ANECDOTES OF AUTHORS.

Some of the Best of Them Gathered by the Discriminating Compiler of Lloyd's Weekly.

The late Baron Tauchnitz, the German publisher, used to print the novels of famous English authors, and they had a great circulation on the Continent. For permission to do so he usually made some pecuniary acknowledgment.

"Don't be afraid of your English," Thackeray wrote to him once, in answer to the apologetic postscript of one of the baron's letters. "A letter containing £ s. d. is always in pretty style!"

Striking Incident.

Ralph Waldo Emerson, having risen one night, unintentionally aroused his wife, who inquired, "Are you ill, Waldo?"

"Oh, no, my dear," was his reply, "but I've got an idea. What's the matter with these matches? I can't make them ignite. Let it go now," sighed the philosopher, "my idea is gone."

The next morning, upon arising, Mrs. Emerson found all the teeth in her comb broken out!

Hard to Please.

Justin McCarthy paid a visit to a second-hand store at Cork some time ago. After offering him several works of fiction, the bookseller finally produced a copy of one of Mr. McCarthy's own books, but still the customer was not satisfied. At last the dealer, in desperation, exclaimed:

"Well, sir, if I was a man so hard to please as you, I'd take to writing books myself!"

Lines That Pay.

Alexandre Dumas, the great French author, was much addicted to boasting of the high price which he received for his work.

"That is pretty good, no doubt," once said a stranger to him at a party. "How much was the highest fee you ever got?"

"Ten francs a line," replied Dumas.

"That is nothing," exclaimed the other gentleman. "I get about half a million francs a line!"

"Really?" rejoined Dumas, with an incredulous smile at the apparently outrageous piece of brag. "Pray, what are you?"

"A railway contractor," was the reply.

Unexpected Success.

One day Charles Darwin went to Mr. John Murray, the famous publisher, taking with him a manuscript. As he laid it on the table he said:

"Mr. Murray, here is a book which has cost me many years of hard labor. The preparation of it has afforded me the greatest interest, but I can hardly hope that it will prove of any interest to the general public. Will you bring it out for me, as you have done my other books?"

"The book was his famous one on 'Earthworms,' which in the course of three months reached a fifth edition (1881).

The Fallen Great.

Mrs. Yorke, wife of the late Dean of Worcester, happened to be sitting one evening between Thackeray and Jacob Omnium, whose build was even more gigantic than Thackeray's own.

Conversation was languishing, when Thackeray turned to her and said, "Mrs. Yorke, why are you so silent?"

"I am overwhelmed by the greatness of you two," she replied, glancing right and left at their massive frames.

Thereupon, moved by a common impulse, Thackeray and "Jacob" slid from their chairs and sat on the ground at her feet, "as a slight token of homage to one whose wit equalled her beauty."

What is Humor?

James Russell Lowell determined to play a joke upon a popular monthly which he contributed. He accordingly wrote a clever article, which he called "The Essence of American Humor," and read it to a number of his friends, who said it was some of the best work he had ever done.

He employed someone to copy it, signed it "W. Perry Faine," and sent it to The Atlantic, with the request that, as it was a maiden effort, the editor would give an opinion in writing to said Faine.

He waited a fortnight, but heard nothing of his paper, when, being in Boston, he dropped into the office of The Atlantic, and meeting Mr. James T. Fields, who had turned the conversation upon humor, and remarked that it was singular so little was written on the subject.

"We get a great deal of manuscript on humor," replied Mr. Fields, "but it is so poor we cannot use it. I threw into the waste-basket the other day a long article entitled 'The Essence of American Humor,' which should have been styled 'Essence of Nonsense,' for a more absurd farrago of stuff I have never seen."

Mr. Lowell, much to the surprise of the editor, burst into a roar of laughter, and informed Mr. Fields of the authorship of the article. The editor turned all colors, and declared it was one of Mr. Lowell's jokes.

