light off Port Bickerton, Guysboro County.

Perils and hardships of a sea life were all a part of the day's work during Captain O'Hara's adventurous career. His wife figures largely in the record of courage and service established at the Port Bickerton light.

Outstanding in the assistance Captain O'Hara has rendered distressed shipping is the case of the steamer Sailor's Home. Attempting an entrance to Port Bickerton harbor during heavy weather last December, the ship struck a cliff 400 yards from the light.

Risking their lives, Captain O'Hara and his wife put out in a small boat brought the crew to shore, and cared for them until further help arrived.

During her 31 years of service at the light, Mrs. O'Hara has manned the row boat used chiefly for communicating with shore. Six years ago when Captain O'Hara failed to return from hunting on the mainland, it was his wife who found him helpless in a snow drift with a bullet wound in the leg. Sending her small daughter for medical aid, she was responsible for saving the life of the man who in turn has rescued many persons from death.

Life at the Port Bickerton light is rendered more difficult owing to the nature of the coast at that point. Landing at the light is dangerous, particularly at night and in winter.

Face Burned So Could Hardly Stand It. Healed by Cuticura.

"My skin has always bothered me from the first time I can remember. Every so often my face would break out in small pimples, and tere'd and were sore and itchy and disfigured my face. The irritation prevented me from sleeping.
"I tried other remedies but without any benefit. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they helped me, and after using three cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Edith Baldwin, Kingsland, Sask.

Other Days

by JEAN AUTUMN

In my boyhood in the 17th century, when I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, but when I became a man I put away my childish things. I was born on the Sherren homestead. A young child is the most helpless creature in the world. It knows nothing about itself or about its parents. It knows nobody; it can't help itself; its fingers are useless; its food has to be put in its mouth; it can't turn itself over on its side. My childhood home was in a low logged house 6 feet 4 ins. to ceiling, with one batten door and one window. The roof was six round pairs of poles for rafters, two slats cross-ways boarded up and down and battened with slabs; a stone chimney with an iron swing crane; it had two dog irons, a pair of tongs, a poker and a blacksmith shovel, all made by a blacksmith named Jackson, at Crapeaud Corner.

Mother had a bake pan for loaves with a wrought-iron cover. It had a rim all round it for holding on the fire coals well on baking days. Mother would send me to gather old hemlock bark to burn to make coals for the cover as we burned all soft wood. I used to gather old pitch pine to burn at nights for lights, and split them up into long splits to burn in the room of tall candles, and lay them on the chimney hearthstone. It would burn like a candle. Mother would sew and knit and read by it.

Crapaud imported no flour. We grew all our food. We lived on buckwheat flour and oatmeal and a little wheat flour, with plenty of potatoes and fish—herring, mackerel, lobster, trout, and smelts—and could fish on any day in the year without license. Mother made all our summer hats out of wheat straw and in the lumber woods we wore green-hide shoes sewed together with leather laces, homemade. They kept our feet very warm in frosty weather. We had no well, and I used to carry in cakes of snow and melt them in the big potato pot for mother on wash days. There was no clothes line in those days; she hung the baby's clothes on the garden bushes, and very often they blew away, and I was sent to hunt them up in the snow drifts.

In Crapeaud we had no wagons—all trucks; a few carts, and three or four gigs hung on wooden springs. Horses were very scarce—mostly oxen. I remember our first span of oxen, Buck and Bright. Father had an ox truck and one day he and I cleaned up a few bushels of oats that he threshed out with two sticks. He had a splint riddle, and we cleaned up twelve bushels of grain on a rug with the wind. He took the oxen and the oats and me down to Crapeaud wharf. I enjoyed my ride on the bags very much. Father walked by the oxen's heads, his hand on the yoke to steer them, with a birch switch in his hand, and he walked home again. It was my first ride.

My father was laid up one fall with rheumatic fever. The neighbors turned out and dug our potatoes and picked them. One man, out from Ireland, gave us one week's ploughing, and another man with his threshing machine threshed out all our grain without any pay.

Crapaud had lots of ploughing, frollics, stamping, mowing and wood frolics when I was a boy; and drinking whisky was the order of the day. Our brightest day in the year was Christmas Day. A good fat goose hung up by the neck before the chimney fire and a dish was set under it to catch the dripping fat. A big pum pudding dangled in the big pot. And there was a big jar-full of whisky, the very best made, to treat a friend from a friend.

(Concluding Installment: Our Mothers' way in the days of long ago.)

It is possible to fry bacon so that it will be very crispy, curly and dry. Have it sliced very thinly, then cook it very slowly in a heavy pan. Pour off the fat as it cooks out, and turn the bacon frequently.

The Children Catch Cold Easily

Mrs. Walter Miller, Notch Hill, B.C., writes:—
"The climate here in the winter time is very changeable, and the children catch cold very easily.
I have always found that a few doses of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will relieve them at once.
I have tried many other cough remedies, but now, I always insist on 'Dr. Wood's,' as I find it the most reliable, and the children like its pleasant taste."

How Electric Current Passes Through Metal

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 6—(By the Canadian Press)—Years of search and painstaking effort have brought Dr. J. C. McLennan, chairman of the department of physics and dean of the graduate school of the University of Toronto, to discovery of the thread which he claims will unravel the mystery that has been baffling scientists—how an electric current passes through metal. Dr. McLennan told McGill University scientists here he soon hoped to develop an alloy of metal which will be a perfect conductor of electricity.
In his laboratories at Toronto he said he had already produced an alloy which proved a perfect conductor at several degrees higher in temperature than pure metals such as lead or tin. He has combined several metals into an alloy fashioned in rings. He has sent an electrical current whirling around those rings for hours at a time, the flow in some experiments having measured up to 100 amperes.
