—LITTLE GIRLS GIVE AFTERNOON TEA — Not enough has been said about the part that little children are doing in a thousand little ways to help win the war. They deny themselves candy and pictures to buy war savings stamps; they have knitted hundreds of little garments for the children of England and have helped in all sorts of ways in Canada's war effort. Now they have given a real afternoon tea and a successful one too, which brought the amazing sum of $20.60 for the Red Cross. Seven little girls all only eleven years old decided among themselves that they would put on a tea for the Red Cross. One of the little girls approached her grandmother, for the use of her drawing room, which was readily given, then the girls set to work and printed invitations and sold the tickets until they got over twelve dollars. They now thought they could safely ask their mothers to help with the cooking. Their mothers entered into the spirit of the thing and a delicious pile of sandwiches and cakes were ready on Friday afternoon. The people who had bought tickets told others and the little hostesses were kept very busy receiving and waiting on their guests all the afternoon. This happy event took place at the home of Mrs. H. T. Holman and the little hostesses were Beryl Mellish, Norma Leard, Sally Schurman, Catherine Ramsay, Shella Fullerton, Ellen Morrison, and Barbara Currie. With the exception of pouring tea, the young girls were responsible for entertaining their guests. Dressed in their party frocks they made charming hostesses and what surprised their mothers most of all was that they accomplished so much with such little effort. The Red Cross received their handsome donation on Saturday morning and were very grateful for such a handsome contribution.—S

United Church Moderator Visits Summerside

Rt. Reverend Aubrey S. Tuttle, M.A., D.D., LL.D., Moderator of the United Church of Canada, was the guest speaker in Trinity United Church, Summerside, on Sunday evening and spoke to a large congregation. Rev. K. G. Sullivan, pastor of the church held the devotion period and introduced the speaker. Special music by the choir was a feature at this service. Miss Mary Geldhart was the organist. Mr. Rob Roy MacGregor was the soloist and sang with much feeling "The Old Rugged Cross."

Rt. Rev. Tuttle in his opening remarks brought greetings from the United Church of Canada and referred to his boyhood days on a New Brunswick farm where he dreamed some day of visiting this beautiful Isle which he could see from his New Brunswick home and now his dream had come true and he has had the great honour of not only visiting the Island but addressing its people in their churches.

The speaker from the text "Even as Christ also loved the Church", delivered an eloquent sermon on the importance and responsibility of the church in the life of the community and in leadership in social and political international affairs, and pointing out its many duties.

The home and the Church are the basic institutions of the world. Without them we could not carry on.

The church's task is to keep alive and to strengthen the spiritual background of our realities. To nourish and strengthen that inward source of love and light and power which gives us courage to face the facts of this difficult world.

Although the church is often criticized, said the speaker, it is recognized even by those who find fault, to be of great value in the moral life of the community.

Speaking on the world after the war, the speaker placed emphasis on the part the church will play. It will be the first duty of the church to supply the pattern for this new order which is to come into being and to give moral leadership to the social and political life of the nations so that all nations may be privileged to enjoy the blessings of the earth as it was intended by God they should be enjoyed, quoting the text "Thy Kingdom Come on earth as it is in Heaven" to bring home his point.—S

"Sea Wolfe" Gripping Sea Story at Capitol, S'Side

Warner Bros.' powerful screen version of "The Sea Wolf" opened last night at the Capitol Theatre. Edward G. Robinson, Ida Lupino and John Garfield are starred in this gripping story of a savage sea captain, whose one abition is to rule.

The power and fury of the ranging sea surged from Jack London's pen as he wrote his most famous novel "The Sea Wolf," and the new screen version of the story has translated that power and fury into the most dramatic and thrilling screen entertainment of the vear. Through the genius of Edward G. Robinson's brillian t portrayal, Larsen the Sea Captain comes to the screen a real-life character. Ida Lupino, who is fast proving herself one of the most accomplished dramatic stars in film s today, manages to make the drab little castaway one of the most memorable feminine screen characters of the year.

Fraught with drama suspense and full-blooded action, "The Sea Wolf" is one sea story you'll never forget.

MARITIME

umbia, who accepted thee principle of the minister's suggestion when it was made in the budget address last April 29, decided to postpone negotiations until after the Oct. 21 general election in his province.

Estimates of the revenue the provinces are asked to abandon, from personal and corporation income sources, range from $60,000,000 to $80,000,000.

The proposal is that for the duration of the war, the provinces abandon the personal and corporation income tax fields to the Dominion Government and accept compensation from the federal treasury based on the returns from those sources in the fiscal year ending closest to Dec. 31 1940.

