

The Ordinary Cough

All coughs are much the same in the incipient stage, but its hard to tell what they will develop into.

A cough at the beginning does not amount to much, it has to become more than an ordinary cough to have any special attention paid to it. That's just where mistakes are made; the time to stop a cough is when it begins. Always keep a bottle of in the house and doctor your cough at the start. It will cure at once.

NEW YORK MILLINER TALKS OF STYLES FOR NEXT SPRING

NEW YORK, Jan. 16—Take it from Chas. C. Korseman, who knows next spring your wife, sister or sweetheart will look this if she's up-to-date on style:—
She will wear a "corkscrew skirt" as it is called in Paris, having a tuile tunic constructed over spiral ribs, like an awning staircase. Her waist will be cut very, very low and will be precariously supported by narrow shoulder straps; her hair will be dyed brick red—red brick; she will wear bright green hair combs; her hair will be banged and curled at the sides, like rams' horns. She will be hobbled and her skirt will be slashed and draped.
Korseman is a Fifth Avenue milliner and has proven one of the most reliable forecasters. He returned home from Paris, where he found the styles described to be the latest rage. Paris sets the styles here, he has found.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN RETIRES

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain has not been prominent in public life for the past half dozen years. He has been partially laid aside through paralysis but his mind retains much of its old vigor and keenness enabling him to continue to follow public affairs with his wonted interest and enthusiasm, though unable to take any active part in them. He has held his seat in the House of Commons as member for West Birmingham, but the last occasion he was present was when he signed the roll of members in 1911. It comes as no surprise that he will not seek reelection, but the intention nevertheless has occasioned widespread comment.

Mr. Chamberlain all his life has been somewhat of a political enigma. At present in England there is a growing clamor for a "business" Government, and if ever there were a man capable of forming and carrying on such a government he was to be found in this "business man from Birmingham" to quote Dr. MacPhail. All his life he has been above party. If what he conceived to be the practical, business course to pursue was not endorsed by his party—then so much the worse for the party—the bonds must be broken. He broke away from the old Whig Party in Birmingham forming and dominating for many years the Radical Association—a name rarely heard in politics now-a-days. When that Association failed to live up to his ideals in secular education, he promptly established the National Education League, continuing to dominate Birmingham's public life.

In 1880 Mr. Chamberlain joined Mr. Gladstone's Government and speedily became the C. O. M.'s, first Lieutenant. Five years later he threw in his lot with Mr. John Bright, the People's Tribune in breaking with his old chief over Home Rule. Similarly in 1903 when he formulated his Tariff Reform Policy he resigned from the Colonial Secretaryship in the Unionist Government rather than embarrass his colleagues who did not see eye to eye with him. He preferred to carry on an educative propaganda untrammelled by Party ties, and this he did most effectively until struck down two years later by paralysis. The Tariff Reform agitation has never recovered from the setback it then received, for there has been no outstanding personality among his followers with the necessary dynamic force to step into his shoes. The movement still languishes, but the time is bound to come as Mr. Asquith acknowledged the other day, when the rate of public expenditure will demand new sources of revenue, and then Tariff Reform though probably under some other name, will provide the means.

Perhaps the most touching thing about the political career of Mr. Chamberlain has been his devotion to the interests of Birmingham and its loyalty to him. A correspondent of the Toronto Star referring to this says:—
"Birmingham has known Mr. Chamberlain as Sunday school teacher, Mayor, Socialist, Liberal, and Tory. And whatever he has been, it has always believed in him. To-day, in his retirement, it is still, as ever, 'true to Joe.' Still, as always, he is Birmingham's most interesting figure. He has been practically out of public life for nearly eight years. But the Birmingham newspapers during all that time have had something to say of him almost daily—anything that will bring his name into the news. Quite recently Sir Edward Carson stayed with him at Fighbury, and found his interest in the Ulster position as eager as ever. It might be mentioned, as showing that, although incapacitated from appearing in public, his general health is not so impaired as is often thought, that on that occasion he not only entertained a large party at dinner, but also supped with Sir Edward Carson at midnight after the latter's return from a big meeting which he addressed in the city.

