track method of deep pitches and slues so fierce that it is almost continually a heavy side draft. So for his benefit we should have the change. He says "why don't we get out and fill the pitches and slues if we are not satisfied." I say that would encourage him in his laziness, while he is gaping out of the windows at either side of the house to see if the mail driver has worked his way through, or the rest of the neighbors have the road broken on both sides of him. When he speaks of the side hitch I know he imagines the horses walking along the side of the sleigh. Now as he wrote a long letter and said nothing, I will drop him and say to Tapayer No. 1 another man of about the same calibre that says to Captain Craig that Mr. Tarbush advocates shifting the shaft to the right runner, I wish to say that is not true. I always advocated driving and turning to the right in passing, and in order to do so, must move the shafts to the left a few inches that the horses when driving single and meeting just steps over in opposite track, off runner only getting off the road, then each horse steps back in his own place. He also tries to make little of the Rev. Mr. McPherson, the Rev. Mr. Pothory and Capt. Craig. In my opinion either of these three gentlemen have forgotten more than Taxpayer No. 1 ever knew. I am, Sir, etc. S. F. TARBUSH.