The compensation would be either in payment by the Dominion of an amount equivalent to that which was received in the fiscal year ending nearest Dec. 31, 1940 or by the dominion servicing the provincial net debt for that fiscal year, not including contributions to sinking funds and less the amounts received from succession duties.

Special grants which have been paid to most of the provinces by annual vote of Parliament were discontinued in the budget provisions but provinces accepting the taxation proposal might receive special "fiscal-need subsidies," in addition to other compensation, "where it can be shown that these are necessary."

Premiers MacMillan of Nova Scotia, McNair of New Brunswick and Campbell of Prince Edward Island discussed possible bases for agreements today and will resume discussions tomorrow either with the minister or some of his officials, seeking to work out an agreement for each province separately.

There was no forecast tonight by the conferees as to when final agreements would be signed.

Mr. Ilsley estimated in his April budget that the new personal income taxation schedules applying to this year's incomes would bring in $75,000,000 additional revenue, and the excess profits tax another $80,000,000.

He estimated then that at least $65,000,000 would be needed to compensate the provinces if they all accepted his proposal that they abandon the corporation and income tax field—leaving a net gain of new revenue amounting to $90,000,000 from taxation on personal and corporation incomes.

der to move greater quantities of this article.

It is therefore obvious that it is the citizen's duty to practise the utmost economy in all respects.

Financial Aid

With increased work and production, and the conservation of supplies, the average citizen should automatically become richer. If the citizen wishes to carry on his utmost effort, he can apply this wealth either to loans or war funds for the conduct of the war, or by increasing means within his power to further increased production. To the average citizen, the only outlet for real patriotism is placing this extra wealth to the best use for war effort by the purchase of war loan and investing in war savings.

Teamwork And Preparation For Forms of Defence

One of the outstanding features of the war has been the teamwork of the civilians of Great Britain. All classes have thrown away class distinction and have placed themselves at the dispcsal of authority for their guidance and use in competing with the enemy all forms of passive defence, and to be prepared, if necessary, for forms of more active defence.

In this matter one must consider what can be done first of all in a country before enemy action is directed offensively against it. Here we must consider first preparation of citizens to obey orders regarding blackouts and air raid precautions, etc.

An air raid on an unprepared city must always be much more disastrous than a raid carried out on a city where some preparation has been made beforehand to combat this menace. By night an efficient black-out is essential, and to obtain this black-out regulations must be issued to the ordinary citizen, and he must be drilled in the obedience of these regulations. Citizens must also be made to realise their duty in blacking out their houses and instruction in the means of blackout should be given.

In this respect, specimens can be seen at the Airport of blackout screens which can be constructed out of old cardboard cartons and packing case wood at an average cost of 12 cents per screen for a large window.

A. R. P.

In addition to the blackout and the discipline of citizens in the blackout, it is necessary to have an organised band of citizens who will aid in the administration of this organization. These people should also be trained in first aid work, fire fighting, etc. In this respect again, the more citizens who are given a specific task to do, and know how to do it, the less likely is panic to spread when disaster occurs. The work of the A. R. P. is so complicated that it cannot be adequately covered in a short speech of this description, but I place it for your consideration that such an organisation should be considered for every vulnerable city or area. Citizens should also learn to watch and help. Any suspicious occurrence should invariably be reported, and any unusual thing, such as an aircraft landing in a field, a ship going into a strange piece of shore, etc., should be reported. It is probably of no importance whatever, but on the other hand we do know that our enemy has used all these methods in other countries.

We have already found activity among air observer corps of this Island, and there is no doubt that this corps is well organized and an active body of people. Their work is essential and important.

Secrecy

One great failing among all civilians, and I am very very sorry to say, among service personnel too, is the tendency to show that they know a little more than the other fellow. This tendency often results in matters which should be secret being noised abroad. Very often this indiscretion is carried to the newspapers and the radio. With regard to secrecy, even small things are important to the enemy. It may appear unimportant that you tell the time somebody left on a train, or when you say that you know somebody is in a certain place and to the ordinary individual this may convey very little real information. To the trained spy, however, that one thing fits in with another, and trained intelligence personnel will build a true case from several apparently trivial clues. This is particularly dangerous when it concerns the movements of ships, aircraft, or troops, and there is no doubt whatever that some of the disasters in the Atlantic Ocean last winter were caused by careless speaking by people on both sides of the Atlantic. In my own experience I have seen two cases where evidence went to show that ships were lost directly through individuals speaking when they should not have spoken. In one case the result was the loss of a troopship, and the men who were lost in it were the very men to whom the careless talk was traced. Never repeat service matters or reports of movements of troops, ships, or aircraft, to anybody, and stop those people whom you hear talking about these things. They are helping the enemy, though perhaps unintentionally.

