to the Rebellion of 1837 in connection with Toronto and Orillia.

Stories of the Riel Rebellion, of the buffalo and of the early harvesting methods were told in connection with the history of the Prairie Provinces. The early history of the Hudson Bay Company was outlined in an interesting manner.

The building of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the opening of the new country formed the basis of the romance of British Columbia. The story of Sarah Bailey was told in connection with the slides of the Fraser River Valley. The early development of Vancouver and Victoria, and the various activities during the gold rushes were outlined in conclusion.
