U. S. AND THE WAR

A correspondent over the signature "An American" wrote in our yesterday's issue defending the United States from censure and abuse "because she has consistently refused to interfere in the complications caused by the present war, or to protest against the actions of either party although she has been requested by each to denounce the conduct of the other."

No rational British subject would seek to adversely criticize the attitude of the United States in the present war. At the outset President Wilson declared the strictest neutrality and has endeavored to observe it, sometimes in the face of the greatest opposition from pro-British and pro-German partisans or business interests. Mr. Wilson is an idealist in diplomacy as well as in politics and endeavours to maintain the national honour in the strictest sense of the word. The British are not likely to forget the honourable service he rendered in insisting upon the conscientious fulfilment of the Hay-Pauncefote agreement re Panama Tolls, nor are we likely to undervalue his resolve to maintain an attitude of "friendly" neutrality at the present time.

Apart altogether from the official attitude of the United States, the people, as a whole, are entirely with us. The great question for our friends to the South in the first days of the war was broadly and seriously this: "Did America desire that the will and spirit of Great Britain should prevail over the will and spirit of Prussia in Europe and upon the sea?" This great question, at once perceived as a deeply moral question, was answered after a short delay in an almost unanimous resolution of friendly neutrality. Into this resolution, declared and echoed in speeches and journals over the entire width of the country, there entered hardly a trace of material calculation. It was not a decision of dollars and cents. There was not really time for calculating the ledger chances, or for looking into all the possibilities of the war. Scarcely was war declared when the American public as represented by their press and public men declared for the Allies, if not unanimously, at least by a preponderating majority.

This attitude possibly made President Wilson's position all the more difficult as a neutral. He reads the laws of neutrality as scrupulously as he read the obligations of the United States in respect of the Panama Canal. He even declared that it would be a violation of the neutrality of his country for American bankers to lend money to anyone of the belligerent powers. This, of course, was stretching neutrality beyond the limits, and finding his position untenable he has had to consent to the Morgan combination of financiers advancing a 4 1/2 per cent. loan to Russia.

Our correspondent need not be afraid that any reasonable British subject will misunderstand the position of the United States Government. As the war progresses, questions will arise, particularly of a commercial and maritime description, that will require careful handling, but so long as Sir Edward Grey is at the helm in the British Foreign Office, there is not likely to be any prolonged serious misunderstanding between the two countries.

PATRIOTISM AND PRODUCTION

The Dominion Department of Agriculture, in conjunction with all the provincial departments, has completed arrangements for agricultural conferences to be held throughout Canada during the present winter.

The purpose of these conferences is to explain and discuss conditions in countries where live stock and agricultural production will be affected by the war. In order that as much practical information as possible will be available specialists are now at work making a study of conditions throughout the world with a view to ascertaining the requirements of the markets in the near future and placing this information before the farmers in order that they may specialize on those products which are likely to be most profitable. The move is a timely one. We are on the eve of great and far reaching changes, in which the farmers throughout the world and particularly in Canada are more interested than any other class. Any desired information may be obtained from and suggestions submitted to the Provincial Department of Agriculture or the Dominion Department at Ottawa.

Under the caption "Patriotism and Production," the Duty and the Opportunity of Canadian Farmers," the Department of Agriculture has issued circulars calling attention to these conferences and this will be the slogan of the meetings wherever held. It will also, we trust, be the slogan of the farmers throughout Canada and throughout this province particularly.

Patriotism and Production! Production and Patriotism! Each is a motive worthy of the highest possible effort and perhaps the order in which they are given, matters little. The best patriots are they who do their duty best and the highest duty is to do the best possible with the means at hand. He is a patriot who, occupying a portion of land, makes that land produce to the utmost of his and its ability. Usually the farmer who produces the largest crops is counted among the successful ones. It is not the measure of success. The man who can get the most out of each acre of his land is the successful one. Eighty bushels of oats raised on one acre of land is a much more commendable achievement than a hundred bushels off two acres, although the latter is the larger crop and the more valuable. In our eagerness to produce large crops and secure large returns we have acquired the habit of spreading our operations over large tracts of land. As a result thousands of acres in this fertile province of ours are owned and worked at a loss. Patriotic production, when we achieve it, will condemn this practice and the man who produces on a two hundred acre farm only as much as some one else has produced on fifty, will be counted a failure, and rightly so.

