becoming more and more valuable to their husbands. Such a wife studies her husband's likes and dislikes so that the longer she lives with him the better she knows how to keep him happy, contented and sure that he married the only woman in the world for him.

Such a wife certainly increases in value. But the dumb little girl who had nothing but the prettiness of youth to recommend her as a wife, and who thinks she can coast along on that prettiness all her life, certainly depreciates in value every year of her widowhood.

For as her beauty fades, her dumbness and inefficiency become less intolerable. Certainly that is depreciation.

Can I take a $1,200 depreciation on my wife again this year? A taxpayer innocently asked an official in Indiana. And the official had a good laugh over the husband's use of "depreciation" instead of "exemption."

But actually, maybe the man wasn't so ignorant. A wife either becomes more valuable to her husband every year—or she becomes less. She never stays the same.

Some wives work at the job of