It is not often that a city is represented at the same time by two men so eminent as John Bright and Joseph Chamberlain. Alike as Liberals and as Unionists, the men of Birmingham were touchingly loyal to both. But while they admired Bright they have always loved Chamberlain as one of themselves."

PLAY THE GAME

Canada's national game, for as such Hockey may be called without fear of question, is now in full swing in every city, town and hamlet in the country and already many a budding hockeyist may be seen in the streets bearing upon his face the "honorable scars of battle." A disfigurement of this kind, provided it can be shown that it was inflicted during a game, is displayed rather than hidden, indeed many of them are bandaged to an extent not in strict keeping with surgical requirements, and the wearer thereof goeth about the street bandaged and all, and unabashed.

An honorable scar, that is, a scar won in an honorable cause, is something of which the owner needs not feel ashamed. Many an empty sleeve and many a wooden leg has been pointed out as the cost of liberty or the foundation of an empire—and alas, also, many have been pointed out with equal appropriateness, as the cost of egregious folly, or as the contribution of the proprietor to a lost cause. And so, scars may differ "as one star differeth from another in glory."

Hockey is a manly game, developing muscle and brain and brawn. It trains foot and hand and eye to quickness; it accustoms its devotee to hard knocks and endurance, thereby the better fitting him for the battle of life, in which hard knocks are dispensed without seeking and where endurance means life, and the want of it means death and defeat. And, therefore, hockey is worth encouraging and patronizing.

But hockey is a game. As a game it must be played in accordance with the rules of the game. The object is not to win but to play the game fairly, with all one's strength and skill and endurance, to outclass the strength and the skill and the endurance of the competitors. This accomplished, a victory is gained and the silver cup so won will be something to be proud of and to be handed along to future generations as a family heirloom.

When at the end of a game, the score stands in favor of the team who, collectively or individually, won their goals through unfair means who violated the rules while the umpires back was turned and to whom, accordingly, the victory is credited, it is a defeat and the silver cup so won is a thing to be ashamed of, to be hidden away from the children, to be withheld from posterity. And many such defeats are recorded as victories.

As already intimated, hockey is a means of training for the battle of life, one of many means, for this battle, also, requires skill and strength and endurance. And as the game is played the battle will be fought.

In this battle, as in the game, too often the object is simply to win, to win anyway; if rules are in the way, to break them, if competitors are in the way, to drive over them. As in the game, the fans applaud the winning rather than the manner of playing, so in life's battle the emphasis is placed on the victory. Few questions are asked as to how one has succeeded; if, in the quest of his life's real reward—which is usually cold cash—he has broken the rules, has ridden over his competitors it is forgotten in the great acclaim made over the fact that he "got there."

This is in accordance with a certain man's advice to his son, "Make money, my son, honestly if you can, but make it."

The battle and the game interact. The young hockeyists take note of the manner in which their elders are fighting the battle for which they themselves are in training. If to win be the only virtue, then will be fair or foul and the game will be played accordingly. As a result there are frequent scars, that should not be inflicted, frequent "accidents" that should not occur, frequent violations of rules that the fans should hiss rather than applaud. The young hockeyists, like many of their elders, play to the galleries. It is for the plaintiffs that many swift runs are made, that many goals are skillfully shot, and, unfortunately, that rules are often broken when the umpire's back is turned. When the plaintiffs are worthily bestowed, they are an inspiration to greater effort and better playing; when bestowed unworthily, when expressing approval of shady, though successful methods, they encourage shady conduct. And this analogy might, with much profit, be carried into the larger field where men fight out the battle of life. This field, also, has its audience and the men keep their eye on the gallery. If the gallery were true to its better self and hissed instead of applauding, the battlefield would show a better type of manhood and the world would be more of a gentleman than it is.

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

The Hon. J. A. Mathieson, Premier, returns to Ottawa this morning, not having completed the purpose of his visit to the capital. Mrs. Mathieson has remained at Ottawa.

Hon. Charles Dalton has returned to the Island after an absence of several weeks. Mr. Dalton was in the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal where he underwent a successful operation and subsequently proceeded to Massachusetts to recuperate. He is now in excellent health and contemplates proceeding next month, together with Messrs. W. H. Aitken and Col. Davison, to attend the annual meeting of the Dominion Trust in Vancouver.