If the movement now underway will result in directing attention to the waste of land now so much in evidence it will prove a much needed blessing.

That the few years in the immediate future will open larger markets than we have ever known is certain. It is somewhat surprising to learn that, even under stress of war conditions, a country like Denmark should yield to the temptation of war prices and sell off almost its whole stock of hogs, thus glutting the markets and lowering the price of pork here as well as in Europe. Next year Denmark's crop of pork will, as a result, be so reduced that both the demand and the price will be higher than ever.

Many of the European countries which, heretofore, have supplied the British market, will have little or greatly reduced stocks of farm products to dispose of next year. This will be the Canadian farmer's opportunity and the purpose of the conferences about to be held is to explain these matters to our farmers and to discuss with them the best means of meeting the new conditions. Preparation for these conditions under the circumstances is not mercenary. The world needs food, and the farmer's duty to the world and to himself is to produce it and the more abundantly he produces it the better will he perform his duty.

UNNECESSARY ANXIETY

According to the report of the Prince County Temperance Alliance in yesterday's Patriot, which we have reason to believe was supplied by the Field Secretary of the Alliance, and therefore more or less official, the following paragraphs appear:

"One of the speakers stated that a certain man was offered the Prosecutorship of Prince County if he left certain violators alone.

"Another speaker corroborated the same statement. He declared that he had heard the man who was offered the position make the statement."

It is significant that these are the only two utterances reported by the Field Secretary, which he does not father upon anybody in particular.

We think it only fair to the several clergymen present that the Field Secretary should give the names of the speakers in question. The allegation is so preposterous that it is not surprising the Field Secretary should ascribe it to Mr. Anonymous and probably Mr. Ananias. All the same it is very hard on the other gentlemen present that they should be laid under the suspicion of having given credence and expression to what on the face of it is nothing less than a brazen "terminological inexactitude"—to put it mildly.

Too much importance need not be attached to the present campaign of the Field Secretary. A Commission of Enquiry into the allegations of the Field Secretary and one or two officials of the Temperance Alliance was recently held, and judgment has not yet been pronounced. Had the Field Secretary confidence in himself, he would naturally have refrained from discussing the issue until judgment had been pronounced. That would have been the attitude of any straight-forward British subject, and would have been consistent with British ideas of the fitness of things. By persisting in his policy of misrepresentation and abuse of the Government, the Field Secretary may attempt to lay the flatteringunction to his soul that he is deceiving the public and obtaining sympathy and support. The end does not justify the means. The Field Secretary will discover, as others have before him that he may delude part of the people all the time, and all of the people part of the time, but he cannot delude all the people all the time.

That The Patriot is a broken reed to rely upon as an exponent of Prohibition principles, the Field Secretary has put himself on record as believing. Why, then, this unholy alliance? Can it be because the Government is so energetic and effective in its administration of the Prohibition Act that there will soon be none of the "leprous spots" (which pseudo "Alberton" said the Liberal Government tolerated) left for the Field Secretary to devote his attention to? He should not allow this to worry him, for there is a great field for temperance education in the province to which he may profitably devote his attention when the "leprous spots" have been relegated to oblivion by the Government's progressive prohibition policy.

