KAISER'S TRIAL MAY NOT BE IN LONDON

Objections Raised in House of Lords Regarding Trial of ex-Kaiser in London. The Kaiser in Exile not Comparable with Charles I or Napoleon.

(Special to the Guardian.)
LONDON, July 25.—It is possible that former Emperor William may not be tried in London, according to an announcement made in the House of Lords today by Earl Curzon of Kedleston, Government leader in the Upper House. The Lords passed the peace treaty and the Anglo-French treaty through all stages.
In the course of the discussion, Viscount Bryce deprecated holding the trial of the former German Emperor at London. Baron Buckmaster said there were grave reasons why the government ought not to pursue any further the project of trying the Kaiser in London. It was certainly unfeeling, he declared, to ask an English judge to sit on such a tribunal to administer a law he does not know by

The remedy, he added, was a law regulating workers' councils and economist councils, which the government would draft.

80,000 Gallons Gasoline Explode

BAYONNE, July 25.—Eighty thousand gallons of gasoline, contained in eight tank cars exploded on the switching track of the Texas Oil Company here this morning, causing a fire which resulted in the serious injury of four persons with many others suffering minor burns. The property loss of the company was heavy. The cause of the first explosion has not been determined. The first car exploded about 7 o'clock and the flames enveloped the other cars before they could be removed from the danger zone. Explosions followed in rapid succession, rocking buildings two miles away.
The flames spread to two store houses containing about fifteen thousand gallons of oil in cans as well as the filling room, where the tanks are filled and for a time it appeared that the entire plant of the oil company was doomed.
Officials of the Texas Company said they could not find a loss definitely, but they probably would reach $1,000,000.

MURDER OF WEALTHY CLEVELAND MAN.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 23.—After a day of theorizing, without any tangible clue to aid, half a dozen experienced investigators agreed last night that two persons familiar with the house participated in the murder of Daniel Kober, a wealthy Cleveland publisher. No arrests have been made.
Mr. Kober, paralyzed with neuritis, was dragged from his bed on Friday at midnight and stabbed twenty-four times with a dagger made from a file and choked. He died Saturday in a hospital.
Before he could cry for help his assailants escaped. When the alarm was given a blood stained glove was found near the man's body. The companion glove, new and slightly soiled, was picked up on a stairway. The theory is that while one person grasped the invalid's throat, another stabbed him. Imprints of naked fingers were still quite distinct on the throat when an autopsy was made.

British Public Getting To Know Marshal Haig

LONDON, July 24.—During the last four years Sir Douglas Haig has been little more than a name to the British public, writes a correspondent in "The Manchester Guardian." Those who were associated with his staff were often surprised at the secrecy of his comings and goings, no one in England seeming ever to be aware that he had crossed the Channel. But he has come wonderfully out of his shell in the last few weeks, and has put aside something of the gravity and reserve that characterized his appearance at public worship at general headquarters.
He was a most conscientious church-goer, and unless he were "up the line" there was not a single Sunday morning which did not see him at his place in the little hut that was a soldiers' canteen all the week and a Presbyterian church on Sunday. Indeed, it was a canteen on Sundays, too, between the morning and evening services. There was never anything in the nature of a church parade. Sir Douglas quietly took his seat, and any Tommy was at liberty, untrammelled by ceremony, to join in a service of homeliness and simplicity.

"All the five lodges," Mr. Somerville stated, "comprising the machinists and helpers, are being re-organized. I further anticipate that all of them will show loyalty equal to that of the international No. 122. Outside of the city, I am in a position to state, all our lodges are remaining loyal to the international, and not five per cent. of the membership is likely to go over to the One Big Union. Claims Witnesses Were Threatened

WINNIPEG, July 25.—At the preliminary trial today of the eight strike leaders, charged with seditious conspiracy, A. J. Andrews, Crown prosecutor, announced that the witnesses had been "accosted on the street and threatened."
"I intend to place this witness in the box and to prove that this threat is a result of the fire started by the defendants," Mr. Andrews said, when T. J. Murray, attorney for the labor men demanded that he prove connection between the accused and the intimidation of the witness.
Mr. Andrews made the announcement in objecting to Mr. Murray demanding the names of employers who had worked during the strike for the Venice Cafe, during the examination of T. Kernaghan, treasurer of the cafe. In announcing it, he said he did not connect any of the accused directly with the "Outrage." It was not until Mr. Murray had objected to his making the statement that it did affect the men on trial, that he declared this intention of proving that they were indirectly responsible for it.
At this point, Magistrate R. M. Noble said:
"I want it understood that there must be no tampering with the witnesses. This is a serious matter, if wrong for the Government to use any language that could be regarded as provocative; on the other hand we have made it absolutely clear that the whole force of the Government will be exerted to protect the people from any undue pressure from any quarter."