Cheerful Disposition

In spite of all this advice, it is the duty of every citizen to show a cheerful disposition. Even when things look their worst, a smile and joke will help things on their way, and encourage the other fellow to stand up and take it. The tendency of many of us to feel extremely elated when the war is going in our favour, and immediately terribly depressed when something seems to be wrong, is bad. When things look their worst, that is when we need to be most cheerful. When things are at their best, they will take care of themselves. All people—all of us—should endeavour at least to appear to take an optimistic view of life, and to do our utmost to convince ourselves and everybody else, even when disaster appears, that victory is certain anyway. Nobody is beaten until they say they are beaten, and we have not said that we are beaten, and we do not intend to say that we are beaten, and therefore we have no reason to be anything but cheerful, and we should keep other people too.

Lundby when she plied the Pacific before the war. She was 357 feet long of 6,850 tons dead weight and was built in 1926.

The text of the State Department announcement follows:—

"The State Department has been informed by the navy department that the United States Government-owned S. S. Pink Star was sunk on Sept. 19 at latitude 61 degrees, 36 minutes north, longitude 35 degrees, 07 minutes west. She sailed from New York Sept. 3 with a general cargo. The reported position at which the Pink Star sunk is approximately 45 miles northwest of the position of the Sessa sinking.

"The nationalities of the crew of 34 are as follows:—

"One Danish, six British, eight Canadian, three Belgian, eight Dutch, one Polish, one French, one Portuguese one Irish, three Chinese, one Ecuadorian.

"The Pink Star (ex Danish ship Lundby) was requisitioned by the United States Maritime Commission on July 12, 1941 and placed under Panamanian registry. She was chartered by the Maritime Commission to the United States lines. The vessel was built in 1926 and was of 6,850 tons dead weight."

She is at least the fifth American-owned merchant ship to be sunk since the war began.

Now they are hurrying to develop it in the least possible time. More than 20 officers have been trained by experienced glider pilots in the art of flying without a prop— and it is an art—and more are going to school every month. The army has ordered an undisclosed number of motorless planes.

Maj.-Gen. H. H. Arnold, former chief of the air corps said recently the army will "have a glider force second to none and we will have it when we need it."

QUEEN'S CANADIAN FUND DONATIONS

$1,018.39 Received From Proceeds Of Bristol Celebration.

Repeated bombing raids on British port areas and the industrial midlands has attracted fresh attention to the frightful suffering of the many thousands of civilians in Great Britain who are harried from shelter to shelter and finally driven into the open country by successive raids. Eventually places are found for them all, places of relative security, but their belongings of all kinds are destroyed. The task of emergency feeding alone is difficult. The task of setting them up once more with some quantity of clothing and bedding is much more difficult.

To meet these enormous needs, funds have been started in various parts of the world. Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth has permitted the use of her name in connection with the Dominion campaign, which is officially known as "The Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims."

Every dollar contributed to the Queen's Canadian Fund goes without deduction to the Lord Mayor of London for distribution to the homeless and needy.

Contributions from this Province should be forwarded to the Royal Trust Company, Charlottetown, which reports the following receipts to date:

Received yesterday:—
Carry on Canada Corps, proceeds of Bristol Celebration, earmarked for bomb victims of Bristol, England, $1,018.39.
Previously acknowledged $3,384.57.
TOTAL—$4,402.96.

thrown the Germans back to within 7 1-2 miles of Smolensk.

The Red air force was pictured as supreme over the central sector, and the morning communique said 100 Nazi planes were destroyed Saturday compared to Red losses of 21.

Leningrad's defenders were exhorted to "win or die" in the violent struggle raging about that second largest Russian city.

"Win or die—there is no other choice,' workers of the great Putilov armament plant appealed in an open letter to the Soviet forces fighting at the edge of the city.

"Win or die: this is the law of the Soviet fighter; this is the slogan for the entire Soviet nation; let us give our holy oath we will not lay down our arms until we bury all the Fascist beasts.'

With Kiev captured, only Leningrad and Odessa of Russias greatest cities remaind under Nazi siege. From the Black Sea port, too, heavy Nazi assaults were said to have failed to budge Odessa's defenders.

A new edict further strengthened Moscow for resistance, its city council forbidding the return of evacuees who left after the war began [illegible] that those who do be denied food ration cards.