BRITAINS EYE AND ARM

Some of our older readers will remember the speech delivered by the late Senator Frye in connection with the Armenian outrages several years ago when he paid an eloquent tribute to Britain's greatness. We reproduce part of the speech which, is especially applicable in the present time of stress when from every part of the Empire men are offering their lives in its defence. The Senator said in part:

"I do not love Great Britain particularly, and could not give my assent to the marvellous eulogium upon Great Britain delivered here the day before yesterday. I admit the greatness of Great Britain; I admit she is the greatest power on earth, and the most magnificent power ever seen in the history of the world on the ocean, but I do not admit that she is the friend of the United States. But, Mr. President, I think that one of the grandest things in all the history of Great Britain is that she does protect her subjects everywhere, anywhere and under all circumstances. I do not wonder that the British subject loves his country. "This little incident with which you are all familiar is a marvellous illustration of the protection which Great Britain gives to her subjects:

"The King of Abyssinia took a British subject named Campbell about twenty years ago, carried him up to the fortress of Magdala on the heights of a rocky mountain, and put him into a dungeon without cause assigned. It took Great Britain six months to find that out. Then Great Britain demanded his immediate release. King Theobold refused to release. In less than ten days after that refusal was received, 10,000 British soldiers, including 5,000 Sepoys, were on board ships of war and were sailing down the coast.

"When they reached the coast they disembarked, marched across that terrible country a distance of 700 miles under a burning sun, up the mountain, up to the very heights in front of the frowning dungeon; then gave battle battered down the iron gates and the stone wall, reached over into the dungeon and lifted out of it that one British subject, King Theobold killing himself with his own pistol. Then they carried him down the mountain, across the land, put him on board the whitewinged ship, and sped him to his home in safety. That cost Great Britain $25,000,000, and made General Napier Lord Napier of Magdala.

"That was a great thing for a great country to do—a country that has an eye that can see all across the ocean, all across the land, away up to the mountain height, and away down to the darksome dungeon, one subject of hers out of her 38,000,000 people, and then had an arm strong enough to stretch across the same ocean, across the same land, up the same mountain height, down the same dungeon, and then let him out and carry him home to his own country and friends. In God's name who would die for a country that will do that?"

TALES TOLD BY MEN IN THE FIGHTING LINES

Sergeant E. G. Weeks, of the first Canadian contingent, writing to his father, Major Weeks, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., says:

"Some rather interesting stories are told by Canadians who have actually been at the front. One cheap British Canadian I believe, while on a pass to London, or thereabouts, conceived the idea of crossing the channel. Acting upon the inspiration he succeeded in landing in France. After many adventures he succeeded in reaching the firing line, where he was afterwards wounded and taken to the rear. Here his identity was discovered and he was returned to Salisbury Plain. "And still another Canadian, tired of the monotonous routine of the plain, on getting a pass made the attempt to cross the channel. While in a column of troops, moving up to the front he was suspected. When asked his presence there, he replied that he belonged to the 1st Canadian Expeditionary Force, and that he was the first one of the said body to be at the front. He was taken in charge and in time landed in Salisbury Plain. You may see by the above that the Canadians are taking advantage of every opportunity of seeing active service."

"You could almost have sworn that it was Harry Lauder, so greatly did the prisoner resemble the comedian. "He has been fifteen years around the docks of what he called the finest city in the war-ridden-Glasgow."

ing the British and the Germans were so close that, according to one of the Lancashire "lommies," a German got up in the night and sang "Annie Laurie."

"When he had finished he called out with a Scottish accent, "Did you like my singing?" and when he said "Yes," he shouted that if we had got any bayonet we were safe if we brought it that way."

"One of our men went over with some cigarettes, and returned safely. "Then in the early morning we captured the trenches at the point of the bayonet."

"Among the prisoners was a German who started us by singing: "It's far too early in the morning to wash my face."

"I had often read in the newspapers that our enemies were using explosive bullets against us, and had not believed it, even when the men out here told me so themselves. But the other day a pal of mine "stopped one." He was in the same trench as I and fell less than a yard away from me, and I lost another illusion in less time than it takes to write this. "Experience teaches. Such an incident as this makes one feel that one would use any sort of missile against such foes."