A QUESTION

Sir—Under the provisions of the Water Works Act a special tax has been imposed upon property to provide a sinking fund, with which to retire the original water debentures when matured. This debt to the amount of about $160,000 has now been liquidated, and reduction of interest charges to the extent of $7,800 must follow. The ordinary amount of interest, is now ample sufficient to meet any further calls for sinking fund purposes. There is danger that an attempt may be made to continue this special Water Tax and the funds diverted to ordinary civic purposes. This has been a custom with regard to special funds, which is too frequently taken advantage of for the purpose of securing extra revenues. It is unfair inasmuch as it is a second or double tax upon property for the one civic purpose, and the debentures being now retired, this tax dies a natural death.

It is now up to those aspiring after civic position to announce their policy upon this question. As this is a special tax upon property, the proposing voter should insist upon the candidate to meet any other than what is absolutely required for the special purpose named, and that not another dollar of these funds be applied outside of the expressed intention of the Water Works Act.

SUCCESSFUL EXHIBITOR AT POULTRY SHOW

Sir—As a visitor to the Amberst Fair a few weeks ago I was surprisingly interested in the large show of poultry, it being the largest show ever held in Eastern Canada. I took special notice of the large exhibit of Plymouth Rocks and learned that Mr. L. H. D. Foster, Marshfield, P. E. I., was one of the most successful exhibitors in this class. Mr. Foster told me that out of 13 competitors, Foster's Plymouth Rocks had won 17 awards at this show. He also told me that he had made several sales, amongst these being three splendid barred Plymouth Rock males to the Post-Office Department of the Experimental Station, Nappan, N. S. Following week I visited the P. E. I. Poultry Show at Charlottetown the largest and best show ever held on P. E. I. At this show Mr. Foster's Plymouth Rocks won 20 awards. Mr. Foster being asked why he did not show his stock in the utility classes at this show replied that for some reason unknown he was debarred from being an exhibitor in the utility classes. This was a surprise to this exhibitor who was a winner at the Amberst Fair of 1st and 2nd for best utility Plymouth Rock breeding pen, 2nd prize, best pair utility Cochenille, 4th best pair utility Pullette should be handed from showing at Charlottetown at the utility classes with his fellow farmers should be explained. Much credit is due Mr. Foster for his success at above fairs and may his incoming shows be even greater success.

HAPPENINGS OF THE WEEK

Winter has at last set in in earnest and for two days at least of the past week the mercury has hovered near enough to the cipher to forcibly remind one of the fact. The snowstorms of the early part of the week have enabled the young people to enjoy to the full the winter sports which every true Canadian so delights in, and many jolly toboggan and snowshoe parties have taken place during the fine afternoons and evenings of the latter part of the week.

An event which has cast a gloom over the festivities of the week was the unexpected announcement of the death, at Ottawa, of Hon. David Laird, a Canadian statesman whom Premier Edward Island is proud to claim as one of her sons. To the other members of the sorrowing family The Guardian extends its most sincere sympathy and that of the community at large.

Mrs. J. O. Hyndman entertained at one of the season's most enjoyable afternoon Bridges on Thursday afternoon last at her charmingly appointed residence, Longworth Avenue. Very handsome prizes were captured by Miss Alice Mackinnon, Mrs. J. S. Bagnall, Mrs. W. H. Aitken and Mrs. E. S. Blanchard. Mrs. F. W. Hyndman was the fortunate winner of a "lucky chair" prize. A few of the guests, who made up nine tables in all, were: Mrs. A. A. Alley, Mrs. W. E. Hyndman, Mrs. A. W. Hyndman, Mrs. C. H. B. Longworth, Mrs. A. W. Weeks, Mrs. W. S. Stewart, Mrs. Bentley, Mrs. H. W. Longworth, Mrs. C. J. Stewart, Mrs. Alex Mackinnon, Mrs. Chas. Leigh, Mrs. W. W. Clarke, Mrs. J. E. Grant, Mrs. W. H. Peacock, Miss Taylor, Mrs. A. G. Peake, Miss Bartlett, Miss Brown, Miss Gyp Longworth, Misses Jenkins, Miss Ross Longworth, Miss Janet Hegan and very many others.