"Indeed it is," responded Mr. Lowell, "and the best one I ever played! I never thought highly of my scribbling; but I didn't believe it was the most ridiculous farrago you had ever seen!"

ELEVEN YEARS OF constant use in Blythe, Ont., is Dr. E. J. Milne's experience with "The D & L" Emulsion. Do you suppose he would have continued ordering it unless it was the best?

JAPANESE GUN-SHIELDS IN PLACE OF EARTHWORKS.

This illustration is the best photograph that has so far gotten through the Japanese lines uncensored. It shows graphically the marvelous inventive ingenuity of the Japanese. These shields, which are made of timbers two feet thick and twenty-five feet in height, were erected by the Jap engineering corps by previous direction, and when the time came for the artillery to take their assigned positions and they had been located by the Russian batteries, the gunners were thoroughly protected from any scattering fire or stray pieces of shells.

THINK IT OVER.

Something You Can See in Any Restaurant or Cafe.

A physician put the query: Have you never noticed in any large restaurant at lunch or dinner time the large number of hearty, vigorous old men at the tables; men whose ages run from 60 to 80 years; many of them bald and all perhaps gray, but none of them feeble or senile?

Perhaps the spectacle is so common as to have escaped your observation or comment, but nevertheless it is an object lesson which means something.

If you will notice what these hearty old fellows are eating you will observe that they are not munching bran crackers nor gingerly picking their way through a menu card of new fangled health foods; on the contrary they seem to prefer a juicy roast of beef, a properly turned loin of mutton, and even the delectably broiled lobster is not altogether ignored.

The point of all this is that a vigorous old age depends upon good digestion and plenty of wholesome food, and not upon lying and an endeavor to live upon bran crackers.

There is a certain class of food cranks who seem to believe that meat, coffee, and many other good things are rank poisons, but these cadaverous, sickly-looking individuals are a walking condemnation of their own theories.

The matter in a nutshell is that if the stomach secretes the natural digestive juices in sufficient quantities any wholesome food will be promptly digested; if the stomach does not do so, and certain foods cause distress, one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal will remove all difficulty, because they supply just what every weak stomach lacks, pepsin, hydrochloric acid, diastase and nut.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do not act upon the bowels, and in fact are not strictly a medicine, as they act almost entirely upon the food eaten, digesting it thoroughly, and thus gives a much-needed rest and giving an appetite for the next meal.

Of people who travel nine out of ten use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, knowing them to be perfectly safe to use at any time and also having found out by experience that they are a safeguard against indigestion in any form, and eating, as they have to, at all hours and all kinds of food, the traveling public for years have pinned their faith to Stuart's Tablets.

All druggists sell them at 50 cents for full-sized packages, and any druggist from Maine to California, if his opinion were asked, will say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the most popular and successful remedy for any stomach trouble.

school and graduated from the Prince of Wales College. He taught school for several years, was for a time Principal of Kensington School and later Principal of Summerside High School. From here he moved to St. Eleanor's and was for a few years Principal of the School at that place when he was appointed Inspector of Schools for Prince County and returned to Summerside to reside. He was also for some years President of the Western Teachers' Association. In all these positions he discharged his duties most creditably, and his death while in the prime of life will leave a regrettable vacancy among prominent educationalists. A widow, two daughters, and two sons are left to mourn. The remains will be taken to his former home at New Perth and thence to the cemetery at Georgetown. The date of the funeral will not be announced until the present railway blockade is over. The pallbearers will be Hon. George Godkin, W. K. McGowan, Creel McArthur, B. D. McLellan and L. S. Stillphant.

Pure Wool Versus Shoddy

Everybody sees the folly of buying clothes made from SHODDY CLOTH but the large majority of consumers not being experts do not know until after they have worn them "what was in them" and then it is too late.

People buy shoddy cloth and clothing chiefly because the merchant forces the sale of such stuff, there being more profit in it

FOR HIM

And the purchaser thinks they are cheaper not being able to discriminate between shoddy and pure wool.