THE LISTENING PATROL

A private of the Rifle Brigade writes: "The other night my section was out "listening;" this is one of the many amusing jobs connected with the life out here and consists in leaving one's own trench and crawling up to the German trench under cover of the dark in order to find out what the enemy is doing. Unfortunately the night we were out the Germans spotted us and peppered us as we retired. We got back without receiving any hurt.

These listening expeditions do not always finish thus, however. A few nights ago one of our sergeants crawled right up to the enemy's trench, put a shot through one of his loop-holes, and returned safe and sound.

I had often read in the newspapers that our enemies were using explosive bullets against us, and had not believed it, even when the men out here told me so themselves. But the other day a pal of mine "stopped one." He was in the same trench as I and fell less than a yard away from me, and I lost another illusion in less time than it takes to write this. "Experience teaches. Such an incident as this makes one feel that one would use any sort of missile against such foes."

TOMMY'S CHRISTMAS

An English officer writes:—"Tommy Atkins made the best of Christmas, wherever possible. Concerts were held, and it is marvellous what Tommy can do in the way of making music out of such commodities as hand saws, spoons, and mouth-organs; some of them are more than clever I have been up to several places now, well known to everyone through the newspapers, and I have also seen the great devastation caused through this war. God forbid that ever any such should happen to dear old England; people at home cannot realize what war is."

It was a lovely day yesterday; very cold and a hard frost, but today it is back to the usual rain. I certainly felt very sore on Christmas Day, and I am glad I was away. It is quite a change to have coffee and sardines and chocolate for dinner, which is what I had.

BROTHERS IN REAL ESTATE FIRM HAVE BEEN ARRESTED

TORONTO, Jan. 15.—Gordon D. McCutcheon, Lordsdale Road, president of McCutcheon Bros. Limited, one of the largest real estate firms operating in this Dominion, and with head offices in this city, was tonight, on instructions from Hon. I. B. Lucas, arrested on a charge of conspiring to defraud the public.

The arrest at Calgary of his three brothers, John, David and Charles, and small Cooke was also requested and tonight the police were notified that they were in custody. McCutcheon was tonight liberated on $10,000 bail, furnished by his wife. The apocryphal counts on which George McCutcheon was arrested was laid by D. Weaver of England.

OFFICES RAIDED

The Toronto offices of the firm were raided tonight and practically all the books of the company impounded by the police.

The transactions which are the basis of the proceedings against the McCutcheon brothers are said to be widespread, as the firm had a number of branch offices in Western Canada and have at times operated across the boundary in the United States.

McCutcheon Bros. exploited many subdivisions in Western Canada. Their investors were numbered in the hundreds if not thousands, and were drawn from all ranks throughout the Dominion during the closing years of the big real estate boom.

Farmers in Ontario are understood to have been one of their best classes of clients.

For weeks past the Attorney-General's Department has been receiving letters from people in various parts of the province, a large percentage of them coming from the small towns and rural districts, all complaining that they had been induced to purchase real estate under misrepresentation. From other sources the Department secured in Windsor, Ontario, evidence to convince them that McCutcheon Brothers, Limited, were behind two scores or more syndicates in western land that had been the means of unloading large areas of comparatively valueless property upon purchasers. Many of the complaints that have been received regarding the company's dealings came not only from points outside of the Province, but from points outside the Dominion. Mr. Bayly, solicitor for the Department said that the alleged frauds charged to the McCutcheon brothers will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Was Personally Attended by Dr. A. W. Chase

Before He Became Famous as the Author of Dr. Chase's Receipt Book.

Here is a letter from an aged gentleman who consulted Dr. Chase, long before his Receipt Book attained a world-wide circulation...

"Some time ago a cold settled in the kidneys, causing backache, frequent urination, dizziness, and affected the eyesight. My appetite failed and I could not sleep nights. Two doctors failed to do me any lasting good, so I started using Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. The result has been highly satisfactory to me. Appetite improved, I gained in weight, sleep and rest well, and feel strong and well. My kidneys resumed their natural functions, and I believe that my cure was due to Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. I am 78 years old, superintending work on my farm, and can turn in and do some work myself."
