Reeves-Francis Wedding

A very pretty wedding took place in the Baptist Parsonage, Summerside, on Saturday, July 19, at 7 p.m., when Rev. Mr. Fraser united in marriage Miss Blanche Irene Reeves, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Reeves, Freetown, and Clifford W. Francis, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Francis, South Freetown. The bride looked charming in a floor-length gown of white satin, made in princess style with cap-effect veil, which fell gracefully from a wreath of orange blossoms and carried an arm bouquet of mixed flowers. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Roma Curley, who was dressed in a slipper-length gown of dual-tone tulle made on princess lines with hat and accessories to match. The groom was ably supported by his brother, Lorne Francis. Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom were escorted to the home of the bride's parents, where a wedding supper was served to a number of relatives. The house was beautifully decorated with summer flowers. The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake, surmounted with a miniature bride and groom. Later Mr. and Mrs. Francis left on a short motor trip. For traveling the bride wore a blue tailored suit with white hat and accessories to match.

Prior to her marriage a miscellaneous shower was tendered the bride at her home where many beautiful gifts were received, including a dinner and tea set of dishes and a lovely set of silver. The happy young couple will make their home in Freetown, attended by the good wishes of their many friends.

Claims Canada Deciding Factor In Winning War

OTTAWA, July 31.—(CP)—Fresh demands for a secret session of parliament at which unrevealed information could be given members were heard in the House today, but they met with no encouragement from Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Last Monday night, introducing war statements from key ministers, was prepared to consider requests for a secret session if members felt, after hearing the war reports, that certain matters should be gone into more fully.

An all-day debate on Canada's war effort, opened when the House resolved into committee on defence estimates this morning brought criticism, suggestions for betterment, and some praise as spokesmen for the reasons why members should be more fully.

Chief spokesman of the Conservative party was Hon. Grose Stirling (Con. Yale), a former defence minister, and Conservative Leader Hanson spoke briefly and declared new weapons and new ideas were necessary.

Pointed Questions

M. J. Caldwell (C.C.F. Rosemount) asked pointed questions on the extent to which Canada was working with the United States government on plans for a joint defence of North America, and on the Canadian government's attitude toward the United States.

Mr. Caldwell said that these questions which might be considered delicate in an open session of parliament, were asked in a secret session. He said that the reasons why he has suggested on several occasions that a closed session be held in order that matters such as these might be discussed without the fear of giving away secrets or doing any harm to the common cause.

It was impossible to answer that question in an open session of parliament, he said, in a secret session, Mr. King interposed. The same reason would govern in both cases.

When Mr. Caldwell charged the government was helping Japan to arm against Great Britain, the Prime Minister declared every effort was being made to prevent Canadian war materials going to Japan.

Seerless Charge

"Less than a month ago the government allowed the Granby mine to renew a three-year contract for its entire output to interests who are arming Japan," Mr. Caldwell declared.

Rodney Adamson (Con. York West) urged the government to set up a Commons committee, which would sit throughout the recess and hear representations on war problems.

Mr. Adamson said members of Parliament know less of what was going on than many officers and men of the services. Those sent to Parliament to formulate and direct Canada's war policies should be in the confidence of the government, he believed.

John Blackmore, leader of the New Democracy group, said nobody was more eager than his group that Canada should make the fullest possible contribution toward victory but he blamed the government for failing to take advantage of its power to create money.

London Mayor (L.A. Halifax) paid high tributes to the government's administration of the war in all phases. It was as efficient as could possibly be expected. He gave a picture of defence activities at Halifax.

Mr. Innes said 2,000 vessels sailed from Halifax in the navy prepared by the Royal Canadian Navy since the war started and only six met with mishap.

"The British Navy," Mr. Hanson interjected.

"The British Navy was there and credited to R.C.N.," Mr. Hanson said. "The Canadian Navy set up and handled the system under which convoy work was carried out."

Mr. Adamson said "the first battle in which Canada took part has been won. It was fought here on the floors of this House and the result is now before us. The attitude on the part of the government."

Mr. Adamson warned that both Germany and Japan viewed enviously Canada's great resources.

People of Canada were the "worst informed" of any people of the Empire so far as international affairs were concerned, said T. L. Church, (Con. Toronto-Broadview). He advocated abolition of press censorship.

Britain Making "Fullest Use" Of Canada's Plants

Additional Bases On Canada's Atlantic Seaboard Suggested In British Parliament.