On Tuesday afternoon last a meeting of the Shakespeare Class was held at the residence of Mrs. A. A. Alley and the following officers elected: Hon. President, Mrs. Alex Anderson; Acting President, Mrs. Rogers; Vice-Presidents, Mrs. E. S. Blanchard, Mrs. W. E. Hyndman, Miss Vere Hyndman, and Mrs. H. W. Longworth. The first meeting of the season is to be held at Government House when the play of Julius Caesar will be studied.

The afternoon Bridge Club met on Monday last at the residence of Mrs. J. S. Bagnall.

The evening Bridge Club met at the residence of Mrs. Alex Mackinnon on Tuesday last.

Mrs. Arthur Newbery entertained for young people on Friday evening last at a large and most enjoyable evening Bridge. Twelve tables of players and a number of supper guests made up the jolly party. Extremely attractive prizes were won by Miss Winnifred DeBlois, Miss Fannie Kemp, Mr. Gerald Fremmer and Mr. Walter Lentz. Among the many guests present were: Mrs. Frank Hearty, Mrs. W. H. Crosskill, Mrs. Alex Mackinnon, Miss Elaine Aitken, Miss Ruth Watson, Miss Janet Hearty, Mrs. Rose Longworth, Miss Kit Norton, Miss George Caruthers, Miss Lois Taylor, Miss Louise McCready, Miss Susie Crosskill, Miss Helen Wakeford, Miss Helen Grant, Miss Fannie Gill, Miss Alice Cox, Miss Nellie Gillespie, Miss Fannie Kemp, Miss Bertha Ferguson, Miss Miss Bagnall, Miss Ida Robertson, Miss Ernie Haszard, Mr. Alex Mackinnon, Mr. Sinclair, Mr. Able, Mr. Bob Cotton, Mr. Reg. Aitken, Mr. George DeBlois, Mr. Noel DeBlois, Mr. Golding, Mr. J. A. Bourke, Mr. Davison, Mr. Lyman Davison, Mr. Ken-Paton, Mr. Allan Hagan, Mr. Kemp, Mr. Stewart, Mr. Reid, and very many others.

Mrs. G. W. Wakeford entertained informally at Bridge on Tuesday evening last for Mrs. Ernest Lord, who is spending the winter months in Charlottetown.

Mrs. J. A. S. Bayer entertained at a small bridge party at her pretty home in Brighton on Thursday evening last when a most enjoyable time was spent by a number of ladies.

GOLD ENGAGED FOR PARIS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—Engagement of $2,000,000 gold for export to Paris, while not expected at this time, had little influence on stocks here today. Cash has been accumulating here rapidly of late, and the influx is expected to continue for some time. In the absence of any unusual developments the local money market is not likely to be affected by shipment abroad of a moderate amount of gold. The call money market was not influenced, renewals being made at 2 1/2.

The last previous engagement of gold for Paris was on July 16, closing a movement of $48,000,000 to France, and a total export movement of $65,000,000 to Europe and South America.

No Woman Reads Any "Ads" in the Morning Except Those Appearing in Her Morning Newspaper

She reads her morning news paper for THE NEWS—and to the woman who is managing her home as wisely as any man could manage his business, the ads in her morning paper constitute very real "news."

For they contain facts and suggestions WHICH SHE MAY PROFIT BY IN HER BUYING FOR THAT DAY. And these facts and suggestions are available to her BEFORE she does the day's buying. That is what gives to them their NEWS VALUE.

She might be entertained, if she had limitless leisure, by reading accounts of the shopping that was done in the stores yesterday, and the bargains secured by shoppers. But being of a practical turn of mind, she prefers to know ABOUT THE OPPORTUNITIES FOR BARGAIN-FINDING WHICH WILL BE OPEN TO HER TODAY when she visits the stores.

That is why advertising in a morning newspaper HAS REAL VALUE TO A HOUSEWIFE. It has present-moment value, not mere academic interest.
