WARSAW SAFE FOR PRESENT FROM THE BOLSHEVIKI

Poles Now Occupy Old Defensive Positions and Have Driven Reds From Vantage Points. Result Now Depends on Bolsheviki Supplies of Ammunition.

(Special to The Guardian.) LONDON, August 19.—Whether defense of Warsaw can be continued successfully now depends entirely upon the amount and effectiveness of Bolsheviki artillery. In the opinion of experts of the British war office, the Poles have now re-established themselves in their old defensive positions. These are practically invulnerable insofar as infantry attacks are concerned. Only by the heaviest concentration of artillery and extravagant use of high explosives can the defenses be reduced. Bolsheviki forces before Warsaw number approximately 100,000 men. There are an equal number at other points on the Polish front but reports indicate that the Reds armies are poorly equipped. They are believed to be plentifully supplied with either heavy guns or ammunition, and consequently, figuring that the fighting must be determined by infantry and light artillery, the advantage would appear to rest distinctly with the Poles.

Russians Likely to be Defeated PARIS, August 19.—The Russian army will be completely defeated if the Poles can maintain their counter offensive three days longer according to official advice received by the French foreign office from Warsaw today. The military situation was described as continuing most favorably and it was declared that the Bolsheviki fighting north of Warsaw is in particular danger of being utterly crushed.

WARSAW, August 19.—A Polish official communication today reported continued successes against the Russians and referred to Polish women troops fighting in the line. The Bolsheviki are retreating in panic from the line of the Vistula northward, the statements said.

Too Much Picnicing Says Labor M. P. P.

DeBlois Brothers Contribute $100 Towards Fund for Widow and Children of Captain William McRae Who Sacrificed His Life in Trying to Save That of Another.

The Guardian heartily commends the suggestions in the following letter and will cheerfully receive and acknowledge any contributions for this worthy object. In reading your splendid and timely editorial in this morning's issue entitled "The Greater Love," the thought occurred to me that surely there could be no better way of giving expression to our deep and sincere appreciation of the unselfish and heroic deed of the late Capt. William McRae, than by making a contribution to his wife and children. I would therefore suggest that you open the columns of your esteemed paper for a subscription list, and I am confident that the community will respond in their usual generous manner. Let us remember that "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this,—to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction." On behalf of our firm I have pleasure in enclosing a cheque for one hundred dollars. Yours faithfully, GEO. D. DEBLOIS, Charlottetown, Aug. 18, 1920.

CONFERENCE OF NATIONALIST PARTY

Ontario Members form Central Organization. Provinces to be Organized.

(Special to The Guardian.) OTTAWA, Aug. 18.—A conference of Ontario National Liberal and Conservative members of the House of Commons and Senate was held in Ottawa, today dealing with questions of party organization. The immediate and primary object of the gathering was to arrange for a party convention in Ontario, this being the first step taken in an organization programme for the new National Party, which, broadly speaking will probably embrace the following: PROGRAMME. 1.—The appointment of a national chairman or organizer, with headquarters in the capital, and responsible for the organization of the party's forces throughout the Dominion. 2.—The appointment of a director of publicity and propaganda, whose duty it will be to keep the country informed of the activities of the ministry and of the achievements of the National Party in the public's behalf. 3.—The summoning of conventions in each of the provinces of the supporters of the new party, with the object of building up provincial and local organizations to work in co-operation with and as branches of the national organization office to be established in Ottawa. In other words, the aim of the new party is to construct, itself into an active political force, organized to combat all hostile influences, to keep the Government service party in constant and intimate touch with the electorate, and to overcome the propaganda of discontent which, during the past year or two, has made such headway throughout the country. The formation of a Union Government in 1917 was followed by the almost total abandonment of attempts to maintain a national party organization. With fair minds concentrated upon the war, or upon reconstruction, the members of the Government made practically no effort to keep touch in a political sense, with the country. Assailed on all sides and sometimes from within, it made little or no attempt to counteract antagonistic propaganda. The party, if such it could be called, maintained no bureau or publicity in the country, was not informed of the ministry's accomplishments; there was no propaganda of any kind, neither national nor provincial, and there was not even the cohesive influence of a common or definite domestic platform to hold Government supporters together. The result, as everyone is aware, was that the ministry suffered in popularity and strength. The ground so decisively won in 1917 was not consolidated, and the forces arrayed against Unionism, and all that it stood for, became more and more formidable with the passing of each day. It is to remedy the situation which thus arose that the new National Liberal and Conservative Party is launching upon a programme of organization and publicity. With a platform upon which all moderate men and women can stand, it believes that it is necessary to combat the forces of unrest, to bring the strength and to educate the electorate respecting its achievements, principles and aims. This, it is felt, can be most successfully done by the establishment of a national bureau of political information, by the creation of provincial committees and by a campaign of platform and press propaganda in support of the party's platform. Today's conference, the first direct step taken in this direction, will be followed by similar conferences in other provinces, at which strong organizations, created in every province in the Dominion, will be formed. The new party will alone remain content to defend itself. It will endeavor to take the offensive, to snatch the initiative as it were from its enemies, to war successfully upon evil and others who, taking advantage of the abnormal conditions of the war, have been promoting the unrest to promote their local selfishness.
