Australian War Budget

Lieut. G. M. Ingersoll, Charlottetown, recently graduated from School of Instructor A-2 C. A. T. C. Petawawa.

CANBERRA, Sept. 30 —(CP Cable)—A budget calling for total expenditure of £715,000,000 ($2,574,000,000) in 1943-44, of which £570,000,000 ($2,052,000,000) is for war purposes, was introduced by Commonwealth Treasurer J. B. Chifley in the House of Representatives today.

The budget, which calls for spending half the national income on the war, covers the fiscal year starting last July 1.

In his speech, chiefly said more than 50 per cent of the Australian working population is under arms or engaged in war effort and declared taxation was as severe as that imposed in any allied country.

The budget is greater by £44,000,000 than that of 1942-43 but chiefly warned that the war expenditure estimate might fall short of needs and said nothing less than the utmost effort would suffice until victory was won.

Higher income tax rates approved last March are expected to provide the additional income. The budget contained no new taxes.

War costs last August were £47,000,000 ($169,200,000) compared with £20,000,000 in August, 1942 and only £11,000,000 in August, 1940.

One-sixth of Australia's total war expenditure in the present year will go in reciprocal aid to United States forces in the southwest Pacific area, including Australia, the Treasurer said. He said this reciprocal aid would amount to about £100,000,000 ($360,000,000).

Chifley said subscribers to one Australian loan last year totalled 50,000, a record for Australia, but he noted that Canada had obtained 2,000,000 subscribers to one loan, and said he would not be satisfied unless there were 750,000 subscribers to the new commonwealth £125,000,000 ($450,000,000) loan opening next week.

Referring to the government's intention to review Australia's war program, Chifley said it would not reduce the country's effort but would mean changes in the order of priorities.

U.S. Praise For Canada's Egg Powder

There's more to food than proteins, fats, minerals and vitamins—there's flavour. No matter how essential a food product may be, there's not much fun eating it unless it tastes good. The people of Britain get both healthful food and tasty food in the dried egg powder sent to them from Canada.

To find out how Canada is making egg powder with the flavour of fresh eggs, a group of United States scientists recently visited Ottawa. They talked with other scientists of the Dominion Department of Agriculture and National Research Council about the latest methods of converting eggs to powder, and one of the visitors stated "Canada is consistently turning out a better product than we are."

He credited improved scientific manufacturing methods for the high quality of Canadian egg powder, but said its superiority originally began with superior grading of the raw product, the egg itself. He explained, that in making a uniform product, Canadian egg powder manufacturers have a uniform raw product to start with.

A top quality egg grades A in Sydney, Nova Scotia, as it does in Victoria, British Columbia. Grade A eggs are worth a premium anywhere in the Dominion. They make better egg powder. They make more money for the poultrymen, too.

It all comes back to the farmer. When his hens lay top quality eggs the farmer enables the manufacturer to produce a top quality, finished product. By giving proper feed and care to his flock, the farmer is making possible enormous shipments to Britain of dried egg powder, the equivalent of nearly 60 million dozen fresh eggs in the last year and a half.

A recent census of Boy Scouts in Great Britain showed a membership increase of 21 per cent.

Scout Bernard Carr of Gateshead, England as a service to blind people in his city, constructs maps of the war fronts in Braille so that sightless people might follow the war news.

Believed to be the only Troops of blind Boy Scouts in the world, 15 sightless boys on the Island of Cyprus do regular scouting under a lady Scoutmaster. Several of the boys have gained their Swimmer's Badge, can strike a tent without help and can pitch a tent with very little help.

Boy Scouts of the 2nd Hamilton Troop believe in living in the outdoors. In the past 52 weeks they have spent 47 weekends at their campsite, including weekends when the temperature dropped as low as 25 degree below zero. Due to high water leaving their boathouse stranded, these Sea Scots had to swim out to get a boat when they planned a boating programme.

A former Canadian Scouts Troop Leader, now on active service in Africa wrote to his former Scoutmaster in Canada;" Thanks to Scouting the transformation over from civil life to army life was made without the usual discomfort most chaps experience. I have been in the army three years now and I still find my Scouting experience helps me out on many occasion."

When Boy Scouts of Melfort, Sask., had difficulty in building a swimming hole at their campsite, soldiers from nearby Army Basic Training Centre came to the rescue and built the dam for them. Lt. Col F. Thompson, Commandant of the centre considered it good training for the soldiers, and the Boy Scouts heartily agreed.

PARTRIDGE, TROUT BRING FINES

NORTH BAY, Ont. Oct. 1—(CP)—Ralph Day, former Mayor of Toronto, and Ronald McDonald, also of Toronto, were each fined $25 and costs when convicted here of unlawful possession of partridge and speckled trout during a closed season.

Rev. Dr. Bonnell Discusses Proposed Union of Churches

The following is from the New York Times of Sept. 27:

Divergent views on the proposed union between the Presbyterian and Protestant Episcopal Churches in the United States were voiced by two leading clergymen in sermons yesterday, though both agreed the time was not ripe for such a merger.

The Rev. Dr. Frederic S. Fleming, speaking at Trinity Episcopal Church, Broadway and Wall Street, where he is rector, condemned the proposal on the ground that it would destroy the tenets and institutions of the Anglican communion. Asserting that "unity cannot be manufactured," he declared that, when proponents of the plan "identify their activities as being God's action," they go "beyond the attitude of humility with which a devout believer seeks to know the mind and will of God."

CALL CHURCHES UNREADY

At the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. John Sutherland Bonnell, Moderator of the Presbytery of New York, announcing that he spoke only "as a pastor of a local church," asserted "the time is not ripe for an immediate union." He said neither church was ready for such a union, although he contended Presbyterian ministers were justified in believing "that their ministry is equally valid with any order in the Christain Church today."

He declared he was convinced that "if the Episcopal Church now, after having approached the Presbyterian Church on the subject of unity, were to shut the door in our faces peremptorily the result would be a decisive reverse to the cause be a Christian reunion throughout the world."

Dr. Bonnell said that when all attention is centered "on the subject of clerical orders and methods of church polity rather than on Jesus Christ our Lord, who is sole King and head of the Church, the result is disunity and the spirit of intolerance."

DEFENDS VALIDITY OF MINISTRY

Referring to the fact that the proposal "has come under heavy fire from a section of the Episcopal Church" which suggests "that the form of ministry of the Episcopal Church is the ministry with which our Lord and His apostles founded the Church," Dr Bonnell said;

"The obvious implication is that the Presbyterian ministry, not having historically conformed to the order of Bishops, priests and deacons, is therefore not valid—at least not 'Apostolic.'"

With this viewpoint, the doctor took issue, quoting the late Canon B. H. Streeter of Oxford University, whom he described as one of the "best minds in the Episcopal Church," to the effect that "In the 'Primitive Church' there was no single system on church order laid down by the apostles."

"He goes on to say,"Dr. Bonnell explained," that the view that one form of church order alone is primitive and possesses Apostolic precedent is an illusion. He finds three types of order in the Apostolic Church from the beginning the Independent, the Episcopal and the Presbyterian."