(By Harold Fair, Canadian Press Staff Writer)
LONDON, July 31.—(CP Cable)—Viscount Caldecote, Dominions Secretary, told the Lords today that Britain is making the fullest use of Canada's capacity to produce war material, whether it be existing facilities or capacity that could come into production prior to January, 1942.

Answering Lord Barnby, who asked "how far the plans for war production in this country have been modified by the policy of increased war production in the Dominion of Canada," Lord Caldecote said a large part of Britain's orders were for specialized munition requirements. They involved an enormous capital outlay for new plant premises or upon adaptation of plant machinery.

Speaking for stimulation of Canadian industry, Lord Barnby said: "I have heard some criticism in the past of Canada's war effort, but it is certain that the United Kingdom made great calls at an earlier date on her productive capacity, these calls would have been answered and would have inspired Canadians to make still greater efforts."

Assisting Beaverbrook

He said the presence here of Chas. A. Banks, representing the Canadian Munitions Board, assured that "these problems will be properly solved," and that with J. P. Bickell, Canadian mining man, assisting Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, "these factories will go forward."

"The vigorous methods followed in Canada will, I believe, produce electrifying effects," Lord Barnby said. "Asserting that British factory location policy had been able to dislocate the United Kingdom's production of munitions, he declared that, instead of anchoring this large amount of capital to the soil of England, it might have been anchored to the soil of Canada and still under the British flag."

General Lafieche made this statement today on his return to the Dominion from Europe, where he served as military attaché to the Canadian Legation in Paris and as Canadian Liaison Officer with the French general staff. He was the last representative of an allied nation to leave the French high command before its capitulation to Germany.

Coming to Canada on the same ship with General Lafieche were a number of other persons who have seen service in the war. Two of his fellow-passengers were Canadian naval officers—Commander Wallace B. Creary, of the sunken destroyer Fraser, and Commander H. G. Dewille.

Has Terse Words

A French military officer, who declined to reveal his mission or his name, and Lieut. R. W. Winkler of the Royal Netherlands Navy, were other passengers. The French officer had only a few terse words to say.

"Where I am going, I would like to know what I came from," he said.

"If you have children in France, if you want to go on doing your bit, you had better not allow the Germans or the French government to know your name. That would be their aim."

The Netherlands officer said "the Dutch people are still full of fight and determination."

Hundreds of Children

Lord Marley, a Labor member of the House of Lords, was also on board. In addition to the many adults, the vessel carried hundreds of British children who have been sent by their parents to visit relatives and friends in Canada and the United States for the duration of the war.

After stopping here a few hours, the ship sailed on to another Canadian port, still carrying a majority of its passengers.

Lieut. Lafieche was one of the few to disembark here. He was met at the gangplank by his wife and five children.

Of Canada's national registration scheme, General Lafieche said "it is an excellent opportunity to organize the country."

"Of the conscription plan for home defence, he said: "These men will get collective training, and if the whole thing is properly carried out, it will be a very beneficial thing."

Canadians Housed In Stately Homes

By Edwin Johnson
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, July 31.—(CP)—When the boys come home from the war they will have plenty of stories to tell about Britain's stately homes and famous castles that have served as barracks or hospitals.

In extensive training or active service moves the 1st Canadian Division has covered a lot of territory and almost every unit has at one time been housed on some historic estate. It may have been the country residence of a well-to-do merchant, the mansion of a race-horse breeder or the turreted castle of a famous duke.

The latest prize hotel has been drawn by the divisional signaller, who are temporarily housed on a huge estate which in peacetime was cared for by a staff of 200 employees. On its well-groomed acres are thousands of rare trees and flowers which have brought sight-seers from all parts of the world.

Prize herds of cattle and sheep graze peacefully in fields skirting lakes and ponds, liberally stocked with a variety of fish.

The lucky signallers have been given the freedom of the grounds and have taken full advantage of the opportunity of fishing.

Since then the boys have enjoyed a breakfast of fresh fish almost every other day.

In paying tribute to the Dominions for their various contributions to the war effort, the minister said: "We have been deeply moved by the generous offers made by the Dominions for the children whom we may be able to remove from what I can almost describe as the field of battle."

"These offers are proofs of that wonderful open heartedness and will to help which has always characterized you and as soon as we can spare naval resources the children will be sent to accept your hospitality."
