CARD

To the electors of Charlottetown
Ladies and Gentlemen;--

Haiving been urgently requested by a large number of influential taxpayers to offer as a canidate for the office of Mayor of Charlottetown, I have consented so do so.

I have served for the past six year as a City Councilor for Ward Five and for the last two years have been Chairman of the Finance Committee.

While heartily in accord with the civic improvement policy of the present council I believe in the exercise of all possible economy consistent with an efficient public service

If I have the honor of being elected I pledge myself to continue to devote as much of my time and attention as possible, to the cause of good civic government.

Thanking the citizens for the confidence reposed in me in the past and earnestly soliciting your support in the coming election, I remain.

Yours respectfully,
BENJAMIN ROGERS Jr.

Before His Honor

Why the Prisoner Was Discharged

The case of Basil Lapidus was the last on the docket. Magistrate Alexander Quade, already late for dinner, was about to postpone the hearing when his clerk whispered that the charge was wife-beating and disturbance. This intelligence made the judge settle back in his seat again. His honor took special delight in such cases; never in the whole history of his judicial career was a prisoner known to escape with less than the extreme penalty.

The present culprit was suffering from a cold. The judge was in a like predicament, and whenever the man in the dock cleared his throat, the judge's bronchial tubes began to tickle. This caused him to treasure up animosity against Lapidus before the hearing began.

The fact, too, that the judge's dinner was waiting made the clerk, who knew the judicial temperament, decide that the reprimand which always followed the imposition of the extreme penalty would be well worth hearing in this case.

Judge Quade's court was conducted on most informal lines. When the charge had been read and the plea entered, the magistrate called out:

"Mrs. Julia Lapidus, stand up and be sworn. You, too, Lapidus, get up and swear. Administer the oath, Mr. Clerk, and let's get the thing over. Now, Mrs. Lapidus, don't be afraid."

"O, judge," sighed the prosecuting witness, "I'm so frustrated. This is the first time I've ever been in court."

"You should have come here long ago. Does he abuse you much?"

"No, indeed; this is the first time he ever had a chance."

"Hum-m; sit down a minute. Well, Lapidus, what have you to say? Do you want to change your plea to 'guilty,' and save time?"

"He won't do it, your honor," exclaimed his wife. "He never would for me about the simplest things, even when I'd catch him in the act."

"Come, come," growled the magistrate, "make your confession."

The prisoner cleared his throat and began: "Last night I came home with my head tied up—been having a cold for two weeks—regular grip—ringing in the ears—pain in the head and neck—eyes running—also nose—tickling sensation—" He stopped to cough.

"Here, here," rubbing his eyes and nose, and coughing in unison with the prisoner, "I don't care about the symptoms. Go ahead."

"When I got home with my head all tied up she came out in the kitchen and said she had a caller in the parlor. I asked who he was, and instead of telling me, she went on about there being a monkey odor in the house. There's a young preacher at our church, and he's very high-church and monky and I thought at first that he was making a call, and that it was the odor of sanctity she was talking about."

The wagging jaws of Mrs. Lapidus grew articulate at this point and she sprang up.

"I didn't," she asserted. "I said I had supper in the parlor because there was a musty odor in the rest of the house."

"I don't care what led up to the disturbance," cried the magistrate, blackbrowed with wrath. "Tell me the specific act of ill-usage, and let me get this fellow sentenced and go home to dinner."

"O, I can do that all right," exclaimed the woman. "I'll never forget it as long as I live. Why, after he choked me into swallowing that dose I was so sure I'd die the next minute that I wrote to my sister to come see that my bones were laid to rest in some reputable charnel house."

The judge leaned over to his clerk and whispered:

"Perhaps I can hold this fellow for attempted murder. Just get a commitment blank ready and make the charge attempt to poison. Now, madam, go on."

"Ever since Basil's been sick, I've been depending on the neighbors for good, old-fashioned medicines to give him. Last night I had a pint of real good remedy I'd got from a woman who uses it for all her children, whether they're six feet or only a span long, and—"

Judge Quade held up his hand for silence. A strange emotion held him in thrall.

"Never mind that commitment," he said to his clerk. "Now, Lapidus, my man, you finish the story."

"There's not much to tell. For two weeks the neighbors have been dosing me with every known kind of root, herb, bark and berry, boiled, fried and roasted; and when she had another brand ready for me last night I just took hold and made her swallow it herself. And my cold's been better ever since."

As one in a dream the judge took his overshoes from beneath his desk and put them on. "Court's adjourned," he said. "O, excuse me, Mr. Lapidus, I forgot you're discharged." And before the clerk could recover from his surprise the judge had departed.

Still in a maze, the magistrate ascended the steps of his home. His wife met him at the door.

"I'm so glad you've come," she cried. "I've just got in from the neighbor's across the street with another kind of cold remedy, and you must drink every drop of it before you sit down to dinner."

For a moment the judge's fingers twitched convulsively. Then he murmured:

"All right, Mary dear."

Had a Bad Cough For a Number of Years.

Was Afraid of Consumption.

Mrs. A. E. Brown, Ottawa, Ont., writes: "I have had a very bad cough every winter for a number of years which I was afraid would turn into consumption. I tried a great many remedies but only received temporary relief until I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after taking two bottles my cough was cured. I am never without a bottle of Norway Pine Syrup."

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that when a person catches cold it must be attended to immediately or serious results may follow.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the medicine you need. It strikes at the foundation of all throat and lung complaints, relieving or curing all Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Croup, Asthma, Sore Throat, etc., and preventing Pneumonia and Consumption.

So great has been the success of this wonderful remedy it is only natural that numerous persons have tried to imitate it.

Don't be imposed upon but insist on getting "Dr. Wood's."

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

JAPANESE CRITICISE ATTY. GENERAL KNOX

TOKIO, Jan. 13—The Entire press publishes editorials on the proposal of Mr. Knox, the American Secretary of State, for the neutralization of the Manchurian railways. It also publishes interviews on the subject with leading ex-officials and publicists, who uniformly resent the proposal. Some of them are sarcastic regarding America's untrained diplomatists bungling in the Far East, and suggests the reorganization of the American State Department.

Others take a more sober view of the matter and point out China's inability or unwillingness to borrow the necessary 1,000,000,000 yen, a loan the amount of which, it is declared, would imperil her finances. They contend that present conditions in Manchura do not violate open door equality.

They ask if Mr. Knox would consent to neutralize enterprises in the Philippines or if he would suggest neutralization of the German projects in the Chinese province of Shantung.

Any protest against conditions in Manchura should have been made at Portsmouth at the time of the negotiation of the Russo-Japanese peace they say, and intimate that it would not be wisdom on the part of the Powers to turn Manchuria into a second Balkans district.
